Democrats Torn Over NRA, House May Balk Senate

Richberg, Despite Lobby Charge, Caucuses With House Chiefs.

'Abolish Entirely,' Hoover Requests

Byrns and Taylor Feel Lower Branch Wants 2-Yr. Extension.

Behind the locked doors of a Capitol committee room, Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industry Recovery Board, and other NRA officials last night discussed with Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee their plan for a two-year extension of the recovery act.

While the discussion was going on, Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, was preparing a speech which he expects to deliver in the Senate today in which he expects to denounce "lobbying activities" of Administration representatives and what he termed the "brazen insolence" of Richberg.

Emerging from the committee room, the Democratic Representatives repeated their intention to insist upon a two-year extension of the act in face of the Senate resolution extending the measure only until April 1, 1936, and the warning of leading Democratic Senators that they would fight any other move.

Hearings Start Monday.

Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee said he expected hearings on the bill to start Monday and that he hoped it would be reported out before the end of the week. Richberg probably will be the first witness.

Besides Richberg, officials attending the meeting were W. Averill Harriman, executive officer of the NRA; James L. O'Neill, administrative control officer, and Joseph H. Choate, jr., head of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

Neither members of the committee nor NRA officials would discuss details of the meeting, but it was understood that they went over provisions of the proposed bill which, unlike the Senate resolution, will be a detailed rewriting of the NRA law. Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, and other Senate leaders have served notice that they will not agree to such a bill even going to conference if it is passed by the House.

Meanwhile, action of the Senate in passing the Clark extension resolution brought forth both denunciation and praise of the NRA from numerous sources. Herbert Hoover in an interview said that the NRA should be killed by the House. He declared that NRA is crushing the life out of small business.

Wagner Bill.

At the same time the Senate began consideration of the Wagner labor disputes bill, which would replace section 7(a) of the recovery act. Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, author of the measure, predicted its early passage.

Chairman Doughton, earlier in the day, said that he favored two-year extension of NRA, but added that "we don't want any bull-headed collision with the Senate." There was every indication last night, however, that such a "collision" is inevitable. It is expected that the full committee will meet today to formulate plans for hearings.

At the close of the Senate session yesterday Senator Clark served notice of his intention to speak today. Referring to Richberg's talk Tuesday to NRA employes, in which he called the Clark resolution "positive folly," Senator Clark said the

Aldrich Hits Banking Bill As 'Despotic'

Sweeping Changes in Eccles Proposal Urged by Head of Chase.

Too Much Power Vested in Federal Reserve Board, He Asserts.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Declaring that the Eccles banking bill would transform the Federal Reserve System into "an instrument of despotic authority," Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, yesterday urged the Glass banking and currency sub-committee to make sweeping changes in the pending measure.

In the sharpest attack yet made on the controversial Title II of the Eccles bill, Mr. Aldrich declared it is a measure "not of security, but of insecurity;" that it extends political control over the Nation's banking system, establishes machinery corresponding closely to that utilized at the time of the ruinous German and French inflation, and, most objectionable of all, places in the hands of five men virtually unlimited authority to control the economic life of the country.

Opposes Experiments.

Warning against further experimentation with credit and currency, Mr. Aldrich said three experiments tried in the last few years that had "misfired" were the Reserve System's open market operations, devaluation of the gold content of the dollar and the silver purchase program.

These three experiments, he asserted, had produced few or none of the results hoped for, "but they have left behind them a vast amount of explosive material which some future effort may set off." He added that "the potentialities are so vast and the restraints so few that should some one of their efforts succeed the result would most likely not be an isolated detonation, but a vicious and perhaps uncontrollable conflagration."

Mr. Aldrich's testimony was significant, not only because he spoke as the chairman of the largest bank in the United States, but because he also is chairman of a committee of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council, which drafted a report on the Eccles bill.

Although this report has not been made public, it was revealed that it is as critical as was Mr. Aldrich's testimony because the action of the committee was unanimous. It is understood that the 52 outstanding business and industrial leaders comprising the Business Advisory Council adopted the report of the Aldrich committee and forwarded it to the President.

This is one of the reports which President Roosevelt requested Henry P. Kendall, chairman of the Business Advisory Council, to take up with Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Reserve Board and Treasury officials before making it public. In view of what Mr. Aldrich said yesterday, there can be no doubt of the tenor of the report.

Mr. Aldrich, brother-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, jr., and known for his efforts to correct the evils and abuses in pre-depression bank-

Wets Amass a Lead of 8,135 As Georgia Votes on Repeal

Returns From 127 Counties Record 59,890 for Legal Beer and 45,860 Against; 69,460 Vote End of State's Bone-Dry Rule.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, May 15.—The lead of the repeal forces showed an increase as additional returns were received tonight from today's repeal referendum. At a tabulation shortly after 10 o'clock (Eastern standard time), out of 130,785 votes from all parts of the State, those in favor of repeal had rolled up 69,460, while those who were for retention of the bone-dry law had polled 61,325. This gave the wets a lead of 8,135.

At the same time the vote for the legalization of beer stood at 59,890 and against 45,860.

The vote for beer came from 127 counties, while the returns on repeal were participated in by all but ten of the 159 counties in the State.

The vote in favor of legalizing wine was 59,270 and against 46,153.

Atlanta, May 15.—Under sunny skies Georgia today voted for the first time on repeal of its 27-year-old prohibition law.

Heavy voting was reported from several of the larger cities, but there were indications that the clear weather would keep many farmers at their plows.

First returns came from St. Simons precinct, in a reputedly wet section of the State. There are only 81 registered voters in the precinct, and at the time the vote was announced 48 had voted, with only one vote for retention of the dry law.

The precinct is on one of the resort islands that dot coastal Georgia.

Prohibitionists, active since the Legislature provided for the referendum, had church bells tolled throughout the State, reminding their adherents to ballot. At Augusta, also claimed by the wets as a stronghold, prayer meetings were conducted by ministers at several polling places.

In Atlanta protests were made to Mayor James L. Key, supporter of repeal, against the ringing of the bells. He referred them to Chief of Police Sturdivant, who declined to interfere. "Vote for repeal and stop the bells," the chief advised.

The voters were deciding on three questions—outright repeal, legalization of beer and of wines. A majority vote would decide all issues, since it was a popular referendum.

In the case of repeal, the law provides that should the State vote

Beard Is Sent To Prison Here For 2-6 Years

11 Co-defendants Draw 1 to 3 Years; Freed on Bail Pending Appeal.

Sam Beard, burly reputed leader of Washington's gambling fraternity, yesterday was sentenced to serve from two to six years in prison by Justice Joseph W. Cox, sitting in District Criminal Court.

Justice Cox imposed the sentence immediately after he had denied a motion for a new trial for Beard and his 12 co-defendants, cogs in his complex betting world.

The jurist sentenced 11 of these men from one to three years. The thirteenth man, Joseph A. O'Callahan, who recently suffered a fractured ankle, was not in court. He will be sentenced as soon as he is able to appear.

Bail Plea Opposed.

No sooner had Justice Cox pronounced sentence than attorneys for Beard and his co-defendants moved to have the prisoners released on bail, pending the filing of an appeal. U. S. Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, appearing directly in the Beard case for the first time, bitterly opposed the move.

Defense Attorneys John Sirica, Martin O'Donoghue, jr., and Maurice McInerney were in court representing Beard and the others.

Justice Cox disregarded Garnett's

Works Board Today Allots First of Fund

$1,000,000,000 Worth of Projects Ready for Consideration.

All Homestead Activities Are Turned Over to Tugwell Division.

By Felix Bruner.

The $4,000,000,000 works relief program will get under way today with the first allotments of money by the advisory allotment board. When the board meets this afternoon at the White House it will have before it recommendations for nearly $1,000,000,000 in projects already surveyed and tentatively approved.

Allotments are expected to be made for a considerable number of these projects, all of them originating either in the PWA or in Federal departments. No applications for work proposed by States or municipalities since passage of the works bill are expected to be considered.

As another step in the preliminary organization program, President Roosevelt yesterday transferred from the Interior Department to the new rural resettlement division, headed by Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, all subsistence homestead activities. The order transferred all funds and all property held by Secretary Ickes in connection with the subsistence homesteads program.

Comptroller General McCarl has ruled that works money may not be used for subsistence homestead projects unless farming is involved. There has been some discussion of clarifying legislation to meet this objection.

It is expected that one of the first projects to receive consideration by the allotment board will be that of harnessing the tides of Passamaquoddy Bay in Maine. This proposal, for which $30,000,000 is being asked, has long been under consideration. The force of the tides will be used for producing electric power.

Plans have been made to announce the first allotments over a radio hookup on which Secretary Ickes, head of the allotment board; Hopkins and Frank C. Walker, head of the division of applications and information, will speak at 7:30 p. m.

Although the first allotments are expected today, a considerable amount of organization work remains to be done and officials in charge of the plans would not venture a prediction as to when men actually will be taken off relief rolls and put to work.

Wages a Problem.

Among the policies yet to be determined is that of wages to be paid workers. It is expected that these wages will vary in different localities, but will always be below prevailing scales. In one quarter it was reported that the country will be divided into districts for the purpose of fixing wage scales and that labor will be classified according to skill. It was said the wages will be approximately 30 per cent below those prevailing in private industry.

Walker announced yesterday that decentralization of the program will be effected not only by PWA but also by his division and by the progress division. Under this plan there will be set up in each State a miniature organization corresponding to that in Washington, with a representative of PWA, of the applications division and of the progress division. Thus projects originating in the States will have gone through checking and preliminary investigating stages before they reach Washington.

Walker emphasized that projects to receive consideration should be those that can be completed within 12 to 16 months, although he said there might be exceptions in cases of housing or other desirable undertakings that might take a longer time. In all his description of the program he emphasized the necessity for speedy action.

Walker said that undoubtedly some local projects will be constructed on a basis of loans and grants combined, although President Roosevelt has said that he hoped as many as possible would be based on direct loans. Walker said that projects will be considered

Hastings Terms Roosevelt Bully, Asks Farm Quiz

Seeks 'March' Inquiry

SENATOR HASTINGS.

President Lost His Head in Lashing Critics, Rep. Fish Says.

Senator Demands Mail About Rally

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The Capitol reverberated yesterday to charges and counter-charges growing out of the unprecedented farm march on Washington and President Roosevelt's denunciation of those who misrepresented the AAA as "liars."

With a bitterness that occasionally approached fury, Democrats in the Senate replied to a statement by Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, characterizing the President's speech as that of "the small town bully."

In the House, Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., Republican member from Mr. Roosevelt's home district, touched off another acrimonious debate when he declared that "the President lost his head—and that is the mildest term that can be applied."

In all, it was a hectic day for the 4,000 farm visitors, many of whom sat in the Capitol galleries, pleased but puzzled by the tumult their visit occasioned. Nightfall found most of them packing their bags for the return home.

Indorse AAA.

Before they left they indorsed the whole farm administration, including the pending amendments to the AAA, and made plans for the creation of a permanent organization to make known their wishes.

It was the President's address to the farmers the day before that prompted most of the Congress debate. For the first time since he entered the White House, as far as observers could recall, he used the word "lying" in a public speech.

"The President's speech," declared Hastings, "reminds me of the small-town bully, who boldly and courageously calls his opponents foul names when he has his own crowd about him to protect him."

Subsequently, the Delaware Republican presented a resolution calling on Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace "to furnish to the Senate any and all correspondence in his department touching on the gathering."

With alacrity, Democratic leaders pounced on these "insinuations" that the farm movement was subsidized by Washington in an effort to gain support for the farm program. The resolution will come up again today.

As the argument raged, other developments included:

A Department of Commerce announcement showing a further shrinkage in cotton exports. Figures for the last nine months revealed a drop to 3,896,000 from the 6,485,000 bales exported in the same period last year. The value of cotton exports declined from $355,778,000 to $265,709,000.

A petition asking the President to relieve the textile industry from the "extremely burdensome" cotton processing tax, signed by 71 members of Congress and presented at the White House by

France, Soviet To Urge Reich Enter in Pact

The Situation Abroad

Russia and France united in a drive to bring Germany and Poland into a general European security pact.

At Rome, the national press demanded Italian control of Ethiopia; England was reported ready to ignore Mussolini's "hands off" warning for the sake of peace.

At Berlin, the Italian-Ethiopian dispute was anticipated to be ammunition for a forthcoming Hitler speech on foreign policy.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 15.—France and Russia pooled their strength tonight to bring aloof Germany and Poland into a general pact of nonaggression to insure peace in Eastern Europe.

A joint communique issued at the close of conversations between Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, and Russian leaders which began Sunday, disclosed both governments would open diplomatic negotiations to bring the nations into the pact.

"The conclusion of a mutual assistance pact between the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and France," the communique asserted, "in no sense diminishes their interest in seeking without delay the realization of a regional pact in Eastern Europe which would join parties formerly taken into consideration in this regard in an agreement based on nonaggression and, after consultation, nonassistance to the aggressor."

To Maintain Defense.

The communique declared neither country will allow its "means of national defense to weaken in the slightest degree," although preservation of the peace is a primary duty of both countries.

Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, it said, "understands fully and approves" the French defense policy of keeping her armed forces at a level required for security.

Laval was to leave for Warsaw tonight after witnessing a military aerial parade in his honor today. He was the first foreigner ever admitted to the Monineo military airfield near Moscow. More than 100

Navy Blimp Torn, Landing Aid Hurt

K-1 Damaged in Lakehurst Training Flight.

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 15.—The Navy training blimp K-1 was damaged today as it landed on the Naval Air Station field here after a training flight. A member of the ground crew was slightly injured when knocked down by the ship.

Lieut. Comdr. Charles Rosendahl, commandant of the station, said only damage to blimp was a rip in fabric which could be repaired easily.

Rider May Let President Pick Plan on Bonus

Would Be Attached to Navy Bill If Patman Measure Fails.

By Robert C. Albright.

A compromise method of paying the bonus, giving the President himself a choice of means, will be proposed as a rider on the Naval appropriations bill, if the inflationary Patman plan fails of enactment.

Compromise talk was revived yesterday as Patman hopes waned in the Senate. The alternative proposal makes bonus cash payment mandatory, but would let the President finance it either through a bond issue, through issuance of currency, or through a $2,200,000,000 allocation from the $4,880,000,000 works fund.

The motion will be made by Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, who originally sponsored the Vinson bill in the Senate, but who swung to support of the Patman plan when his own measure failed.

Coincident with this maneuver, Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, called Patman plan generals to meet in executive conference at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Meantime, word that another bonus army is preparing to march on Washington was received here by Commander in Chief James E. Van Zandt, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who immediately expressed strong opposition to the movement.

Van Zandt made public a letter from Louis R. Mathews, of Portland, Oreg., stating that "the formation of the greatest move on Washington, D. C., of history has already begun" in the Oregon city, where the fateful bonus march of 1932 was organized.

Van Zandt wired Mathews that the Veterans of Foreign Wars "is opposed to any type of bonus march on Washington," he said.

Delay Near an End.

Senator Thomas will attempt to get agreement on a date for sending the Patman measure, already approved by House and Senate, to the White House.

The bill temporarily is being held up in the Senate on the Oklahoman's own motion to reconsider the 55-to-33 vote by which the Pat-

Unidentified Man Plunges to Death

An unidentified middle-aged man of dark complexion dived four stories to his death last night from the top of a building on the northwest corner of Thirteenth and E streets northwest.

Herbert F. McAllister, a taxi driver of 328 Eleventh street southeast, saw the man climb to the cornice, waver and plunge head first to the street. "He hit on the back of his head," McAllister said.

The man, shabbily dressed, was shoeless. Police found his shoes and coat in a sort of penthouse on the roof, covering the stairs which lead to the street. Apparently he had been living in this penthouse. A copy of a newspaper in Italian was found, as well as a number of local papers of recent date.

Three Filipino Officials Slain By Terrorists; Revolt Flares

By the Associated Press.

Manila, May 15. Three village officials and another person were shot to death today in what authorities called an outbreak of communistic terrorism in Laguna Province, scene of the bloodiest fighting in last week's revolt.

The trouble started, officers said, when a band of Communists, roaming the hills near the village of San Antonio, shot and killed one person. A group of officers went to investigate. Three of them were shot down—the acting village chief of police, the municipal vice president and a policeman.

News of the slayings reached here as the counting continued on yesterday' balloting, in which the Filipinos voted overwhelmingly to accept a commonwealth form of government for ten years pending complete independence.

Latest totals were 1,157,962 in favor of the commonwealth system and 39,920 against.

The constabulary, which had taken extraordinary precautions to preserve order during the voting, began a widespread search for the asserted communists. Authorities said the leader of the band was a man who had figured prominently in a cigar workers strike here last year during which four persons were killed.

On the heels of the new trouble, Quintin Parades, speaker of the insular House of Representatives, announced a legislative study of mass discontent evidenced by the preplebiscite Sakdalista uprising would be made.

The Sakdalistas opposed the commonwealth constitution on the ground such a government would perpetuate the power of Manuel Quezon, president of the insular Senate, whom they oppose. They advocate immediate and complete independence.

Paredes sailed today for Tokyo to meet Quezon, who is en route home after a trip to Washington. Quezon is the outstanding candidate for the commonwealth presidency. He said the insular Legislature would canvass the plebiscite vote on June 10 and authorize an election for president and vice president about September 30. The new government is expected to be set up late this year.

Peru Publisher And Wife Slain

Killer Tries Suicide After Double Assassination on Street of Lima.

By the Associated Press.

Lima, Peru, May 15—Antonio Miro Quesada, Peruvian press and political leader, and his wife, the former Maria Laos, were slain here today.

A young political fanatic shot and killed the couple as they walked toward the Club Nacional for luncheon.

The killer attempted suicide when he was arrested.

Police said the assailant was Carlos Stiers, 19. He shot Miro twice in the back and the publisher fell, bleeding.

Senora Miro Quesada turned and tried vainly to protect her husband with her body and two shots struck her.

Amid tremendous confusion, police arrested Stiers, who asked, as he was placed in an ambulance, "Is he dead?"

The bodies remained for a few minutes on the sidewalk and then were taken into the building of El Comercio, Peru's oldest newspaper, which Quesada published.

Johnson Chosen New Manager Of the Metropolitan Opera Co.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—Edward Johnson, Canadian-born tenor, was appointed general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company tonight.

Johnson, who has shared the assistant general managership with Edward Ziegler under an arrangement with the Juilliard Musical Foundation, succeeds the late Herbert Witherspoon.

Witherspoon died suddenly of heart disease Friday after only two months in the post that was held so long by Giulio Gatti-Casazza, the retired impresario.

Johnson, a member of the Metropolitan company for more than ten years, telegraphed his acceptance from Detroit, where he sang last night with Lucrezia Bori.

Ziegler, who has been with the "Met" almost 20 years, will continue as assistant general manager. It was understood the board of directors offered him the managership, but he declined it.

In announcing Johnson's appointment, the directors expressed hope the program mapped out for next season by Witherspoon would be carried out.

The new manager, a native of Guelph, Ontario, first achieved prominence as a star with La Scala Opera Co. in Milan in 1914. Three he created the role of Parsifal in Italian.

Returning to America in 1920, he sang with the Chicago Opera Co. two years and then joined the Metropolitan, with which he was particularly successful in tenor roles in "The King's Henchman" and "Peter Ibbetson."

Doctors Dash by Air to Alaska To Study New 'Flu' Epidemic

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, May 15.—Medical science's battle against the "flu" germ, cause of oft-recurring epidemics the world over, found a new field of action tonight at Point Barrow, Alacka—where a sudden scourge already has claimed at least 15 lives.

Sensing the "importance" of any new epidemic, two Philadelphia physicians, Dr. Horace Pettit and Dr. Sergeant Pepper, arranged to leave Newark, N. J., by plane late tonight in a dash calculated to take them to the ice-bound Arctic Coast in well under 100 hours.

By air to Seattle, by ship to Juneau, and again by air to Fairbanks and Point Barrow, the two University of Pennsylvania bacteriology experts will rush to the scene of the Arctic outbreak.

The epidemic there offers an unusual opportunity to gain valuable new information for that long-sought "cure," medical men here say. Disease epidemics among natives, unused to civilization's ways, are always apt to be particularly virulent. All but one of the Point Barrow dead were natives.

Dr. Henry W. Griest, heroic Presbyterian medical missionary, assisted only by one graduate nurse, has waged a fight against the more than 300 cases at Point Barrow.

Many of the cases have developed into pneumonia, he reported.

The Philadelphia physicians will seek blood serum from victims and convalescents of disease, to be kept alive in a traveling laboratory and to be rushed back to their laboratories for study.

Relief Situation In Illinois Near 'Danger Line'

Chicago Crowds Parade in Protest as Deadlock Grips Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., May 15.—The Illinois relief crisis moved a step closer to what officials called "the danger line" tonight as the State House of Representatives failed for the fourth time to adopt legislation designed to end the deadlock.

While more than 2,000 jobless persons protested the relief breakdown in a mass demonstration at Chicago, and crowds jammed the House galleries here, a roll call on the key measure was suspended when it became apparent the 102 votes necessary for emergency passage had not been mustered.

The unofficial count stood at 90 to 56 in favor of the bill to boost the sales tax from 2 to 3 per cent and thus provide $3,000,000 a month as the State's share of relief costs.

The vote dashed the hopes of Gov. Henry Horner and 1,200,000 relief clients for an early resumption of activities by the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, which ceased operations Saturday after it had been cut off the Federal allotment lists May 1 because the State had made no provision for raising its relief contribution.

Food Out This Week.

Taking cognizance of the fact the needy over most of the State would have no more food after this week, Mayor Edward Kelly of Chicago, and Patrick Nash, national Democratic committeeman from Illinois, planned to confer with the Governor, party chieftains and Administration leaders here tonight on the future legislative course.

Bitter debate again preceded the House vote. Representative Frank McCarthy, Republican, declared the Governor alone was responsible for the closing of the relief stations. He added:

"If the Governor is not impeached by the House he will be impeached by public sentiment."

Benjamin Adamowski, majority leader, rejoined:

"If operating the State at $20,000,000 less than was done by his Republican predecessor, if his support of a measure to feed the hungry—a measure which they say is sending him to political oblivion—if that is a crime, then he (Gov. Horner) should be impeached."

Corruption Charged.

Republicans asserted the sales tax was "accompanied by corruption," denounced the administration's "pressure" and suggested sufficient funds to meet the demand of "Dictator" Harry Hopkins could be raised without new taxes.

In Chicago's Grant Park, more than 2,000 persons waved banners demanding restoration of relief and listened to their orators condemn city, State and Federal officials. Almost 1,000 foot and mounted policemen kept them under surveillance. Later a delegation of six took their complaints to the city hall, where detectives and uniformed officers were stationed on every floor.

The assemblage chanted Communist songs, flaunted red flags and then disbanded on their leaders' advice to "go home and organize for further demonstrations."

Believed Drowned After Boat Capsizes

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

CHARTER members for Mr. Roosevelt's new "Liars Club" should come largely from the Democratic side of the Senate.

This organization springs from the remarks of President Roosevelt to the farmers' mass meeting in the White House back yard. He said a number of "high and mighty people" were "lying" about the Administration farm program.

Presumably the President would want to include, first of all, in his successor organization to Theodore Roosevelt's "Ananias Club," some of these Democratic Senators who have made no secret of their hostility to AAA: Glass and Byrd of Virginia, Tydings of Maryland, Bailey of North Carolina, Ellison Smith of South Carolina, George of Georgia, and Gore of Oklahoma.

They ought to make more satisfactory members of the "Liars Club" because being Democrats they can not possibly have any political motives in opposing the Administration measure. Republican opponents can be excused on the ground that their opposition is not sincere but is motivated by partisanship. But a Democrat who rises in opposition—about all you can do is either answer him or call him a liar.

After it gets going, the "Liars Club" may be expanded to include those who are "lying" about NRA. And if the rules are drawn properly by the membership committee even such Administration leaders as Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee, may qualify. Senators did not go on record in passing the Clark nine-month extension against the combined opposition of Mr. Roosevelt and Donald Richberg, who an hour or so before had addressed NRA employes saying the Clark resolution was "complete folly." But a good many of them were seen to open their mouths and shout in the affirmative on the voice vote.

* * * *

One significant thing about the NRA debate was that Democrats made no attempt to kill the Clark resolution by calling upon the members to stand by the President. Where there was not outright opposition to NRA there was evident apathy.

Huey Long blurted out the inside when he said he was voting for the nine-month extension, "not to help NRA, but because I think it dehorns and gums it up a little."

It was a sabotaging vote.

* * * *

Political parade: Mr. Roosevelt's talk to the farmers is regarded by those who heard it as probably the most effective cheer-jerker he ever delivered . . . He sent nearly 5,000 farmers back home as missionaries for 1936. Newsreels will show city audiences what the farmers think of him. The cheers were recorded on the sound strips . . . Later this summer Mr. Roosevelt will cross the continent, making several key speeches. His campaign already is on . . . And the long-delayed ballyhoo on the works program will open up today.

Republican National Chairman Fletcher chose to pass up answering the President's farm speech. Instead, the job was turned over to Senator Hastings, of the State of du Pont, who let Senator Connally put him in a hole before a gallery crowded with farmers. Hastings offered a resolution to investigate rumors that the Administration financed the farmers' march on Washington. Connally dragged in the story of how Hoover called out the Army to eject bonus marchers and said of course Hastings wouldn't approve of treating farm marchers that way. Connally also tried to trap Hastings into permitting an immediate vote on his resolution. but Republican Leader McNary came racing in from the cloakroom and in a fast, running, one-handed catch blocked the vote. Republicans expect to put a farm-belt Senator to work attacking the farm conference, hoping for better luck than they had yesterday.

Word from the Senate cloakroom is that chances are growing for Senator Dickinson's resolution to investigate the Administration publicity machine. Important Democratic support has developed . . . Hugh Johnson's Oklahoma senatorial boom has faded out. The idea has spread around the State that he isn't one of the President's advisers any more . . . Senators are weary and, so one leader says, are in a mood to roll through the whole White House "must list" as fast as possible and quit . . . Belief persists widely that the farm march was inspired by Agriculture Department people, but no one is able to find proof and AAA has a set of alibis to cover every contingency. The big mistake was in permitting so many county agents to attend.

George F. Getz, Republican national committee treasurer, holds two jobs given him by Democrats. Democratic Gov. Horner appointed him to the Illinois boxing commission and Democratic Mayor Kelly put him on the Chicago police board. He serves as a Republican. Democrats came under obligation to him when he raised Al Smith's Illinois money in 1928. He wishes he could do as well for the Republicans now. . . . Republican Chairman Fletcher will make a tour of the country after the Springfield Republican rally . . . His slogan is: "No slogans—just slugging."

When newspaper reporters trooped into the White House yesterday, prepared to ask Mr. Roosevelt about his farm speech, he greeted them by asking:

Lindbergh Relics Given to Society

Gift Revealed on Eve of Ocean Hop Anniversary.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 15.—On the eve of the eighth anniversary of his epochal New York-to-Paris solo flight today came announcement that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh had deeded to the Missouri Historical Society here his all but priceless collection of trophies.

The gifts, showered by the truckload during the world-wide adulation accorded the slim young aviator following his trans-Atlantic hop to fame, have been on continuous display here since June 25, 1927.

The collection, ranging from chewing tobacco to a $50,000 pair of sixteenth century silver globes, was first put on special exhibit in recognition of the efforts of business men here who raised $15,000 to finance the then obscure mail pilot in his daring flight.

Fifty thousand visitors filed by the relic-packed cases in the first ten days they were on view. Mrs. Nettie Beauregard, archivist and curator, today disclosed that the flier had deeded the exhibit to the historical society April 14, 1933, but had requested that no public announcement be made then.

Shot Ends Terrorism Of Huey Long Zealot

By the Associated Press.

Carthage, Tex., May 15.—The brief reign of terror of Henry Walton, a Negro, was ended by an officer's bullet today as he stood on the Sabine River bank shouting:

"Stay on your side of the Sabine—me and Huey Long is running this side."

Constable Jack Todd shot him through the heart.

For many days, Negroes on the east side of the Sabine River in Panola County have been absorbing "share-the-wealth plan," by which each hoped to own 40 acres and a mule. Literature on the plan has a vast circulation in the flatwoods section between the river and the Louisiana line, officers said.

726-Carat Jonkher Diamond Is Purchased by U. S. Dealer

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—Purchase of the 726-carat Jonkher diamond, which brought sudden wealth to an impoverished South African prospector when it was found in January, 1934, was announced today by Harry Winston, Fifth avenue gem dealer.

Winston, who said he paid "in excess of $700,000" for the gem, asserted it was the largest uncut diamond in the world. It is approximately the size of a hen's egg and if cut into one single stone, as Winston said he hoped it would be, it would weigh an estimated 425 carats.

"There are certain distinct commercial advantages in splitting this diamond, but I should prefer not to do so," he said. "I am reserving action pending decision by competing bidders for the stone as a whole and for sections of it."

Resale Sought.

Negotiations for resale of the gem, which now is in London, already are in progress with individuals and collections, Winston said, and inquiries have been received from countries as distant as India, China and Japan.

The dealer added that several wealthy American families were interested in the stone and said he would be "personally gratified" if it remained in this country, since it is the largest diamond ever to come into American hands.

Heretofore, outstanding stones discovered in the British mines have found their way to the crown jewels. These include the Cullinan diamond, the two largest sections of which are in the royal scepter and the British crown respectively.

Enriched Prospector.

The Jonkher diamond, however, turned up on private ground belonging to Jacobus Jonkher, 62-year-old farmer who was about to give up prospecting after 18 years of futile digging. He sold it to the Diamond Corporation at a reported price of £75,000.

Winston said the gem would remain in London another month or so, in connection with the royal silver jubilee.

"Jonkher" is regarded as a temporary name. Its permanent name probably will be decided by its first private, noncommercial owner.

Sanders Defies Louisiana 'Gag' To Test Decree

Tells Voters They Must Choose Between Long and Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., May 15.—Unmolested after defying martial law in Baton Rouge, Representative J. Y. Sanders, jr., of the Sixth District, headed back to Washington tonight after telling his constituents they must choose between Senator Huey P. Long and President Roosevelt in the State's next political fight.

Flaunting the martial law forbidding criticism of the militia or anyone in State authority, and then waiting for the National Guard to act "as it saw fit," Sanders, a militant leader of Long's Louisiana opposition, returned to the National Capital after no action was taken against him, he said.

Resolving to make a "test case" of a decree in effect since the militia took charge of East Baton Rouge Parish when Senator Long held his "murder plot" hearing January 25, Sanders denounced the martial law as a "seizure and usurpation of civil rights."

Long Assailed Over Radio.

He notified militiamen in charge at the East Baton Rouge Parish Courthouse that he was violating the martial law manifesto by continually criticizing the State's governmental rule and was "prepared to accept the consequences."

Sanders "took the air" last night in an address to blister Senator Long for his stand against the President and for his political policies.

Sanders met with his constituents later in an assembly for which no military permit was obtained, as required by martial law, and received their good wishes, he said.

Brig. Gen. Louis F. Guerre, in command of martial law troops, was out of the capital. He said Lieut. L. C. Cave would deal with the situation as he deemed best.

Fierce Election Forecast.

He left his followers with the pronouncement that the January, 1936, Louisiana State primary would be one of the fiercest in the State's history.

Sanders was told that a "Roosevelt Club" would be formed soon by nine elected anti-Long members of the East Baton Rouge Parish police jury, or governing council, and that the club would meet "regardless of martial law and without assembly permit."

Barbara Is Visitor In Favorite City

Countess and New Husband Withhold Plans.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, May 15.—Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow and her new husband, Count Court went visiting today in the city she "loves better than any other," without disclosing their destination or plans.

It was regarded as probable they would remain in the city overnight and head East tomorrow.

Reno, Nev., May 15.—There's a little matter of $2 for a marriage license still unpaid to Elwood H. Beemer, Washoe County clerk—but he isn't worrying.

He said today it was the license issued for the marriage of Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow and the former Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani. The Countess' attorney has promised to "take care" of it, Beemer confided.

Big French Ship Tied Up by Strike

U. S. Line May Get Second Vessel's Bookings.

By the United Press.

Le Havre, France, May 15.—The crews of the new French superliner Normandie and the steamer Champlain went on strike today. Both ships were tied up here. Two thousand seamen were involved. They demanded yearly salaries instead of trip-by-trip pay.

They called a mass meeting tonight and sent a delegation to Paris to lay their grievances before the ministry of marine.

Unless the strike is settled tomorrow, passengers booked on the Champlain probably will be transferred to the President Harding, of the United States Steamship Lines.

The Normandie, just completed, is scheduled to make its trans-Atlantic maiden voyage to New York on May 29.

Lawrence Still in Coma' Little Hope for His Life

Wool, Dorsetshire, England, May 15 (U.P.).—Col T. E. Lawrence still was unconscious tonight, 60 hours after a motorcycle accident near here in which he suffered a fractured skull, broken leg and other injuries.

A specialist said his injuries included "laceration of the brain." Attendants reported him to be "in a grave condition." Members of the family who flew to his bedside held little hope for his recovery, although his splendid physique gave the colonel a fighting chance.

Copious Rains Bring Rejoicing To Midwest Corn Belt Farmers

Railroads, Scenting Freight Revenues, Share Soil Tillers' Optimism.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 15.—Corn-belt farmers—their memories of the great 1934 drought just about washed away by copious rains—looked upon greener pastures today.

Nature's anachronism — April showers in May—nurtured the best small-grain prospects in years in many sections between the Great Lakes and western Nebraska.

The downpours mired roads, sent streams out of their banks in some areas and delayed corn planting from one to three weeks, but Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin and North and South Dakota crop observers joined in statements that conditions were much improved over last year, when the blighting aridity set in.

Railroads Happy, Too.

Western railroad officials, anticipating an expansion of freight revenues if the favorable weather continued, shared the soil tillers' optimism.

"Minnesota is off the map as a drought State and the farmers are feeling more optimistic than they have in several years," commented Paul Kirk, Federal crop statistician of that State. Pastures are 73 per cent of normal there, compared with 44 per cent in 1934. Winter wheat is 91 per cent, against 60 last year.

Iowa expects 5,760,000 bushels of winter wheat, compared with 2,750,000 a year ago. Wisconsin's winter wheat is 19 per cent of normal. Last year it was 60 plus. Illinois is placed at 87—nine points higher than the ten-year average. Nebraska's wheat production is estimated at more than double that of 1934.

Pasturage Helped.

While the heavy precipitation held back corn planting in most districts, it was regarded as a boon to hay, small grain and pastures. It aided fruits and checked chinch bugs. Maize seeding was scheduled to proceed apace under clearing skies.

Wisconsin authorities pointed to another factor in the transformation of corn-belt sentiment. They reminded farm prices were 7 per cent over pre-war ranges. They were 24 per cent below those levels last April.

Congress Passes Bill For Ickes After Loss

By the Associated Press.

Openly chuckling at Secretary Ickes' expressed "chagrin" over having lost a bill recently passed by Congress, the Senate and House yesterday good naturedly passed him a new one.

And hardly had the congressional laughter died when President Roosevelt, putting the climax on the almost unprecedented speed with which the action was carried out, signed the measure into law. The whole business required only a couple of hours.

The bill would permit Ketchikan, Alaska, to issue $1,000,000 in bonds for public works.

Back in 1921 the Navy Department lost a bill, the only other such loss in the memory of House veterans.

Bremer Kidnap Case May Reach Jury Today

St. Paul, May 15 (AP).—Picturing their clients as men innocently involved, defense attorneys today made their last stand against Government efforts to convict seven persons charged with conspiracy in the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker.

The month-old trial was expected to reach the jury tomorrow, with each defendant facing a possible sentence of one hour to life imprisonment.

House Votes $300,000 For Finland Consulate

By the United Press.

The House yesterday voted a $300,000 appropriation to build a home for its diplomatic and consular offices in Helsingfors, Finland.

Finland is the only nation that has paid its war debt to the United States on schedule. Members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee thought "it would be nice" to give some sort of recognition.

Present diplomatic quarters in Helsingfors are on the second floor of a frame building, over a drug store. Uncle Sam has to pay $12,000-a-year rent for them.

Defense Denied View of Letters In Lyddane Case

Pugh to Offer Ace Evidence to Grand Jurors on Monday.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, yesterday refused to disclose to defense counsel the contents of certain letters by which he expects to convince the county grand jury Monday that Mrs. Anne Lyddane, member of one of the county's leading families, plotted to have her husband killed.

"Only by an order from the circuit court," he said last night, will he give up the letters before he presents them in court.

Defense lawyers—State Senator Stedman Prescott, Kenneth Lyddane, cousin of the accused woman, and Robert B. Peter, jr., three of the county's most prominent attorneys—indicated they would seek such a court order, but indicated also that they would wait to see whether the grand jury indicts Mrs. Lyddane next week.

Pugh's refusal, climaxing another of the many legal skirmishes which have featured the case, came shortly after noon yesterday in a conference with defense counsel in his courthouse office.

Evidence Prepared.

All afternoon Pugh closeted himself in his office, preparing for the Monday jury sessions. He was preparing evidence not only for the Lyddane case, but also in connection with the Rockville bus crash of last month in which 14 Williamsport high school children were killed in a grade-crossing accident.

He took two hours off to attend the dinner of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department in the firehouse across the street, and then bright lights in his office showed that he was still working late into the night.

Pugh revealed yesterday that the telephone wires leading to his home had been tapped several weeks ago. He said the tapping was uncovered by agents of the telephone company and Detective Sergt. Theodore Volltem, head of the county criminal investigation bureau.

While confident that the tapping was the work of gangsters—or "newspapermen," he jokingly interpolated—Pugh said he could not tell what case the wire tappers were interested in.

Lawyers for Mrs. Lyddane were equally active yesterday.

Typewriter Held.

Confronted by Pugh's assertion that he could prove that Mrs. Lyddane "wrote certain documents to the co-conspirators in this case" on a Farmers Bank & Trust Co. typewriter he has impounded, defense counsel sought to reduce the value of this testimony.

Kenneth Lyddane said the defense planned to check a typewriter formerly owned by the Lincolnway Hotel, of Rockville, to which John (Googy) Carnell, former bartender at the hotel and now held as a co-conspirator with Mrs. Lyddane, might have had access. This typewriter is now in the possession of Frank Abbo, who used to own the hotel. The hotel itself was razed two weeks ago to make room for a new motion picture theater and drug store.

Gambling Raid Nets 14; 4 Held

Race Charts, Dice Cups and Table Found; Vice Squad Reports.

Fourteen men were arrested yesterday afternoon by Lieut. George Little's special vice squad when it raided an alleged gaming establishment in the 2400 block of Nichols avenue southeast. Ten of the prisoners later were released, while four were held for investigation.

The officers, led by Detective Sergt. George Deyoe, entered the one-story establishment, went through a cigar store and knocked on a barred door. It was opened by one of the men inside, who, police said, mistook their knocks for those of someone arriving to place a bet.

The four men held at headquarters gave their names as Claude P. Cool, 55, Fifth street southeast; William T. Dewdney, 40, of the 1600 block of Wisconsin avenue; William E. Larman, 38, of the 1800 block of Fourteenth street, and Gabora Shama, 75, proprietor of the cigar store. They will be charged with operating a gaming place, Sergt. Deyoe asserted. to end the 27-year-old dry law, each county also must hold a popular referendum later to decide whether it wants to remain dry or permit the sale of liquor.

Majority Vote Needed.

A majority vote for beer or wine would legalize their sale immediately.

Polls opened at various times since Eastern standard, Central standard and Central daylight time all are used in Georgia. For the most part, however, in the cities the polls opened at 7 a. m., and closed at 6 p. m., local time, and in the rural sections they opened at 7 a. m. and closed at 3 or 4 o'clock.

Atlanta, Savannah and Augusta—three of the reputedly strongholds of the wets—reported heavy voting. Light voting was reported from Moultrie, Thomasville and several other of the smaller cities.

objections to admitting the defendants to bail on the grounds that there was a "substantial question" unsettled in the case. He said that he was unable to see his way clear to commit Beard and the others, although Garnett predicted "they would be plying their trade" if they were released.

Beard and his colleagues were found guilty ten days ago on three charges—setting up a gaming table, providing a place in which a gaming table was set up and conspiring to violate the District's gambling laws.

The Government won its case in contending Beard and his associates maintained a sumptuous suite in the Mather Building from which they sent race track information to a score of places in different parts of the city, and in which they received bets, in effect making their establishment and the subsidiary ones "bookmaking" places.

Recent Supreme Court decisions made it impossible for him to act on the plea of the defendants that certain members of the jury were "coerced" or "intimidated" by catching a glimpse of a newspaper headline while on a bus ride, Justice Cox held, in passing sentence. He intimated that to reopen the case after a decision had been reached would be to invite disaster.

Angas Booms Boom As He Arrives in U. S.

By the United Press.

New York, May 15.—"The boom is here," said the British major economist who last summer from his London vantage point wrote "The Coming American Boom."

He is L. L. B. Angas, 42, who commanded a batallion in the English army at the age of 22, retired from business as a London stockbroker at 40 and promptly launched himself as an unorthodox economist. He came to America to watch the boom he predicted and to launch a new pamphlet, "The Boom Begins."

"Inflation is here," he said. "More inflation is inevitable and inflation is beginning to take hold. The result of this growing redundancy of money can spell only one thing—prosperity and a boom."

Fingerprints Yield No Clew In Bank Holdup

Prints on Deposit Slip at Riverdale Too Blurred for Identification.

Fingerprints found on papers handled by bandits who held up and robbed the Citizens' Bank of Riverdale, Md., Tuesday afternoon, have proved worthless, Prince Georges County police said yesterday.

Prints on a deposit slip allegedly made out by one of the bandits Monday when he deposited $2 under a fictitious name were indistinct, and the slip had been handled by several persons, they said.

Papers in which the gunmen had wrapped their rope and equipment before entering the bank were also examined for fingerprints, without avail. Sergt. Ralph Brown, Policemen Claude Reese, Albert Anderson, and Deputy Sheriff William Clifton, who obtained vague descriptions near the scene of the holdup, could trace nothing through criminal files in Washington.

Several persons reported they saw two men answering the description of the bandits riding in a large sedan in and around Riverdale about the time of the crime. But the reports differed as to the make of the car and the color of the license tags.

A checkup to determine how much the two daylight robbers obtained had not been completed last night, according to G. Sherman James, cashier. He said it would probably be about $3,500. The loss is covered by insurance.

The holdup occurred Tuesday as the bank was preparing to close.

Chain Store Taxation Faces Test in Court

Richberg to Be Attached as 'Impudent Lobbyist,' Clark Warns.

speech was "the most brazen exhibition of impudence on the part of a bureaucratic official which has fallen under my observation during my lifetime."

Calls Him Mussolini.

"I desire to address the Senate very briefly tomorrow," he said, "upon the subject of Mr. Donald R. Richberg and his ambition to be a Mussolini in the United States."

Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, declared:

"In my judgment NRA is on its way out and Donald R. Richberg is more responsible for its being on its way out than any man in the United States."

Representative Taylor, Colorado, acting Democratic floor leader, said that "in my opinion, the House will insist overwhelmingly on a two-year extension."

Byrns Also Firm.

"We are not delivering an ultimatum to the Senate, or anything of that sort," he said, "but I believe the House would take nothing before it would take the Senate's ten-months bill." Speaker Byrns agreed that the House would abide by the President's wishes for a two-year extension."

One of the subjects understood to have been discussed at the meeting of Democratic committee was a definition of intrastate business. The Senate resolution merely provides that NRA should not apply to intrastate business. Richberg is asking that interstate business be defined as "any business in interstate commerce or substantially affecting interstate commerce." This definition would give NRA wide powers of regulation.

Meanwhile, plans were going forward for a gathering of business representatives in Washington next Wednesday to insist upon a two-year extension. Ward Cheney, chairman of the industry and finance committee for NRA extension, announced a call for the meeting.

"Industry and business of the country are rolling into action against the Senate move," he said. He said behind the movement were business men operating 300,000 units and employing 5,000,000 workers. He said the meeting will be attended by delegates representing the consumers goods committee, headed by George A. Sloan.

He made public a long list of associations of small business men which, he said, are back of the move.

At the same time, Francis J. Gorman, first vice president of the United Textile Workers, addressed a letter to 900 city central labor organizations, asking them to rally in support of NRA extension. The America Federation of Labor also is backing the extension program.

Steel Men Ask Two Years.

From the business side came a statement from Thomas M. Gridler, chairman of the board of the Republic Steel Co., third largest steel manufacturer in the country, saying that NRA should be extended for two years.

"The outlook today is hopeful," he said. "It depends to a considerable degree on the fture of NRA and a sharp pick-up in the construction industries."

Friends of NRA extension are working against time and hoping that what appears to be a deadlock between Senate and House may be broken. Under the law, NRA, which includes the FACA, will expire one month from today.

U. S. Treasury Deficit Passes Three Billions

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury's deficit today passed $3,000,000,000.

A report of the Federal financial position showed that expenditures since the financial year began last July 1 were $6,232,109,989 on May 13. Receipts totaled $3,229,808,377. The difference, made up by borrowing, was $3,002,301,612.

The deficit on the same day a year ago was $3,587,054,135.

NRA Abolition Duty of House, Hoover States

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Palo Alto, Calif., May 15.—Former President Herbert Hoover said today that complete abolition of the NRA is "the one right answer" which the House of Representatives should make to the Senate's action extending its life.

"We do not construct new buildings on false foundations," he said in an interview, "and we can not build a nation's economy on a fundamental error."

The NRA has been crushing the life out of small business and "they are crushing the life out of the very heart of the local community body," he declared.

In response to a question as to what, in his opinion, Congress should do with regard to the NRA, the former President said:

"In reply to your question, the one right answer by the House of Representatives to the Senate's action extending the life of the NRA is to abolish it entirely.

"Present NRA proposals are as bad, in many ways, as the original with its continuation until the next Congress; and, with the Federal agents putting pressure on State Legislatures to get them to enact State laws in support of NRA, it is evident there has been no real retreat.

"This whole idea of ruling business through code authorities with delegated powers of law is un-American in principle and a proved failure in practice. The codes are retarding recovery. They are a cloak for conspiracy against the public interest. They are and will will continue to be a weapon of bureaucracy, a device for intimidation of decent citizens.

"To the customary answer of 'destructive criticism' or the other question, 'What substitute is offered?' I suggest that the only substitute for an action that rests on definite and proved economic error is to abandon it. We do not construct new buildings on false foundations, and we can not build a nation's economy on a fundamental error.

"The beneficent objectives of a greater social justice and the prevention of sweating, child labor and abuse in business practices should be and can be better attained by specific statutory law.

"There are already sufficient agencies of Government for full enforcement of the laws of the land. Where necessary those laws should be strengthened, but not replaced with personal government.

"The prevention of waste in mineral resources should be carried out by the States operating under Federally encouraged interstate compacts. That is an American method of eradicating economic abuses and wastes, as distinguished from Fascist regimentation.

Charges Coercion.

"The multitude of code administrators, agents or committees has spread into every hamlet, and, whether authorized or not, they have engaged in the coercion and intimidation of presumably free citizens.

"People have been sent to jail, but far more have been threatened with jail. Direct and indirect boycotts have been organized by the bureaucracy itself. Many are being used today. Claiming to curse immoral business practices, the codes have increased them a thousand fold through 'chiseling.'

"They have not protected legitimate business from unfair competition, but they have deprived the public of the benefits of fair competition.

"This whole NRA scheme has saddled the American people with the worst era of monopolies we have ever experienced. However monopoly is defined, its objective is to fix prices or to limit production or to stifle competition.

"Any one of those evils produces the other two, and it is no remedy to take part of them out. These have been the very aim of certain business elements ever since Queen Elizabeth. Most of the 700 NRA codes effect those very purposes.

"Exactly such schemes to avoid competition in business were rejected by my Administration because they are born from a desire to escape the anti-trust laws. If the anti-trust laws had not been effective in a major way, there would have been no such desire to escape them. If they do not meet modern conditions they should be openly amended, not circumvented.

"My investigations over the country show that the codes have increased costs of production and distribution, and therefore prices. Thus they have driven toward decreased consumption and increased unemployment. They have increased the cost of living and placed a heavier burden on the American farmer.

Sees Press Endangered.

"NRA has been crushing the life out of small business, and they are crushing the life out of the very heart of the local community body. There are 1,500,000 small businesses in this country, and our purpose should be to protect them.

"Publishers have had to resist arduously the encroachment of these NRA codes upon such fundamental, constitutionally guaranteed American liberties as free speech.

"The whole concept of NRA is rooted in a regimented 'economy of scarcity'—an idea that increased costs, restricted production and hampered enterprise will enrich a nation. The notion may enrich a few individuals and help a few businesses, but it will impoverish the Nation and undermine the principles of real social justice upon which this Nation was founded.

"If the NRA has increased employment, it is not apparent. If we subtract the persons temporarily employed by the coded industries as the direct result of the enormous Government expenditures, we find that the numbers being employed are not materially greater than when it was enacted.

Flays Ballyhoo.

"NRA's pretended promises to labor were intentionally vague and have never been clarified. They have only promoted conflict without establishing real rights.

"That original ballyhoo used to hypnotize and coerce the people into acquiescence is now gone. Most of the originally grandiose schemes now are conceded to be a violation of the spirit and the letter of the American Constitution.

"Some business interests already have established advantages out of the codes, and therefore seek the perpetuation of NRA. Even these interests should recognize that in the end they, themselves, will become either the pawns of a bureaucracy the American people do not want."

18,000 Return To Auto Jobs; Workers Cheer

General Motors Plant at Toledo Hums Again; Others Reopening.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 15.—Thousands of General Motors employes cheered as they returned to work today, the enforced furlough which cost them $2,000,000 in lost wages ended by settlement of the strike in the Chevrolet Motor Co. transmission plant at Toledo.

Approximately 18,000 of the 33,000 affected by closing of 20 Chevrolet and Fisher Body Co. plants in a dozen cities had been recalled, and company officials were hopeful the remainder could be returned to their posts within a week.

The two American Federation of Labor strikes in closed Cincinnati and Atlanta General Motors plants appeared to be nearing an end.

Francis J. Dillon, jr., A. F. L. organizer in the motorcar industry, has ordered the Cincinnati and Atlanta strikers to return to their benches when the plants are reopened, their demands to be arbitrated on the basis of the Toledo settlement.

Workmen Happy.

Bargaining terms reached at Toledo also will be the basis for negotiations by the A. F. of L. local in the Flint (Mich.) plan of the Buick Motor Co., leaders said, and the threatened strike there has been canceled.

The workmen on the day shift in the Toledo Chevrolet plant smiled and cheered as they reported for work. Some 2,300 men were recalled there, and more than 8,500 were returning to work with reopening of the big Fisher Body Co. plant in Cleveland.

Earlier in the week the St. Louis Chevrolet and Fisher plants, employing 4,200 men, and the Flint (Mich.) Fisher plant No. 2, employing 1,300 men, resumed operations.

Operations were speeded up and approximately two-thirds of the workmen recalled in the Tarrytown (N.Y.) Chevrolet and Fisher plants and the Bloomfield (N. J.) Chevrolet branch, which have been operating with curtailed forces to turn out Government orders. The Tarrytown plants employ 3,500 men and the Bloomfield plant 600.

Workmen in numerous plants supplying steel, glass and other materials to General Motors also were being recalled, but no estimates on the number involved were available here.

Kansas City, Fisher & Chevrolet	2,000
Baltimore, Fisher & Chevrolet	1,500
Janesville, Wis., Fisher & Chevrolet	2,400
Cincinnati, Fisher & Chevrolet	2,000
Atlanta, Fisher & Chevrolet	1,800
Buffalo, Fisher & Chevrolet	2,000

Mrs. Rogers' Case Ignored by Jury

Suicide Not at Fault in Crash, Body Decides.

Mrs. Mattie E. Rogers was not at fault in the automobile accident which cost the life of Mrs. Sarah Bowerman, the District grand jury has ruled, although Mrs. Rogers killed herself because of her grief over the crash.

The grand jury voted to ignore the case when it was presented to them. A coroner's jury held Mrs. Rogers for action of the grand jury. A few hours later she was found submerged in a bath tub. Ordinarily the case would not have been presented to the grand jury, but Maj. Wilbur Rogers, her husband, asked that the jury pass on it.

Funeral services for Mrs. Rogers will be held this morning at 10 o'clock in the Church of the Pilgrims. The Rev. Andrew R. Bird, pastor of the church, will conduct the services. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery in the plot of Maj. Otto M. Lawrence, Mrs. Rogers' first husband.

Commerce Department Cites Drop in Jobless

By the Associated Press.

Reports of "steady decreases" in unemployment were said by the Commerce Department yesterday to have been received from substantially all parts of the country last week.

It added, however, in its weekly summary, that "the figures in most cases were small and the better trend was accounted for largely by the demand for workers in seasonal occupations."

National Maritime Day Set.

President Roosevelt yesterday proclaimed May 22 as National Maritime Day, in commemoration of the sailing of the steamship Savannah from Savannah, Ga., on May 22, 1819, on the first successful transoceanic voyage under steam propulsion.

Hastings Hurls 'Bully' Charge At Roosevelt

Asserts "He Can't Take It."

Senator Hastings charged that "the President invites criticism and then shows he 'can't take it.'

"We who have criticized the New Deal were earlier called 'tories,' 'traitors,' 'whiners,' 'chiselers,' etc., but now we are called 'liars' and everybody understands just what that means, and it comes with little dignity from a man who holds the high position of President of the United States.

"But I want to say," he went on, "that if this term is to be applied to all those persons who have criticized the New Deal, we have developed the greatest crop of 'liars' within the last six months ever found in any country."

Lewis to the Defense.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, pink-whiskered party "whip," of Illinois, rushed to the defense of the President.

"I pay tribute to him," he declared, "for yielding to the popular impulse to call slanderers of the Government that which they are—liars."

Hastings returned to the attack with his resolution, which calls on Wallace to produce and "instructions" he may have issued to county agents in regard to the farm march, "the purpose of naving the said farmers come to Washington at this particular time," and any information with respect to the cost to the Federal Government, "directly or indirectly."

Asks Withdrawal.

"I have no knowledge," replied Hastings, "but I am satisfied the Administration in the past has used money appropriated for public purposes to spread the idea that the Administration was doing far more for the country than it actually is."

Standing in the Senate aisle, in his most polite speech, Lewis continued:

"If the able Senator has no knowledge on such a question, an intimation of that kind when properly read comes within the designation used by the President in his speech, which was a little less than the expression used by Horace Greeley to retort to similar intimations of slander—'You lie, you villain, you lie.'"

He called on Hastings to withdraw his resolution and "make amends" for his "affront" to the farmers.

Charges "Show."

Caustically, Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, joined the fray. Referring sarcastically to the "sublimated purity" of the Delaware Senator as chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, Connally asserted:

"These farmers are not here to demand favors as is usually the case where the Senator's constituents are concerned. The Senator isn't interested to know who pays the expenses of the Chamber of Commerce, the lobbyists and munitions makers who hang around the War and Navy departments."

Hastings replied that Connally was "putting on a show" for the Texas farmers in the gallery. Senator Matthew M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, interpolated, referring to the use of troops against the bonus army.

"The Senator from Texas ought to be glad the Senator for Delaware is not asking that the Army be called out to run the farmers out of town," he declared.

Feeling mounted when Senator Huey P. Long said he didn't mind "them bringing" farmers here.

Crossing the floor, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader, advanced to within 2 feet of the "Kingfish" and demanded:

"To whom does the Senator refer when he says 'brought?'"

"The railroads," Long replied.

"It's another implication that someone influenced them to come here," Robinson continued.

"No, it isn't," said Long, "and anyhow, who's giving anybody carte blanche around here to get up in my time and take charge of debate?"

Lists Ananias Club.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, asked for a vote on the Hastings resolution, but it went over when Senator Charles L. McNary, minority leader, objected.

In the House, Representative Fish began the furor by a speech in which he declared, "whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad." He added that the President's designation of AAA critics as "liars" creates a "New Deal Ananias Club, including Senators Glass, Byrd, Tydings, Bailey, George, Walsh, Gore, Copeland and Long, and Gov. Talmadge of Georgia, Bainbridge Colby, former Democratic Secretary of State; Alfred E. Smith, John W. Davis, Albert C. Ritchie, Newton D. Baker and, lastly, Father Coughlin."

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, Texas Democrat, drew shouts of "yippee, yippee" from farmers in the gallery when he replied that "political swiping and sniping ought to stop." Further cheers came from the Republican side when Representative Clare E. Hoffman, Michigan Republican, drew an admission from Blanton that the Democrats are not going to support Mr. Roosevelt on the bonus.

"Poor Fish," Says Daly.

Representative J. Burrwood Daly (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, gained the floor with:

"I've sat through Republican and Democratic Congresses, but this is the first time I've seen a 'Kingfish' at one end of the Capitol and a 'Poor Fish' at the other."

"Is the gentleman a member of the House?" Fish countered. "I've never seen him before."

Speaker Byrns replied that he was "a very distinguished" member of the House, whereupon Daly informed Fish that "if he stayed here instead of touring the country maligning the Chief Executive," Fish would know him.

At the Department of Agriculture, meantime, Secretary Wallace characterized charges that the AAA promoted the farm meeting as "Republican propaganda." AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis added that, on the contrary, instructions had gone out forbidding field agents to take any part.

"We did not discourage them," Davis went on, "but I didn't want our agents to take part."

"Why?"

"I anticipated the line of questioning now going on."

Dr. C. W. Warburton, director of the department's extension service, said he saw only two extension workers in the farm meeting, but that there probably were more. Reports that the farm movement was inspired by county farm agents, who receive part of their salary from the Government, have been widespread.

In addition to county agents, many AAA county committeemen also were in the farm audience. These men, who assist the AAA in handling the various crop reduction programs, receive $3 per diem when they serve, it was said.

The farmers themselves did least of the day's talking. The bulk of the visitors went sightseeing, while 35 of their leaders met under the chairmanship of "Cliff" H. Day, bronzed Texan, to draw up a program.

The group adopted a resolution praising Wallace, the AAA, and the processing tax. The group also decided that each of the State leaders was to bring about the selection of a State chairman for each commodity in the AAA program, and that these chairmen were to meet at some future time to co-ordinate their efforts. Ultimately, one leader said, a national chairman for each commodity group will be named to form "a sort of cabinet of agriculture."

"And if the occasion should arise," he said, "we'll all be back. No, that's wrong; ten times as many of us will be back."

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, May 15.—Gov. Talmadge of Georgia today said "the squealing and quivering of little pigs, the pitiful bleating of bloody little lambs and the bellowing of dying cattle was torturing Roosevelt's soul," when the President addressed a gathering of farmers in Washington yesterday.

Chicago, May 15 (AP).—The pilgrimage of farmers to the Nation's Capitol was viewed today by Earl C. Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association, as "a spontaneous outburst of real farm sentiment in favor of the triple A."

Asserting that the Illinois Agricultural Association and the American Farm Bureau Federation, of which Smith is a member of the board, participated in the preparation of pending amendments to the agricultural act, Smith said both organizations "are giving their unqualified support to their passage by this session of Congress."

Fleet's Planes Face Vital Test Of Pacific Rule

Greatest 'Air Show' at Sea to Be Staged as Rival Forces Clash.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Battleship Pennsylvania, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, May 15.—The greatest air show ever held in the Pacific will be staged within ten days.

The Navy is putting it on and 55,000 officers and men on six weeks' maneuvers are looking forward to it as a feature attraction of the great high-seas battle which will be the crisis of the maneuvers.

No one, not even Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander in chief of the 153 warships and 466 planes involved, knows just where and when the air spectacle will take place. However, it will be at least a thousand miles from Hawaii.

The show will be a decisive trial of the power of the greatest air force ever sent to sea to test what strategists say is the decisive element of naval action—control of the air in the Pacific.

The participants have made sensational flights in getting to the rendezvous. One group, under command of Vice Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, after traveling up the Pacific Coast, along Alaska's shore and out to the Aleutian Islands, is believed to be bearing southward aboard the "black fleet" ships. Hepburn's moves are cloaked with secrecy.

The other group is under command of Admiral Harris Laning, commander of the fleet's battle force. Its main body came to Hawaii Sunday, and since has been under radio silence, ready to dash to sea at a moment's notice. Admiral Reeves, as chief umpire, has veiled all moves of the "white fleet" in order to deny information to Hepburn.

LOWEST
COAL PRICES
In Sixteen Years

EFFECTIVE May 16, the freight to Washington on Anthracite coal (except Buckwheat and Rice sizes) will be reduced. This freight reduction, together with price reductions by the mines and our Company, bring coal prices to the lowest level they have been in sixteen years.

THESE drastic reductions have been made possible through the combined efforts of our Company and other Washington coal merchants who have worked for months to procure lower freight rates and lower prices at the mines so that the Spring reductions this year might be the greatest in coal history.

THE unusual price reductions have been made in a determined effort to stimulate the storing of coal now in order to relieve congestion at the mines in the Fall and Winter. Every coal user is urged to take advantage of the new low prices and store as much as possible of his next Winter's requirements.

THE prices in effect May 16 are the Spring prices and we believe these will be the lowest of the year. It is expected that prices will advance periodically during the Summer as in previous years.

Clark to Turn To Vinson Bill To Save Bonus

Plans Navy Measure Rider; Thomas May Agree to End Patman Delay.

man bill passed. That motion was made to gain time to muster full Patman strength in an effort to override a certain White House veto.

Indications were Thomas will withdraw his motion tomorrow, just before the Senate's week-end adjournment. This would forestall chance of a veto message reaching the Senate before next week—a delay for which the Patman forces are striving.

Robinson Carries Threat.

Disturbed at the unprecedented delay (an engrossed bill usually goes to the White House within 24 hours of passage), Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson yesterday sought Thomas out and told him if he doesn't dispose of his reconsideration motion, he, Robinson, may move to table it.

It was this admonition which led to yesterday's conference of Patman supporters. Thomas indicated a willingness to co-operate with Robinson, although he insists he has the necessary number of votes to defeat any tabling motion.

Final decision on strategy was delayed until the conference this afternoon. Friends of the Patman bill have contended they would be at a disadvantage if the President immediately vetoed the measure, because of gaps in their ranks caused by absences. Orginally they had agreed to release their bill last Tuesday but reversed this plan when a quick check showed they still lacked votes to override a veto.

Five Short of Two-Thirds.

Although the Thomas bloc still confidently predicts ultimate victory, a poll conducted yesterday by one Senator interested in the Patman bill showed only 57 certain votes to override the President, against 35 to sustain him. If this check is accurate, Patman forces lack five votes of the two-thirds necessary to enact the bill over the President's opposition.

Should the overriding motion fail—and on the basis of present Patman strength that is likely—Senator Clark plans to revive the compromise when the naval appropriations measure reaches the Senate floor.

To block a point of order, which almost certainly would be raised against it, Senator Clark will first make a motion to suspend the Senate rule against legislation on an appropriation bill. This requires a two-thirds vote for passage, but the Missourian believes combined bonus sentiment is strong enough to swing it. If his motion should carry, it would serve the double purpose of passing a mandatory bonus bill and assuring the necessary number of votes to override another veto.

Veterans Oppose March.

Commander in Chief Van Zandt, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said last night he knew none of the details of another projected bonus march and did not know "Mathews," who advised him of it.

The letter Van Zandt received read, in part:

"Hell nor heaven can stop them. The West Coast is solid in its movement East for the bonus. My regards. Wish I could give you further details, but I'll see you soon."

The V. F. W. executive telegraphed Mathews that "definite expressions to your elected Representatives and Senators in Congress are far better than any type of march."

Both the V. F. W. and the American Legion have an established record of opposition to veterans' marches on the Capitol of the type which descended on Washington in the last days of the Hoover Administration.

Patmanites Gain Trio.

"We do not want a repetition of the tragic bonus march of 1932, in which two veterans were shot down by police and the rest driven from the Nation's Capital at the point of bayonets by Federal troops, under orders of President Hoover," Van Zandt said.

Despite pressure from organized veterans' lobbies, and a glacier of Patman bill mail descending on the President and members of Congress, it appeared yesterday that the odds are still against overriding of a Presidential veto, barring an unforeseen last-minute shift in votes.

The only ballots definitely gained by the Patmanites include votes of former Representative Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, who will succeed the late Senator Bronson Cutting, and Senator Robert Reynolds, of North Carolina, who may fly back from the Virgin Islands to vote.

Several Senators are on the doubtful fringe, however, and undenied reports continue to circulate that no less a person than Vice President Garner would like to see the Patman bill enacted.

Aldrich Urges Wide Revision Of Eccles Bill

ing practices, was unequivocal in his denunciation of the fundamental proposals of Gov. Eccles for the reformation and centralization of the Reserve system.

None of Mr. Aldrich's contentions was challenged by members of the committee—indeed, he was subjected to only a slight cross-examination, which came briefly from Senator Carter Glass, who indicated agreement with much that the Chase Bank chairman said. While several of the Glass committee are hostile to the bill, it also has its frends in that group, but they apparently feel disinclined to defend the measure at this time.

Suggests Remedies.

In a lengthy statement, which he read rapidly to the committee, Mr. Aldrich sandwiched between his criticisms recommendations for legislation which he contended would overcome the objections to the Eccles proposals. One of these recommendations would reduce the size of the Federal Reserve Board to five members, including the dropping of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency, now ex-officio members.

Another recommendatoin was that the new law clearly state that open-market operations did not comprise the direct purchase of securities from the Treasury by the Reserve banks. He would place the control of open-market operations in a committee consisting of the entire new five-man board and four governors of Reserve banks, the latter to be elected by the governors of all the banks.

The most obnoxious aspect of the bill to Mr. Aldrich was its provisions which shift the objective o fthe Reserve system from "accommodating commerce and business" to that of formulating national economic and monetary policies and to mitigate unstabilizing fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices and employment.

Introduces New Policy.

Establishment of this new objective, he contended, introduced the "planning idea into Federal Reserve policy," constituting "a mandate to try out the powers granted in the bill plus those that the Federal Reserve authorities already have, in order to put the plans into effect."

"So it appears that the objective of the bill is to put into the hands of a few persons—a majority of a total of eight—the power to manipulate the credit and currency system of the United States in furtherance of a plan or a sequence of plans which they themselves may draw up," Mr. Aldrich asserted.

With the President naming the eight members and with three of them directly representing whatever Administration is in power, "this is a concentration of authority such as has not been known heretofore in the United States," the New York banker asserted, adding that "it is set up without check or balance in law and with few restraints in fact."

Tube-Fed Infant Given Orange Juice

By the United Press.

Malboro, N. Y., May 15.—Bobby Linsig, the baby born without an esophagus, celebrated arrival at the age of three months today with a half-teaspoonful of orange juice and discovery of his left hand.

The baby, otherwise normal and healthy, took the fruit juice as he has taken milk and a sugar and water formula all his life—through a tube direct to his stomach through an opening made by surgeons when he was 1 day old.

Dr. W. Martin Harris, who saved the baby from starvation by the operation, said his little patient is developing as any normal baby would and now weighs 10 pounds, 3 ounces.

on the basis of the need for relief in the various areas.

In explaining the details of procedure, Walker said that all PWA projects would come to his division, would then go to the progress division for the purpose of determining their necessity on the basis of the number of unemployed in the localities. They would then be returned to his division before going to the allotment board. He said about $2,000,000,000 in projects already have come from PWA.

Explaining the organization, Walker said that a representative of PWA and a representative of the progress division will be assigned to his department to work directly with him. In addition, he said, each of the 60 or more Government agencies involved will have a works adviser and an information service in connection with the program.

While Hopkins is dividing the country into about 320 divisions for the purpose of determining the number of unemployed in each, Walker indicated that States, rather than these divisions, probably would be administrative units.

Details Asked.

Forms for making applications for non-Federal projects have not been completed. The Federal project forms have already been distributed to the various Government agencies.

These forms are three pages in length. They ask for the following information:

Location and description of project. Total estimated cost, including amount previously allotted, amount asked, and additional amount required for completion. Division of labor into groups of unskilled, skilled, clerical and technical and supervisory. Cost of supplies and material, contingent expense and cost of land. Estimated expenditures per man-year of employment. Total man hours. Estimated period of preparation. Estimated daily average number of employes each month. Estimated elapsed time before completion. Statutory provisions. Status of plans. Status of land acquisition. How much Government costs will be increased or reduced for upkeep. Reason for asking allotment.

Congressmen Expect To Pick Census Takers

By the Associated Press.

Informally, but firmly, members of Congress have passed the word along that they expect the privilege of selecting the 100,000 persons who will make the unemployment census.

William L. Austin, Director of the Census, declined to discuss the matter. Most Congressmen said they knew nothing of it. But in departmental quarters it was said the word to officials from Capitol Hill was to the effect that:

"Whether the unemployment census is taken by persons on the relief rolls or off, we want the privilege of selecting them. We can pick qualified and deserving persons off the relief rolls just as well as can anybody else."

The plans for taking the census now are before the allotment board.

Named as Impresario.

Lutheran Men in D. C. To Form Organization

Plans will be made tonight at a meeting at the Luther Place Memorial Church for an organization to include all Lutheran men in Washington. Martin A. McGrory, of Atonement Lutheran Church, will preside, as his committee reports on plans for a series of meetings in the fall. The organization to be set up will have as one of its objects the assistance of the poor. A final report on the plan will be made to the Maryland Synod in Gettsyburg, Pa., next Monday.

Third Lamson Trial May Be Ordered Friday

San Jose, Calif., May 15 (AP).—District Attorney Fred Thomas said today a decision on the possible third trial of David Lamson for the murder of his wife Allene on Memorial Day, 1933, would be deferred until Friday.

The second jury was discharged yesterday after four days' disagreement. Cost of another trial, he declared, would have no bearing on the decision.

Who ever thought it possible to make a thin, delicate face powder which would really cling and stay on longer? Well, it has been done . . . but it took the famous French perfume house of L. T. Piver to do it.

They call their new creation Aventure face powder. Try it. It is made without starch, talc or orris root . . . it blends in with your make-up and skin and will never give you a "white-washed" powdered look. You will enjoy the dull, smooth Ever-Matt complexion which Aventure face powder brings to your skin. Select any one of the five shades of Aventure face powder . . . it is just elusively fragrant.

Moore to Talk At U.D.C. Rally Opening Today

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245. Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore of Fairfax, Va., will be principal speaker tonight at the district convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the historic Fairfax County courthouse. He will discuss events in and about Fairfax in the War Between the States.

Other speakers will be State Senator John W. Rust and Mrs. Robert Hutchison, of Manassas. Music will be furnished by the Falls Church band, assisted by local singers.

The district convention represents 26 chapters in Northern Virginia. The two-day session will end Friday afternoon.

The business meeting will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow with Mrs. Severn Nottingham, of Culpeper, Va., president of the Virginia division, presiding. Members of Fairfax U. D. C. will be hostesses at a dinner at Truro Episcopal Church at 1 o'clock Friday.

The convention will be concluded with dedication of a monument as marker of the Confederate burial plot in the Fairfax Cemetery, at 3 p. m. Friday, with Mayor Lindsey Carne, of Fairfax, in charge. The program will include an address by Mrs. Nottingham, the singing of Lee's favorite hymn "How Firm a Foundation," the planting of flowers on the marker and benediction by the Rev. Robert Allen Castleman, former rector of Falls Church.

Mrs. Nora Allison, president of the Fairfax Chapter, has charge of the two-day program and will be assisted by Mrs. John S. Barbour, Mrs. John Warwick Rust, Miss Jennie Moore, Mrs. Walter Tansil Oliver and Mrs. Wilmer S. Waring.

Mount Vernon Grange will hold an open meeting in the Woodlawn Cemetery House Friday night at 8 o'clock, with officials of the national grange as guest speakers. A special program of entertainment will be presented under the direction of Mrs. Margaret Cox, lecturer.

Chevy Chase Area Taxes Unchanged

Local taxes in Section 4, Chevy Chase, Md., will remain at 35 cents per $100 assessed valuation, the Citizens Committee voted at their last meeting.

The committee also authorized the construction of sidewalks on both sides of Meadown lane from Leland street to Valley place. The committee will meet again in the near future to consider the advisability of issuing bonds in the approximate amount of $11,500 to finance sidewalk expenditures.

Receipts for the past fiscal year amounted to $28,391 as compared with expenditures for the same period of $22,421, it was revealed in the annual report of the treasurer of the committee, Loren G. Polhamus.

Horse Show Saturday At Doughoregan Manor

The thirteenth annual Doughoregan Manor Horse Show will be held Saturday at Doughoregan Manor, on the road between Frederick and Baltimore. Doughoregan Manor is the home of Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, signer of the Declaration of Independence.

There will be 20 classes in the show for breeding, saddle and jumping horses and ponies. Members of the Green Spring Valley, Elk Ridge-Harford, and Howard County hunts will be among the exhibitors. The committee in charge of the show includes Mrs. C. Willing Browne, jr.; Mrs. Howard Bruce; Mrs. Charles Carroll, jr.; C. Augustus Riggs 3d; Mrs. Edwin Warfield, jr., and Dorsey M. Williams.

Nice's Signature Asked For Poultry Measures

A resolution petitioning Gov. Harry W. Nice to sign two bills affecting the poultry industry which were recently passed by the Maryland General Assembly, was adopted yesterday by the directors of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau.

The bills, which have received the backing of all agricultural organizations, prohibit the labeling of cold storage eggs as fresh eggs, and the use of eggs found to be infertile in incubators, for the making of powdered eggs.

Plans for the 1935 wool pool, sponsored by the United Wool Growers Association, Inc., were discussed, and Montgomery Country farmers will be urged to ship their wool to the pool.

This was the first meeting of this kind staged in Virginia. Miss Virginia Clapp, of Lee-Jackson, president of the Student Vocational Guidance Council, is seen on the stage.

Senior Class To Stage Play At Alexandria

Cast of 'Just Suppose' to Be Under Direction of Marshall Baggett.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The annual senior play of the Alexandria High School, a three-act comedy, "Just Suppose," the original of which was produced in the Henry Miller Theater, New York, will be presented tomorrow and Saturday nights in Lyceum Hall.

The scene of the play is laid at Fairview, Va., and it is a drama with an abundance of human interest and sparkling wit.

Members of the cast include those who have been outstanding in previous performances presented by the school, as well as others who are being introduced to the Alexandria public for the first time. In the order of their appearance, the cast follows: Robert Craddock, as Kingsley Stafford; Shirley Major, as Hannibal; Lottie Dove, as Mrs. Carter Stafford; Topping Bradley, as Montgomery Warren; Margaret Brinckman, as Linda Lee Stafford; Francis Payne, as Hon. Sir Calverton Shipley; Jared Ralston, as George, and Lewis Tesh, as the Marquis of Karnaby.

The play is under the direction of Marshall Baggett, of the Little Theater Group of Alexandria, assisted by Miss Eunola Pratt and Mrs. Mary Parker, of the high school faculty.

Gardner L. Boothe, of Alexandria, has been appointed by the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, now in session, as a member of the advisory committee of the association, to succeed the late Arthur T. Brice, of Washington.

Mr. Boothe's appointment was in recognition of the active interest he has taken in the affairs of the association for a number of years. He is one of the most prominent attorneys in the city, and is president of the First National Bank.

The Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club in the George Mason Hotel today. The Rev. Dr. Montgomery has been a freguent visitor to Alexandria and was supplied a pulpit here on numerous occasions. Walter E. Pierpont, second vice president of the club, is in charge of the program.

The store building on the nothheast corner of King and Pitt streets, formerly occupied by Swan Brothers, was sold at public auction yesterday by Arthur C. Houghton, substituted trustee, and purchased by the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. The building was bid in by Clarence R. Ahalt for $22,000. It has a frontage on King street of 36.53 feet.

Preparations were completed yesterday for the annual May Day procession of St. Mary's Catholic Church, in which 500 children will participate. Miss Dorothy Krafft, of Rosemont, will be the queen, and will be attended by a court of 20 of her schoolmates. Preceding the coronation, which will take place in the church, the procession will march up and down Royal street, singing appropriate hymns.

The Rev. Dr. Strahan, of the Catholic University, will be the speaker.

Marie White and Edgar White, of Baltimore, who were divorced several years ago, came to Alexandria Tuesday and were remarried, after which they returned to Baltimore, where they will make their home.

A meeting of the new George Washington High School Parent-Teachers Association will be held in the Maury School auditorium at 8 o'clock Monday night, for the election of officers for the coming school year. Mrs. W. C. Kidd will preside and a report on the national convention of the Parent-Teacher Congress will be submitted.

Fitzgerald Council, No. 459, Knights of Columbus, will confer the first and second degrees of the order on a large class of candidates at 8 o'clock this evening at the K. C. Home on Cameron street. This, it is announced, will be the first initiation given by this council during the mobilization for Catholic action campaign.

Shortly after the receipt of a radio report that an automobile had been stolen in Washington, Sergt. Lawrence Padgett and Policeman Dodd recovered the car. The officers also took into custody Edward A. Stone, 21, of Mason avenue, North Braddock, who the police say was in the machine at the time.

Stone was turned over yesterday to Detective Sergt. Alligood, of Washington. He denied taking the car, and said it had been turned over to him by a man who asked him to pick up a passenger at a restaurant near the south end of the Highway Bridge.

Mrs. Mary V. Cogan, 70, widow of Richard B. Cogan, died yesterday at the Alexandria Hospital. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. William A. Shoultz, of Winnipeg, Ontario, and a grandson, Milton Shoultz.

The body was taken to the Demaine funeral home, where services will be conducted at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon by the Rev. Ernest W. Aaron, pastor of the Southern Methodist Church. Interment will be in the Presbyterian Cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Eva Smith Remington, who died Monday night at her home near Penn Daw, south of Alexandria, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Cuningham funeral home, services being conducted by the Rev. Ryland T. Dodge, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church, and interment will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Services at the grave will be conducted by Liberty Rebekah Lodge of Odd Fellows, of Alexandria, of which Mrs. Remington was a member.

U. S. Iris Medal Awaits Takoma Show Winner

National Society to Award Silver Honor; Judges Are Listed.

A large number of Washington, Maryland and Virginia garden club members have signified intention to enter exhibits in the nineteenth annual iris show tomorrow and Saturday at the Takoma (D. C.) Public School, Piney Branch road and Dahlia street.

The American Iris Society, which is sponsoring the show in co-operation with the Takoma Horticultural Club, has announced that, because of the quality and size of the show, it has decided to award its silver medal to the exhibitor winning the most number of points in iris classes.

On the same day the Falls Church Garden Club is holding its iris show at the Town Hall, Falls Church, Va. Y. M. Kalmbach is chairman of the exhibition committee. The show will be open from 3 to 9:30 p. m. Saturday.

The following have been invited to judge the Takoma show: B. Y. Morrison, secretary of the American Iris Society and editor of the National Horticultural Magazine; Charles E. F. Gersdorff, chairman of registrations of the society; J. Marion Shull, regional director of the society; Mrs. Amos Chilcott, of the Fairfax Garden Club; Mrs. Francis Carter, president of the Alexandria (Va.) Garden Club, and Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, Belvoir, Va.

Exhibits will be accepted today from 5:30 to 9 p. m. and tomorrow from 8 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.

2 Legislators Speak Tonight In Alexandria

Democratic Women Will Hear Randolph and Howard W. Smith.

BUREAU OF THE POST.
ARLINGTON COUNTY
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The Democratic Women's Club of Arlington County will hold its third birthday banquet tonight in the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. Principal speakers will be Representatives Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, and Howard W. Smith, of Virginia.

Other speakers will be William D. Medley, a member of the State General Assembly, and Miss Emma E. Miller, prominent Democrat of Pennsylvania. Entertainment will be by Carl S. Kern and Mary Nancy Knox.

Charles Mackey was elected president of the Thomas Nelson Page School Parent-Teacher Association at a meeting last night in Ballston. Other officers elected are Mrs. Dorothy Hilliard, vice president; Mrs. B. Eldred, secretary, and Mrs. Doris Weakley, treasurer. The annual May Day celebration of the school will be held Wednesday.

Picked cadet companies of the Washington and Lee High School will go to Alexandria today to compete in a drill with the corps of the Alexandria and George Mason High Schools. A trophy will be awarded to the winners by Voltaire Local, No. 934, of the Forty-and-Eight Society.

Virginia Harrison was elected president of the Creative Arts Club of Arlington County at a meeting yesterday in the home of Mrs. Hugh A. Allen, Aurora Hills. Other officers elected were Mrs. Walter Cosby, vice president; Mrs. John M. Keith, recording secretary; Miss Peggy Kearney, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lamira Smith, treasurer, and Mrs. Mary Snyder, historian.

The Lyon Park Citizens Association will sponsor a bingo party tonight in the community house. N. D. Medley is chairman of the committee.

Another CCC camp was established in Arlington County yesterday when 200 men pitched tents on the Henderson tract at Barcroft on the Lee boulevard. The men will be employed for the next six months in landscaping the right of way of the road and terracing the banks.

Joint Grange Meeting.

A joint meeting of Montgomery and Howard County granges will be held on May 20 at 8 p. m. at the Montgomery High School auditorium at Rockville, Md. Edward Holter, secretary of the Maryland State Grange, will deliver an address.

Riverdale to End Garbage Service

Lack of Funds Terminate Collections June 1.

Weekly garbage collections in Riverdale, Md., will be discontinued June 1, it was announced yesterday in a letter mailed to all town citizens by the mayor and council.

The action is the result of the defeat at the polls, May 8, of the referendum tax amendment designed to provide funds and equipment for maintaining the service, which was inaugurated last February.

The letter explained collections had been undertaken as a temporary expedient, but with funds needed for other purposes.

"Without additional sources of revenue for the general fund, however, it is no longer practicable to continue the garbage service," the letter continued.

Bladensburg Firemen Plan Barbecue Saturday

Final arrangements for an "old-time barbecue," to be held Saturday by the Bladensburg Volunteer Fire Department, will be completed at a special meeting tonight.

The barbecue will be held at the Capitol Airport on River road near Bladensburg, from 2 p. m. until 8 p. m. Andrew F. Gasch is chairman of the arrangements committee. He is assisted by Carl Fierstein, George Schwab and Richard Schuler.

Tickets may be purchased for $1 each at the Bladensburg Firehouse, or in Washington through Lawrence Leer, 1427 A street southeast, or William T. Needham, 537 Tennessee avenue northeast.

Relief Outlay Drops Sharply In Montgomery

Expenditures Are $6,000 Under Estimate; Employment Improved.

Relief expenditures in Montgomery County, Md., showed a sharp decline during the month of April, Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary of the county welfare board, announced yesterday. Only $25,000 was expended by the board last month as compared with an estimated need of $31,000.

"The whole trend indicates that the employment conditions are improving and that people are finding work on private jobs," Miss Everson commented.

Miss Everson also reported that 306 families received relief from the board during April, only 42 of which were new cases. This was 36 fewer than the total of new cases in March and represented 93 fewer families on relief in April than in the previous month.

Nineteen county boys were sent to the Civilian Conservation Corps camps in the last enlistment although the county quota was considerably larger. The board anticipates a larger quota in connection with the expanded program and the extension of the age limit from 25 to 28 years, Miss Everson stated.

Welfare board community councils have been established and are now functioning in Poolesville-Barnesville district, Damascus, Clarksburg and Takoma Park.

"Forgotten" Veteran Reburied With Honors

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 15.—The body of Clyde Bradshaw, Civil War veteran, which had lain in a potter's grave at Bellevue, the county home, for 40 years, was interred this afternoon in the National Cemetery at Sharpsburg with full military honors.

Bradshaw's grave was discovered by accident by Fred White, a member of the Bellevue board of trustees, about a month ago. The tombstone, which had fallen upon the grave, when turned over was found to contain data leading to proof that Bradshaw was a veteran of the Civil War. The War Department ordered the reinterment.

Double Services For Drowned Girls

SistersWho Died in Quarry to Be Buried Today.

By the Associated Press.

Emmitsburg, Md., May 15.—Two sisters who died together in a rock quarry near here will be buried together tomorrow in Mount St. Marys Cemetery, near here.

They are Audrey McLaughlin, 12, and Theresa Mae, 6, daughters of Howard McLaughlin. Audrey gave her life yesterday in a vain attempt to save Theresa after the younger girl stepped into deep water while wading in the quarry.

A double funeral service will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at St. Anthony's Church.

Their brothers, Felix 8, and Francis, 10, were playing with them at the quarry. When the girls sank, the boys ran to summon their father, who recovered their bodies. Attempts at resusitation failed.

O'Conor Urges Crime Treaties To Aid States Catch Fugitives

Attorney General Offers Maryland Proposal at Hartford.

By the Associated Press.

Hartford, Conn., May 15.—Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, of Maryland, today presented to the conference of attorneys general of the New England and Middle Atlantic States plans for interstate compacts on criminal justice.

The compacts would require a State to deliver at once a person wanted for criminal activity in another State, unless the person was wanted for a more atrocious crime in the arresting State. They would require witnesses to be returned and would extend jurisdiction over paroled and probationed prisoners to other States when that person is permitted to leave his own State.

O'Conor pointed out that the automobile and other swift means of escape have brought new problems to enforcement officials, creating new requirements for successful combating of crime.

"In this day, when the criminal elements have improved their methods to overpower the law," he said, "it behooves those charged with enforcing the law to be equally as resourceful and versatile in order to have justice maintained supreme."

The Maryland law department chief cited three instances in which criminals wanted in Maryland for high crimes were arrested in a Midwestern State. One was returned for trial after four years of negotiations, another never has been returned and a third criminal was sought for one year before custody could be obtained.

He praised Maryland's freedom of crime and the operation of its criminal courts. He said average time intervening between indictments and trial has been but seven days.

The Long Arm of the Milkman

COWS know all about making milk.

They are short on long distance delivery.

That's the opportunity of the corporate milkman.

He sees to it that the farmer is free to tend his cows by providing a daily market for his dairy.

And the milkman organizes the human and material resources needed for the sanitary and expeditious collection and transportation of the milk supplied by widely scattered farms.

Plants for "processing" milk run into big money. They are chock-full of time saving mechanisms and equipment.

Obsolescence, depreciation, replacement are sizable items on the milkman's cost sheet.

He has to keep "liquid" to keep his plant and vehicles at top efficiency.

His delivery system must run by the clock. It must never run down.

Each day the corporate milkman delivers 40,000,000 bottles of milk to American homes.

Empty, the bottles are due for pickup and return—80,000,000 bottles in circulation every day, 365 days a year.

Yet the delivery cost for a quart bottle of milk is less than the postage required for a one-ounce letter.

A Futile Declamation.

Maryland is undoubtedly relieved to learn that Gov. Nice will veto the so-called teacher's oath bill. An executive coup de grace is an appropriate end for this fiasco. If members of the Legislature who sponsored this un-American encroachment upon the schools of the Free State are now able to view their handiwork objectively, they, too, will be grateful to the Governor for extricating them from an embarrassing situation.

The bill itself is a model of ineptitude. It would have compelled teachers in State-supported schools to take an oath of allegiance to the United States. But it prescribed no oath. It would not have imposed any penalties upon teachers breaking the oath, nor upon institutions ignoring it. As Gov. Nice points out, it simmers down to a "futile declamation of loyalty."

Aside from these organic defects, which are the basis of Gov. Nice's veto, the bill is unsound in principle. It would put upon the schools a burden of sanctimonious patriotism in place of the objective detachment of scholarship. Instead of inspiring loyalty to American institutions and respect for American traditions, it would more likely arouse resentment against governmental agencies that are so completely oblivious to the spirit of academic freedom on which all education worthy of the name must rest.

Regardless of what may have induced Gov. Nice to exercise his veto in this case, therefore, Maryland is to be congratulated. It is not likely that the Legislature will risk its prestige by repetition of this foolish gesture.

Muddled Procedure.

It is most unfortunate that the NRA should be handicapped during the coming year by the necessity of operating under a provisional law extending the recovery act without offering any assurance of its permanency. That situation can not be met, however, by attempts to force through the Administration's two-year extension plan, including important revisions, in face of bitter opposition from the Senate and in advance of a Supreme Court decision as to the constitutionality of the recovery act. The plain logic of the case suggests the desirability of marking time and waiting for a more propitious opportunity to undertake permanent revision of the law.

Apparently Senator Harrison favors this method of disposing of the NRA, since he believes that it should be permitted to run along for a few months as it is, while the courts are passing on its validity. The Senator's advocacy of the Clark resolution is difficult to reconcile with this sensible conclusion, since the resolution carries amendments to the present law that would go far toward putting the NRA out of business, if they were strictly enforced. At best, the prohibition of all forms of price fixing and the requirement that codes be applicable only to interstate businesses add to the confusion and uncertainty surrounding the future of the recovery administration.

The opposition of the Senate to immediate passage of permanent legislation would be much more effective if it had been less hasty in approving a resolution that profoundly modifies the temporary law and may seriously hamper the recovery administration during a trying probationary period.

Safety In Valor.

On Tuesday of this week thousands of enthusiastic spectators watched Company H of Western High School win the highest award of the Washington High School Cadet Corps. News accounts of the event were so similar to those of last year and all the previous years that there is a danger, in reading them, of thinking "so what?" The usual crowds displayed their usual enthusiasm; the usual rain failed to dampen the ardor of the interested relatives and friends; and the boys made the usual colorful spectacle that is the usual result of a combination of youth, vigor and uniforms. On the other hand, however, perhaps the significance of such a display lies primarily in its very repetition.

Pessimistic mossbacks are drooling their customary complaints about flaming youth. Conscientious surveyors of the scene are bemoaning the increasing number of boys "on the bum." Disquieting reports of bands of young criminals whose creed is apparently "one bad deed a day" are always with us.

To the pessimist, therefore, and to the skeptic who queries the news interest of a competitive drill, the same answer might apply. And that is that probably the most inspiring feature of these perennial cadet meets is that they have become so regular as to appear humdrum. When physical and mental fitness in a group of young men is so coordinated that it becomes nothing more than is expected of them by both public and press, therein is its own raison d'etre.

When Perspective Is Lost.

When the President signed the agricultural adjustment act two years ago he frankly recognized it as an experiment and promised that he would be the first to turn back if it should prove a failure. In that spirit the country accepted the venture in spite of widespread skepticism. Now many able and sincere observers are convinced that the adverse results of the AAA program outweigh its advantages. And the President accuses them of "deliberately trying to mislead" the public "by lying about the kind of a farm program under which this Nation is operating today."

It is apparent from the rabble-rousing nature of this address that it was intended to strike a note that would please the thousands of farmers assembled in Washington to indorse the AAA. Actually, of course, it has been published throughout the country. The President has placed himself in the position of ardently indorsing an experiment which has yet to demonstrate its permanent value and of intemperately denouncing critics who fear that the ultimate effects of crop curtailment will be ruinous.

Conditions on the average farm seem to have substantially improved during the last two years. Farm prices have been raised far above the lowest levels of the depression and the spread between returns to the farmer and costs to the consumer has been narrowed. Since the prices of industrial goods have also advanced, farm "parity" has not yet been attained. But the place which the farmer occupies in the country's economic set-up is—temporarily, at least—more favorable than it has been for several years.

For this achievement—if such it proves to be—the AAA is entitled to considerable credit. The President recognizes that the drought has been an important influence in the elimination of surpluses. In that respect the weather and the AAA have worked hand in hand. But even if we assume that all the credit for higher farm prices is due to the AAA, there are still some grave questions that might well be considered before the love-feast between the Administration and the assembled farmers is concluded.

Farm income has been increased only by taxing consumers and using Federal authority to peg prices. As a result the demand for agricultural products has been weakened. Domestic consumption of important crops has declined, and the export market is steadily contracting. Imports of some agricultural commodities show significant increases. The important question is not so much whether farmers have gained temporary advantages from the AAA, but whether the policy of artificial scarcity is undermining the opportunity of the American farmer to dispose of normal staple crops.

High prices lose their attractiveness when there is no market for a considerable part of the farmer's produce. Until the AAA has demonstrated its ability to regain lost markets, or even to hold what markets still remain open to domestic crops, there will be no occasion for either glowing praise for its sponsors or caustic denunciation of its critics. Certainly it is not a subject over which any official can afford to lose his temper. For abuse does not minimize the staggering problems still confronting the AAA.

A Stabilization Plea.

In his last report as president of the Bank for International Settlements Leon Fraser makes a parting plea for stabilization of the world's currencies as a step toward recovery. "There can be very little hope of a return to freer trade," he says, "as long as the present monetary uncertainty prevails."

It must be confessed that the outlook for general restoration of the gold standard—which is a sine qua non of currency stability—does not appear very bright at the moment. Indeed, the chances seem to favor further defections from the ranks of the gold bloc nations, and a period of greater instability for the immediate future. Nevertheless, it is significant that our Government, as Secretary Morgenthau indicated in his Monday night address, will place no obstacles in the way of a stabilization agreement when other countries are ready to act. This implied admission of the evils of a regime of managed currencies holds out hope for the future, even if the current outlook is not encouraging.

Undoubtedly, the way has already been cleared to some extent for international stabilization agreements when countries grow weary of vain attempts to find adequate substitutes for the gold standard. As the Bank for International Settlements has pointed out in its present and preceding reports, there has been a progressive and extensive liquidation of international short-term debts which have interfered with the proper functioning of an international monetary standard. So long as large sums continue to be shifted from country to country at short notice, currency stability will be jeopardized in countries suffering from the effects of gold losses. The reduction in the volume of this troublesome floating debt as well as the shrinkage of long-term international indebtedness, repudiation of reparations, and virtual elimination of war debts, will materially assist a return to currency stability.

At present, one of the chief difficulties in the way of stabilization lies in the efforts of nations that are commercial rivals to lower the gold prices of their exports by currency devaluation. Once the futility of these methods has been fully demonstrated, the gold standard will again come into its own. When that time arrives the Bank for International Settlements can render good service as an international clearing institution and as an agency for bringing together representatives of leading central banks, with a view to furthering banking cooperation between nations and helping to improve the technique of the gold standard.

Unified Banking Deferred.

The banking bill of 1935 passed the House in a form which holds out little hope for speedy unification of the banking system. It is true that one section of the bill is designed to encourage non-member State banks to apply for admission to the Federal Reserve system by waiving in whole or in part the existing membership requirements. This is an opportunistic and far from ideal way of undertaking to bring about unification, although it does not arouse the opposition that exists to reforms of a more drastic nature calling for compulsory unification.

However, the chief incentive for small banks to join the Federal Reserve system, even under the liberalized provisions of the House bill, has been removed by insertion of an amendment which would permit non-member State banks to participate in the permanent insurance fund. So long as these banks continue to enjoy the benefits of insurance protection, without having to meet the proper requirements imposed upon members of the Federal Reserve system, there is virtually no prospect of escape from the present unsatisfactory dual or rather multiple system of banking. The jealousy and competition which have resulted in loosening and even removing proper safeguards will continue to exist, and the advantages of unified authority and responsibility for safeguarding the funds of the people will be withheld.

Counsel for the Federal Reserve Board has clearly established the authority of the Federal Government to bring all banks under a unified system and there is no legitimate excuse for postponing this major reform any longer. Power to regulate the currency was specifically delegated to Congress under the Constitution. Today, our principal medium of exchange is bank checks instead of the bank notes or coins that circulated at the time the Constitution was adopted.

Even when the National Banking Act was passed the bank note rather than the check was the chief means of payment. Subsequently, the steady growth of the check system enabled State banks, which did not have the privilege of note issue, to compete increasingly with national banks. The progressive relaxation of standards which followed led directly to the recent complete breakdown of the country's banking system. To avoid a repetition of these disastrous conflicts, Congress should exercise its constitutionally granted powers to cause all banks to conform to standards set for them by a single unifying authority.

More Questions From Kansas.

Kansas can always be counted on for corn, cyclones, William Allen White and departures from the conventional. This week, when even Nevada's divorce-gardens grow nothing more interesting than the Hutton case, the rich loam of the Sunflower State brings to full bloom a suit for severance of marital ties wherein the husband asks "custody of the family dog and permanent possession of the sewing machine."

Here is news which irresistibly awakens speculations. Did Mr. Charles Moore's attachment to the old oaken sewing contrivance originate in some unrecorded triumph of militant feminism in Kansas? Was the man brought up to do the family mending and, in our mechanistic age, has he become not only the slave, but the devoted slave, of the machine? There remains, moreover, the canine question.

In respect thereto, the Associated Press is mysteriously meager of detail: "Moore declares he had the dog before he married his wife in 1925, but that she took it with her when they separated last November." What kind of dog was it? Why did Mrs. Moore elope with it? Was the dog trained to work the sewing machine?

If this sort of thing becomes common out there, Mr. White will again be called upon to answer that classic question: "What's the matter with Kansas?"

Women Jurors.

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

The law of Louisiana, as in several other Southern States, permits women to serve on juries, but does not make such service compulsory, and the circumstance that their names are seldom drawn in New Orleans may be ascribed, for want of a more definite term, to our vaunted Southern chivalry.

The National League of Women Voters has been looking into the matter, not specifically here but all over the country. There are only ten States, none in the South, where jury service by both sexes is compulsory. The States are California, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Minnesota, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, Ohio and Pennsylvania. There are eleven others, according to the league, in which service by women is permissible, and these include Louisiana, Arkansas and Kentucky.

Attention of the league seems to have been centered upon the matter by what is described as splendid service of the women empaneled at the Hauptmann trial, and more recently by action of a Federal judge in Pittsburgh permitting women to be jurors. In regard to the latter, an explanation was made that the Federal courts usually follow the custom of the States in which they are sitting. The league seems preparing to press a campaign for more general service, either voluntary or compulsory, by women citizens, now enfranchised for 15 years. It has tabulated some powerful arguments to support its contention that jury duty by the entire electorate is a duty and not a mere privilege.

Is This The Low Down?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the public will make an effort to get the inner viewpoint of the New Dealers much of the controversial criticism will disappear. The New Dealers are consistently optimistic—and this gay spirit is bulwarked by facts.

Within two years they have seized the value behind the currency—the gold and silver—and still have this hidden in mysterious seclusion. They have regimented business and agriculture and imposed punitive correction on those unwilling to submit. They have made their own laws without legislation—adjusting these to conditions which challenged their authority. They have accustomed folks to doing business with a paper currency not convertible into metal of value, which can be repudiated at will and by thus becoming unacceptable for taxes will gently ease all privately owned property into the ownership of the state—which is the New Dealers. Their optimism is justified—they have the goods.

The New Dealers have cleared many obstacles and can point with pride to how smoothly this was accomplished. Academically, it will be immensely interesting to see how they clear the last obstacle, that of persuading the Nation to accept the permanent autocratic direction of the New Dealers as a more profitable way of life than the hit-or-miss method of getting a fortune under free competition according to individual ability. I'm afraid folks prefer to make their own blunders and accept responsibility for their personal choice of the wrong bets. C. E. BRINKMAN.

The Speed Habit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The number of fatal accidents in the District of Columbia is rapidly approaching the point at which public opinion may well demand corrective action and measures to control a dangerous speed habit. The present conditions in which we live remind one of the dog which was separated from his tail inch by inch, so as not to hurt all at once.

Washington was shocked recently by the collision of a bus at a nearby railroad crossing, in which about 15 young aspiring lives were snuffed out without warning. More than double that number of pedestrians in our Capital City have been killed during the past year by reckless driving. One by one we are snuffed out in the name of the speed god progress.

Many well-meaning drivers turn street corners without warning, at an unnecessary two-wheel race, to get ahead of an unsuspecting footman who has the right of way. Even a tardy toot of his horn does not absolve the hitting driver who holds the killing weapon—the steering wheel. The court authorities who absolve such cases as "unavoidable accident" hold the steering wheels of seasoned justice. But even the courts can not restore the dead to life. No tangible action thus far is taken to decrease the death toll. What may we expect?

Graves In Arlington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May 30 will soon be here again, and thousands of people will go to Arlington National Cemetery to decorate the graves of relatives and friends who lie buried there. These thousands of people can be divided into two groups: First, those who know where to find the graves of those whom they wish to honor, and second, those who do not know how to locate the graves they wish to decorate. They may get the number of a grave at the office, and then begin a very difficult search for it.

Information booths, set up in the different sections of this vast cemetery, with someone in charge to direct those who came to inquire for a certain numbered lot, would be a great assistance. There would be needed a blueprint with the numbers of the graves in each section, e. g., "The World War Section," the "Dewey Division," etc.

It often happens that drivers for florists are sent to place an order of flowers, sent by telegraph, and they have great difficulty in placing the offering where it rightfully belongs. A telephone, connecting each booth with the office, would be an additional aid in finding some of the graves.

Let something like this be given a trial this May 30. It will no doubt prove a great help to visitors.

The Real Issue At The U. Of M.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In its favored position near the Nation's Capital, in its physical surroundings, and in many other ways, the University of Maryland has high possibilities. Though it is, as a university, a young institution, yet it has from the beginning made remarkable progress in service and scholarship. After 12 years of association with its fine faculty, during which we have worked hard in a common cause, its welfare is, and always will be, close to my heart. For these reasons I should like to recall attention to the main point at issue in the present discussion, from which it seems to me it has been somewhat diverted to irrelevant points.

This issue is the scholastic welfare of the university. A building program is a laudable thing, and highly to be commended, but it should always be strictly secondary to the real university, the association of faculty and students in enthusiastic devotion to learning.

In the College Park branch of the University of Maryland the arts college has somewhat over 800 students, a number comparable to that of the same college in neighboring State universities such as North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia. The following table shows the number of full professors at Maryland and at North Carolina, where the arts students number only about 150 more.

*Retired.

Eight years ago Maryland had in its arts college, with approximately half the present number of students, four more full professors; one each has not been replaced in chemistry, history, economics and sociology.

The same relative proportion approximately is upheld by statistics for Virginia and West Virginia Universities, and about the same ratio is found for associate and assistant professors in these institutions. This regrettable situation is not the result of the depression, because most of the resignations in the arts college took place before the beginning of the depression. As has been pointed out, these resignations were due to the same discontent with the halt in the school's hitherto favorable progress which has caused my own severance of relations. As Mr. Pearson has so aptly said in The Washington Post of May 6, "We have a large number of exceptionally well qualified and loyal faculty members, and many of them are carrying extra teaching loads."

They are indeed carying the teaching loads of three or four times their number, and with no encouragement or recognition of their efforts. It may be added that most institutions hardly boast of the extra teaching loads carried by their staff.

A proper investigation need have no detrimental consequences for a school, but quite the opposite. All institutions need such investigations at times, as Harvard for instance, has recognized by having one at regular intervals, carried on by outsiders to determine the efficiency of each department. His demand for such an investigation is perhaps the greatest contribution to the welfare of the University of Maryland, which President Pearson has made. It is my earnest hope that its results may enable the university to recover lost ground and to regain that equality with its sister institutions which has been so jeopardized in the last eight years.

The Post Impressionist

Shivers On The Screen.

Post Office, Thursday.

ON THE one hand, Victor Hugo said that, whatever else might fail to be literature, there could be no doubt about the literary excellence of any scene which sent an authentic chill down the spine. The movies follow literary laws—though they sometimes lag a long leg behind—and today three pictures productive of just such chills are showing in Washington.

On the other hand, Oliver Onions, on the title page to his best collection of short stories, recorded as worldwide the prayer:

"From Ghosties and Ghoulies and Things that go Bump in the Night, good Lord deliver us!"

Yet, in our era of depression, those three pictures play to crowded houses.

Something has already been said by the Post-Impressionist concerning the kinds of entertainment that people want during economic stress. The neighboring editorial columns have said a good deal on the same subject—not always in agreement with us. Something more is unequivocally said by this trio of pictures.

* * *

No three could, at first glance, seem more different from one another:

"Les Miserables" is a "picturization"—if you will admit that word to your vocabulary—of a classic.

"The Informer" is modern realism at its best.

Yet they all have a common basis of appeal: a basis of fright—and flight from fright.

In the first there is the horror of the galleys. In the second there is the horror of malevolent forces supernaturally potent upon earth. And in the third there is the dread, not alone of death, but also of punishment after death.

In "Les Miserables" is stern flight from the civil law. In "The Trail of the Vampire" is panic flight from the powers of evil. In "The Informer" is despairing flight from both retribution and conscience.

It was the part of wisdom for the scenario-maker of "Les Miserables" to select the single Jean Valjean thread from all that tangled skein of the great French romantic revivalist. The ever admirable Charles Laughton—didn't we know him as a boy behind his father's counter in Yorkshire Scarborough?—can not quite overcome his physical dissimilarity from Hugo's "Jauvert;" but he at least plays the role so well that, as our juvenile companion remarked, "he makes you hate himself—nearly."

Above all, the composition of the piece recreates every horror of the galleys, the abiding dread of that unbelievably brutal penal system which survived through Napoleon's epoch: the crushing of the individuality, of soul as well as body, the ultimate survival of only what is the beast in what once was the man. There lay Valjean's fear and therefrom ran his long flight.

Comparison of "The Mark of the Vampire" with "Dracula"—our old acquaintance Bram Stoker's single masterpiece—was inevitable: this latter is frankly a less ambitious attempt, but it completely attains its shivering objective, even if its authors did not forget "Seven Keys to Baldpate." The two Lionels, Barrymore and Atwell, make a first-rate doctor and detective—and the fear of the "Undead" is blown, on a cold wind, straight from the wilder corners of Czechoslovakia to the hearts of sophisticated Americans in their Capital. You don't wonder that everybody on the screen wants to run away; you do wonder at the power of the fearful fascination which chains you to your seat.

And so, finally, "The Informer," taken from the story of that title by Liam O'Flaherty and lifted alive from the Irish Rebellion of 1922. Mr. Bell said that the play adheres to "the strict requirements of the old Greek drama in the matter of the unities." It does more: it adheres to the old Greek dramatic verities. It is one of the few book-founded screen plays which improve upon their originals. Everybody's horror of the traitor, his horror of revolutionary law, of eternal punishment, and his flight therefrom: the playwright and Victor McLaglen make these almost unendurably poignant.

But our point is an interrogation point.

Horror went out of screen fashion during prosperity. Horror returns to screen popularity during depression. Why?

Our guess is that, as the essence of a screen play is frequently pursuit, so the desire of a screen audience is just now escape; escape from reality, even through realism—so long as the realism of the play is not the realism of the spectator's own environment. The more depressing the latter element, the more powerful must be the former. And horror is one of the most powerful of emotions.

A Wonderful Team

"THE more I hear Mr. Roosevelt speak," said Pete, the taxicab driver, "the more I can't understand why he and Huey Long split. Now, you take his speech to the farmers, wasn't it a caution? I'd been riding a bunch of those farmers around all day and when they get out to go to the White House to hear Mr. Roosevelt speak I says to them, I says 'Why, can't I go in with you. And they says 'Come along.'

"Well, sir, when I went home to dinner I told the little woman, she always likes to hear about interesting experiences I have, I told her, I says 'That's the darndest thing I've ever seen,' and she says 'What's the darndest thing you've ever seen?' 'Those farmers up at the White House and Mr. Roosevelt talking to 'em.' I says.

• • • •

"I'M NOT kidding you, mister, I've been around Washington here driving this cab a long time, but never have I seen the likes of that. Ever now and then while Mr. Roosevelt was talking they would grit their teeth and say 'That's tellin' 'em.' Then they would let out a whoopee for him.

"When Mr. Roosevelt told 'em about a banker who didn't understand how the farmers cut their winter wheat on snow covered ground they muttered 'Yeah, that's just about all they know about farming, too.' Then Mr. Roosevelt told 'em about a metropolitan editor who thought cotton was razzberries and the farmers they muttered 'Yeah' this was just exactly like the editors, too.

"Well sir, Mr. Roosevelt he would grin and then he would denounce and the farmers would say 'them sho is fighting words, tell 'em big boy.'

• • • •

"I GOT to wondering then what a shame it is that he and Huey Long can't work together instead of against each other, as they do. You know, it maybe they are envious of each other. There is one thing sure and certain, though, Huey ain't goin' get nowhere without Mr. Roosevelt. He's no match working against him. Naw sir, Mr. Roosevelt is a better rabble rouser than Huey ever will be. He's gotta better voice and he uses prettier phrases. Aw, I ain't thinking Huey is dangerous or nothing, not after Mr. Roosevelt's speech, but it's a pity two like talents can't get together. They'd make a beautiful team working with each other, I says.

"I've seen these split-ups of friends before, though. In fact, it's not unusual. Nearly every time two men of like talents start off together one of them gets jealous and tries to cut the other one down. I was tellin' the little woman only the other day a couple ought to always marry opposites. That's what I did, my little woman's a brunnette and and as you can see I'm a blonde. And we gets along all right. I have my talents and the little woman she has hers.

• • • •

"AFTER the speaking I was ridin' these farmers around some more and I ask them, I says 'Why do you reckon these high and mighty fellows Mr. Roosevelt spoke of, why do they want to starve you farmers to death? I was wondering because I don't see why anybody would want to starve anybody else to death.

"The farmers, they say 'They're just mean, they are. That's the reason they wanna starve us to death.'

"Then I says, 'It's funny, I've been around here and I can't tell where all this business about the high and mighty fellows tryin' to take away youall's processing taxes started. In the first place that Mr. Henry Harriman, of the Chamber of Commerce, was one of those who helped you get the taxes and the only people I know who want them taken away are the cotton goods manufacturers and they say they want you to be paid out of the Treasury. That'd suit youall just as well wouldn't it?'

"And they says 'We don't know nothing about the details. All we want is our money. We don't care where it comes from. But it's jes like Mr. Roosevelt says, those high and mighty fellows have always been again' us.'

"'Well,' I says, 'he ain't goin' to let 'em hurt you is he? Naw sir, he's a farmer jes like you fellows.' But I'm tellin' you, mister, now that they've gone, the whole thing sounds screwy to me.

"Well, here's where you get out."

By Ralph E. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

KING GEORGE, who is now having his jubilee celebrated for him amid a great deal of tedious pomp and ceremony, has a national anthem sung in his honor, a kind of family heirloom which descended on him through the generations with merely the necessary changes of gender. No doubt the Mikado, and the dozen or so potentates who survived the great war to make the world safe for the Democratic Party, also have theirs. But it is vouchsafed few private individuals to possess a national anthem of their very own.

Of course it is possible to say Al Smith is still a public official, because he is night superintendent of the Central Park Zoo. But he doesn't work very hard at it and he has a good deal of private life up in the Empire State Building, a lot more than he would have had if the President hadn't forgotten he was Cabinet timber. Anyway, Al still has his national anthem. It is "The Sidewalks of New York," which even now evokes stirring memories of the day when the brown derby was a shining crown to devoted millions. And now Al is paying off a rather pathetic debt of honor to the author.

Old man Jimmy Blake (no, you never heard of him) did the words. Charlie Lawlor, dead these ten years, wrote the music, and the reward of both was penniless poverty. Lottie Gilson, gone to the Good Troopers' Heaven long ago, sang it first at Tony Pastor's and knocked 'em off their seats. From that time forth "The Sidewalks of New York" has remained the perennial theme song of the metropolis and in time grew into the battle hymn of a whole political party.

Mamie O'Rourke, Nellie Shannon and all the rest mentioned in the old song were real people and, as their names suggest, were products of the pavements when the East Side was still Irish. But that was 40 years ago and, though Jimmy has written more than 50 songs since then, none of them ever obtained the popularity of the classic.

• • • •

NOT that he ever got much out of it. The song still sells 5,000 or so copies a year but the royalties don't go into Jimmy Blake's empty pockets. He and his partner, Lawlor, sold their rights for $5,000 flat and half that sum has never provided for anyone's old age yet.

There is another brother, Jack Blake, and a sister, Mary, both of them as broke as Jimmy. Two years ago their plight became known and Al Smith got them on emergency relief. Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, also helped out.

But a week or so ago Jimmy discovered he couldn't eat what little the family managed to get into their tiny flat. He lost 18 pounds in eight days and finally consulted a doctor, who was unable to diagnose the case. The physician said his patient would have to go to a hospital to have some snapshots of his interior taken with the X-ray. So Jimmy, not having $75 to pay for the plates, went home again and continued starving.

Somehow, on top of the highest building in the world, Al Smith, chief beneficiary of "The Sidewalks of New York," heard about it all. He flashed the word that he would be responsible for all hospital bills and regretted that he hadn't been buzzed sooner. So Jimmy Blake was taken to a hospital. They can't tell yet whether he will live or die.

But wherever he goes now, whether they take him back to the flat or he goes home somewhere else, he will be wafted on the wings of an old song. But Jimmy and Jack and Mary will never again be "boys and girls together on the sidewalks of New York."

IN THREE months the wheel has made one complete revolution for old Frank Greges. This week, a little wearily, he donned his sandwich sign again and began once more the endless trudging up and down Broad street. Old Frank is the honest bum who picked up a fortune in securities from the sidewalk and won momentary fame and prosperity by returning it.

Frank's unexpected plunge into publicity, you will recall, drove him violently insane. He thought he was God and killed a man by looking at him. The money and the jobs that showered in on him did him no good except to tide him over the period of his wandering wits. The doctor thought he ought to be out in the open air and the sandwich job seemed to point the way. But Frank has two things salvaged from the wreck of his fortunes, a strange Arabian night vision of the mutation in human affairs, and a stout pair of new shoes. He's going to need the shoes.

THIS Tower of Trivialities feels bound to record that the first fox hunt of the season did not take place, as usual, at the Piping Rock Club. It occurred quite unexpectedly up on Washington Heights, one of the most populous sections of this city. And the brush was brought home, not by the belling hounds of tradition, but by a well-placed portion of brick delivered smack on the end of the nose by the 12-year-old pitcher of the Trojans, an outfit thus far quite uncelebrated in baseball history. Mr. Fox took his base on balls, or a perfect strike, if you prefer, and is now wagging his tail in Central Park Zoo. (Nature note: Do foxes wag their tails?

"Tantivy" was sounded on this occasion by a pedestrian who informed a strolling sergeant of police that a little gray fox in the West was loose.

"No kidding," said the sergeant.

"No kidding," said another sergeant at the other end of the wire.

Eventually the emergency squad arrived to track down the gray terror, but they proved not quite fast enough on their feet. It was a great hunt, though, and hundreds enjoyed it, including the fox. All day long the bluecoats hunted and perspired, surrounding reynard repeatedly but, alas, in vain.

Finally Ernest Wilder, pitcher of the Trojans, fresh from practice with his team, happened along about dinner time. He knew nothing about the fox but was startled by a gray shadow laughing at him over the top of the rock pile. Instinctively he grabbed the nearest missile, which happened to be a chunk of brick, and applied it where it would do the most good. The hunt was over and the forces of the law closed slowly and relentlessly in.

BABE RUTH as the attendance he draws continues to demonstrate, is still Attaboy of the Baseball Field. Kemal Pasha is still Attaturk of Istanbul and Angora. And John W. Whoosis (American equivalent for an unpronounceable Russian name), a New York taxicab driver, is still Ataman of the Cossacks. For a fact.

Bagdad-on-the-Hudson certainly serves these odd little slices of life with surprising regularity. The Don Cossacks, it appears, didn't get on with the Bolshies and as a result are scattered over the face of the globe. Now they are conducting a world wide election for a new Ataman-in-chief. But the 300 Cossacks in the United States have their own Ataman. He skippers a New York taxicab for a living, and if you want to see a real live Ataman step into his car the next time you happen to be passing the stand at the Presbyterian Hospital.

THE Pulitzer awards wouldn't seem official now without Clayton Hamilton attacking them on the theatrical flank. He is at it again this year and says right out that the committee labored and brought forth a mouse, which is a mean way to describe Zoe Akins' adaptation of Edith Wharton's "The Old Maid." Hamilton's candidate, and, indeed, that of all our advanced thinkers, is "The Children's Hour." But it is hard to envisage the Pulitzer committee glorifying perversion in a girl's school.

Weather Instruments of Airport to Aid Movies

Hollywood (U.P.).—With the aid of three new recording instruments, a special motion picture weather forecasting service was being planned today to save studios thousands of dollars that are lost when outdoor location schedules must be changed at the last minute because of rain.

A. J. Lygum, chief meteorologist at the Grand Central Airport here, is completing preparations for the new service. With M. A. Karlow, master technician, who was a watchmaking craftsman at 15, he has developed instruments increasing accuracy of predictions.

One is an electric psychrometer, accurate within .25 of a degree in determining the dew point—the degree of moisture that will cause rain. It furnishes a reading in 45 seconds, compared with the regulation weather bureau hand instruments' reading in 3 to 5 minutes. The other two have to do with recording and transmitting the degree of sunlight or clouds and fog in the sky.

Jobless Glasgow Man Finds Sight Handicap

Glasgow, Scotland (AP).—His sight restored after 30 years by a 100-to-1 operation gamble, Peter Hanlon wishes now he could return to darkness.

Recovery of his vision may mean the loss of a weekly pension of $2.50 given by the British government to blind persons over 50. Hanlon is 62, and must wait until he is 70 to qualify for an old-age pension.

"For the sake of my wife and home I believe I would rather return to darkness than lose the pension," he said. "I am able to do little work even if I could get a job."

No End of Books

Red Blood.

I RATHER thought our adventure novels were going to get around to "bureaucracy" sooner or later for a subject. Postmen, Coast Guard, Immigration Service, Weather Service, Alaskan Railroad—why, the slight beginning we've made with the Department of Justice hasn't begun to touch the field.

Now comes Tom Gill, author of "Death Rides the Mesa" and two other yarns, for some eight or ten years a forester in the West, then in charge of the information work of the Forest Service here, now on the staff of the American Nature Association on Sixteenth street, to write what he has always wanted to do, a story of the Forest Service in action—"Starlight Mesa" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2). And "bureaucratic," "regimented," dull, regular, and stifled, you think? You're out by a mile!

It's a rip-snorting tale of a mysterious young giant of a chap who goes into the upper Wind River country of Wyoming (where Mr. Gill had his first job as assistant ranger fresh from Yale in 1915) and finds the Forest Rangers drawn up in battle array against the great predatory octopus, the "North Continental Development Co." Pogue, the smart rascal who directs the company, is out to become emperor of that section of the State, to loot the forests, steal the waterpower, and run the defending rangers out of the country. So young North steps into things, notably a couple of hackle-raising fights with Pogue's huge henchman, Jean L'Abbat. Amid high mountain scenes of logging, of "jams" in the river, of "crown fires" which go like a tornado through the tall spruce, Mr. Gill tells his red-blooded and rousing yarn.

If a new age needs new heroes, we have them here in the Forest Service. You'll want to cheer as loudly as ever you did over an old-fashioned Western when the posse arrived in the nick of time.

MURDER somewhere over in Cherrydale or Lyon Village should make us prick up our ears. Top it off with the sort of newspaper chat which blooms in the National Press Building, with tales of Washingtonia such as the time Senator J. "Ham" Lewis was mistaken for a head waiter and entered heartily into the hoax, and you have this most entertaining of mystery stories, "Death of a Tory" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2).

Keats Patrick is a nom de plums to hide a newspaperman of 20 years' experience, now chief of the Washington bureau of a large daily paper. "For once," he says, "I'm going to tell a story the way I want to tell it, with my feet on the desk, cigars at one elbow and drinks on another, and to hell with the style-sheet. I've had all the editorial interference I can stand."

Which he does, with great and cheerful gusto. Mrs. "Cactus" Rich and Felix Starbuck are found dead in a suburban garden. March Rich, agricultural expert at the Arlington Farm, confesses. And at once Sally Shaftoe, local gossip writer; Lightfoot, a gratifyingly human Congressman, and some pert and lively newspaper couples are drawn into a very pretty melee. Part mystery, part Washington merry-go-round, "Death Is a Tory" tickles us on all sides. It's a nice touch of Keats Patrick to refer to real names—such as Henry Suydam, Ulric Bell, John La Gorce, Carl Ruth (hi, Carl!).

• • • •

"The Alleged Great Aunt" (Bobbs-Merrill, $2). This mystery tale of an old-time opera diva in a small town was begun by Henry Kitchell Webster before he died. Two of his best friends came upon the MS. afterward and liked it vastitched to finish it, and thus we have the tale completed by the famous novelist sisters, Janet Ayer Fairbank and Margaret Ayer Barnes. No doubt you read it in The Post. If you've a hunch where Webster left off, write the publishers and they'll tell you.

• • • •

"Nineveh House," by Diana Patrick (Dutton, $2). The young French bride comes to the English household, gets mixed up in and finally solves the mystery of old Nineveh House next door. Romance with a high temperature of suspense.

• • • •

"Thunder Mountain," by Zane Grey (Harper, $2). The 1935 return of an old favorite—you'll see just how much of a favorite is Mr. Grey from the fact that between 1910 and 1930 his novels have sold 11,228,399 copies! It's set in a crude, gold-mining town of Idaho in the eighties, has all the fixings of desperadoes, greed, revenge, and a good man's love.

• • • •

"Little World," by Rian James (King, $2). The crash brings two young society girls to work in Buntling's, the great department store, where they find that the organization from sub-clerk to general manager makes up a little world of its own. Swift and inly, itched to finish it, and thus we behind the scenes.

Ministers' Wives Sub For Hubbies in Pulpit

Chapman, Kans. (U.P.).—There is no interruption in regular Sunday church services at the Lutheran and Methodist churches here if the pastors happen to be away, for their wives take over the duties.

Mrs. G. K. Mykland, wife of the Lutheran minister, is an accomplished preacher, and Mrs. J. P. Wiley, wife of the Methodist pastor, delivers a very creditable sermon whenever she fills the pulpit for her husband.

Pace Speeded By Legislators, But in Circles

By the United Press.

Sacramento, Calif.—Revolutions of California's circular Legislature have increased in speed with approach of the closing days of the session.

The lawmaking body is being called circular—among other things—becaues of its running in circles on important measures, particularly those dealing with taxation and revenue.

The joint revenue committee, appointed to work out a program which may solve the State's budget problems, moved slowly into what it hoped would be the homestretch, and the Assembly sat by awaiting the pounce on the committee's recommendations.

Circulating Movement.

Examples of the circulating movement, as portrayed by the steering group:

At its first meeting members voted 8 to 4 in favor of paying highway bond interest with gas tax funds. Later, in making a final stand, it voted 8 to 6 against the proposal.

First display of attitude on the proposal to transfer automobile taxes from counties and cities to the State showed the members deadlocked, 6 to 6. A week later the vote was 8 to 3 in favor of the plan.

The committee voted to levy a 66 cents a gallon tax on liquor, then raised the ante to 80 cents after some members insisted upon $1.

It voted 7 to 5 in favor of the principle of severance taxes, then neglected to discuss the question further.

It made no attempt to consdier procrastination, leaving the last fourth, or less, of the session for settlement of problems vitally important to the State and its inhabitants.

May Stay All Summer.

Some of the rebellious members, particularly the newcomers, have insisted they will "stay all summer" if necessary to get their bills out of committee. But if the Legislature continues to observe tradition, it will start jamming measures through later this month, when pay stops and hot weather makes fourth-floor committee rooms almost unbearable.

An optimistic note crept into the situation when Senator Duval displayed new financial estimates which indicated only $68,000,000 in new revenue, rather than $95,500,000, as outlined by Gov. Merriam in his budget message, would be necessary to meet State expenses during the next two years.

This $68,000,000 could be raised by means of the income tax already approved by the Assembly ($25,000,000); doubled franchise taxes, voted by the Assembly ($13.000,0 00 liquor and increased beer taxes ($8.000,000); increased inheritance tax ($3,000,000); ad valorem tax at 19 cents ($21,000,000). And there are a dozen other possibilities.

But in addition to wide disagreements, constant bickering and "pride of authorship" delaying action on these measures, there is the sales tax fight to contend with. The Legislature has not started its battle on food exemptions. And it must do something about unemployment relief.

English Pure And Undefiled

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

THIS article is addressed only to those who wish to use the best English, both in choice of words and in pronunciations. I mean of course in good conversation or in formal addresses; one would naturally use slang and colloquialisms in intimate talk or while watching a hockey game, etc. Quite all right; but why not use the best when the occasion calls for it? This is a matter partly of accuracy, partly of good taste.

And if I am able at sometimes to impart some information to my readers, I often receive as well.

• • • •

Dr. J. B. Rankin, of Hollis, Long Island, writes that the dictionaries give only the first syllable accented on primarily.

In the word "primarily," I put the accent on the first syllable. Is there any dictionary authority for putting it on the second syllable?

Now I have never accented that word except on the second syllable and I have never heard it accented on the first. However, I turn to my books, and I find the Oxford dictionary, also the Standard, give only the first, and the new Webster practically the same, although grudgingly, allowing the second. Hereafter, I shall accent on the first, except when I am in a hurry or angry.

Do not ever say flaunt when you mean flout. Do not say dove for the past of dive; say dived. Do not ever use the word gotten, under any circumstances, always say got.

• • • •

Never say I would like; it is always wrong; always say I should like.

Never say like he did; always say as he did, or like him.

Although the majority of English cultivated people say "It is me," I see no reason why we should make that surrender. Always say It is I. It is he, I am taller than he; don't be afraid of seeming affected; there are some persons who are afraid of using ordinary good language, for fear of being called "highbrows."

Some defend it is me because the French say c'est moi, but the moi there is not exactly like English me. For example, if you asked this question in French, "Who will take care of this old man?" a woman would accurately answer moi; she would not say je. But in English she would not answer me.

Never give any stress whatever, not even the least, to the third syllable of positively or evidently, or interesting.

gross receipts taxes after the first vote of 11 to 1 against the idea.

Members tentatively approved 11 tax plans which would raise an estimated $120,000,000 bienially, then turned around and started voting on them again.

Indicative of Fights.

Inability of the committee of 14 to get squared away quickly on a tax program was indicative of the fights which will develop in the Assembly when the group's recommendations are submitted.

Senator Walter H. Duval, chairman of the steering committee, said he hoped to draw a complete program, rather than submitting plans piecemeal.

The committee desired to prepare a program which would win the approval of the Assembly, confident the Senate would accept a logical tax layout if it went through the lower house. Yet, members voted for a lower rate income tax than that already approved by the Assembly, thereby paving the way for another major battle on that item alone.

Optimists believed the committee might be of geat aid in settling the tax controversy, but others felt committee consideration was largely a waste of time because they predicted the Assembly would pick any program to pieces regardless of the steering group's recommendations.

The Fifty-first Legislature has followed the habits of its predecessors by devoting three-fourths of the session to arguing non-essential measures and practicing general

Canal Spurs Trade In Coast Lumber

Big Increase in Shipments by Water Reported.

By the United Press.

Seattle.—West Coast lumbermen today looked to water transportation to place their product before consumers of the Mississippi Valley, greatest market of the Nation.

Heavy increase in shipments from Oregon and Washington mills to the Middle West by way of the Panama Canal, New Orleans and the Mississippi River, was reported by the West Coast Lumbermen's Association. The lumber moved by ocean steamer to New Orleans, up the Mississippi and tributaries by barge, and to the consumers by truck.

Officials believed the saving over rail rates, ranging as high as $10.80 per 1,000 feet, would build up new demands for Douglas fir, red cedar, spruce and hemlock in construction. Ultimately, it was believed, lumber will move by water as fa ras Pittsburgh.

Schedules of freight charges showed cost of rail shipments from Oregon and Washington to Mississippi River points between Vicksburg and St. Louis averaged $22.25 per 1,000 board feet for 12 by 12-inch timbers of standard lengths. The same can be moved by barge and steamer for $15.45, with a saving of $6.80.

The saving to Chicago was $4.51, to Evansville, Ind., $9, and to Cincinnati and Louisville, $10.80.

North Dakota to Open War on Grasshoppers

Fargo, N. Dak. (AP).—Another large scale offensive, requiring 16,450 tons of ammunition, is being launched against North Dakota's agricultural enemy, the grasshopper.

Approximately 3,329,340 acres must be poisoned against the pests, it is estimated by F. D. Butcher, entomologist with the extension service of North Dakota Agricultural College.

Of the 16,450 tons of poison bait required, counties will furnish 5,535. The remainder will come from the Federal Government.

Sunflower Seed Sales Make Crop Profitable

Bismarck, N. Dak. (AP).—The lowly sunflower is becoming a profitable crop for the North Dakota farmer and home gardener.

Sunflower seeds have been placed on the market and are sold for eating purposes, being most popular among the Russian population.

F. W. Christensen, of the live stock feeding section of the North Dakota Agricultural College, says sunflowers can be grown profitably as an ensilage crop instead of corn retired from cultivation by corn-hog contracts.

Each scholarship is valued at $1,000, paying full tuition for four years. Students receiving the scholarships are chosen from the high 10 per cent of their high school graduating class.

DePauw, it is said, awards more scholarships than any other university in the country. There were more than 500 Rector scholars on the campus this year.

Hose Section Unnecessary.

Hallowell, Me. (U.P.).—This town's fire department discovered that they have some unnecessary equipment. En route to a roof blaze, the hose section bounced off the combination hook and ladder hose truck and it wasn't discovered until their destination was reached. The firemen extinguished it with other equipment.

Coast Guard Men Train Wolf.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. (U.P.).—The 11-man Coast Guard crew stationed at Whitefish Point, which practically is isolated for three months during the winter, tamed a wolf cub during the past season. The cub now responds to the Coast Guardsmen's orders and resembles a well-trained police dog.

State Had 1,371 Forest Fires.

Olympia, Wash. (U.P.).—Washington had 1,371 fires during 1934, 223 of them incendiary and 448 blamed on smokers, State Forester T. S. Goodyear reported. Other causes were: Lightning, 70; campers, 161; slashing, 21; logging, 15; brush burning, 151; railroad, 54, and miscellaneous, 228.

Sending Sidney Skolsky, the Broadway columnist, 'way our West to report on Hollywood was just like sending the society reporter out to cover a war. That's what the Wise Guys along the Main Stem were saying not so long ago. "Oh, sure," they scoffed, "Sid is a good reporter and all that . . . but wait until he attends a Hollywood movie opening, or is tackled by a publicity-mad actress, or tries to understand a studio executive's English! He'll go nuts in a week."

Well, that was months and months ago. Sidney is still out in Hollywood, writing the best movie-gossip column ever sent out of that city of Celluloid, and the Wise Guys are weeping enviously into their beer, wondering how he did it. For Skolsky's column on Hollywood is better, more varied, more amusing than Hollywood itself. It's four-star stuff, with the smooth performance of a Myrna Loy, the direction of a Frank Capra, the glamour of the Cecil B. DeMille production, and the human interest of a Mickey Mouse cartoon.

Skolsky leaped into fame as a Broadway columnist with his "Tintypes of Broadway," those brilliant and interesting sketches of the famous and infamous which were later published as a best-seller. In those days, he was known as the Midnight Midget who found bright paragraphs in the bright spots. The Midget has grown up now and in Hollywood he has become acquainted with the Film Stars who frequent the Cocoanut Grove, and the Extras you'll find in the cheap beaneries. He knows Hollywood so well that he can recognize the Invisible Man!

After all, it's nice to read about Hollywood and know that you're getting the straight dope—the Real Skolsky. Usually, a Hollywood column is written with the assistance of two press-agents, a lot of gush, and a vivid imagination. That's why Skolsky is different. He has three waste-baskets in his office for the express purpose of filing publicity directors' blurbs. When Skolsky writes "The Gossipel Truth," Skolsky writes of the things he knows about Hollywood, not the ducky little tea-set Claudette Colbert bought last week. Skolsky writes of the how and why of movieland, about the bright cracks heard above the camera's clicks, of the "boners" which slip past the film cutter.

"Hollywood," by Sidney Skolsky, is better than a seat at your favorite movie . . . and you'll find it five days a week in

German Paper Says New Army Will Ban Jews

By the United Press.

Berlin, May 15.—The new military conscript law, to govern the proposed Reich army expansion, will be made public shortly, possibly simultaneously with Hitler's Reichstag declaration Tuesday night on the general rearmament question in Germany.

An inkling of its contents was given in the publication, The Black Corps, organ of Hitler's elite Storm Troopers, in an editorial today, attacking the Jews. It said:

"The Hitler government will not repeat the Kaiser government's mistakes" by accepting Jews in the new conscript army. Under the heading, "for Jews there is no room," the organ declared Jews will be banned even as privates.

The paper asserts German-Jewish leaders are trying hard to obtain admission of Jews into military service, aiming thereby, through the "back door," to regain their German citizenship.

It declared the Jews suggested formation of Jewish regiments, but that a prominent Jew said they would not be able to assume responsibility for loyalty to Nazi Germany in case of war.

In his talk Tuesday, Hitler was expected to discuss the conscript army plan, announced March 16, in violation of the arms restriction clauses of the Treaty of Versailles—a move which threw Europe into confusion and resulted in a series of international conferences and a Franco-Russian military alliance.

Community Center Events Scheduled

Dance Programs Arranged for This Week.

Several special springtime events for this week were announced yesterday by Elizabeth Peeples, director of the community center department of the public schools.

On Friday evening a program of children's dancing will be given at the Georgetown Experiment Community Center, Thirty-fifth and T streets, under the direction of Marjorie L. Schuster. A children's chorus, under the direction of Esther Linkins, will sing.

Also on Friday evening at the Ben Murch Community Center, Thirty-sixth and Ellicott streets northwest, there will be a dancing program marking the completion of the spring course in social dancing.

The Langley Junior High School will hold a dance on Friday at Eckington Community Center and on Saturday evening there will be a benefit dance at Fort Stephens Post, 306 Kennedy place northwest, for the Park View Community Center.

France, Russia Call Reich to Join Pact fighting ships went through their paces for him.

A proposed Eastern security pact, modeled after the Western Locarno Treaty, long has been hanging fire, with both Germany and Poland apparently very wary of the proposal.

Laval did not say what the next step would be, but intimated it was up to Poland and Germany to express their views.

He said the agreement would operate "within the framework of the League of Nations" and that a mutual assistance pact, similar to the Franco-Soviet accord, "is now in preparation" between Russia and Czechoslovakia.

Almas Temple Band Broadcasts Program

The first of a series of weekly broadcasts on the coming Shrine convention here was given last night over WJSV, with the famous Almas Temple band as a feature. The band was led by Fred Wilken.

Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general merchandising manager of the Hecht Co., pointed out that the visitors will spend between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000 while they are here. Other speakers on the program included C. Melvin Sharpe of the power company; Joe Turner, boxing impresario, and Edward F. Colladay, chairman of the telephone, telegraph and radio committee.

Blackfriars Nominate Wittler for President

Clarence Wittler has been nominated to succeed E. Francis McDavitt as president of the Blackfriars Guild. The election will be held in June. The Rev. Urban Nagle, of Providence College, Providence, R. I., was a guest at the nominating meeting.

Others nominated were Mrs. John Dillon Fitzgerald and Edgar M. Ford for vice president; Miss Adah May Brady and Miss Mary Ann LaCovis for secretary; Miss Marguerite Nordstrom, Catherine Lester, and Richard Roberts for treasurer; John Wilson and Dorothy Davidson for production manager, and James Norris for stage manager.

Tax Report Discussed By Trade Board Group

A special meeting of the municipal finance committee of the Washington Board of Trade was held yesterday at board headquarters to discuss the tax report recently submitted to the District Commissioners.

It is understood that three phases of this report, those recommending new public utilities taxes, bank taxes and bank deposit taxes, occupied the committee's interest.

Franco-Soviet Communique Opening Way for Germany on Security Treaty

By the Associated Press.

Joseph Stalin, Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Maxim Litvinoff and Pierre Laval have expressed their satisfaction over an accord signed at Paris May 2, 1935, which established mutual assistance obligations between Soviet Russia and France and fixed an interpretation of these obligations.

During their conferences in Moscow, May 13, 14 and 15, representatives of Soviet Russia and France took note of the spirit of friendly confidence created between them by that accord, the influence of which made itself felt in a study of all questions of collaboration between the two governments, both in a Franco-Soviet and a European sense.

They proceeded to that study with the greatest freedom and with the assurance that their efforts in all diplomatic enterprises discussed clearly tended toward the same essential goal: the maintenance of peace through the organization of collective security.

Agree on Obligations.

They were in accord in recognizing in the present international situation the obligations incumbent upon the countries sincerely desiring to safeguard peace, and which have shown that desire by participation in efforts for mutual guarantees.

Above all, the duty falls upon them, in the interest and maintenance of peace, not to allow the means of their national defense to weaken in any sense. In this regard M. Stalin understands and fully approves the national defense policy of France in keeping her armed forces at a level required for security.

The Soviet and French representatives also confirmed their resolution not to neglect efforts to increase, with the assistance of all countries, an adhering policy of peace, and the promotion of political conditions which could reestablish among peoples that confidence which is indispensable to the development of the material and moral interests of European collectivity.

No Delay in Pact Move.

It was agreed primarily that the conclusion of a pact of mutual assistance between Soviet Russia and France in no wise diminishes the interest, in seeking without delay the realization of a regional pact in eastern Europe which would join parties formerly taken into consideration in this regard, in an agreement based on engagements of non-aggression, consultation and non-assistance to an aggressor.

The two governments will continue to join their efforts to bring this about through the most appropriate diplomatic procedure.

In publicly making known these conclusions, the representatives of France and the U. S. S. R. feel that they affirm their loyal adherence to a constructive work which, far from excluding the participation of any party, can be fully accomplished only through free and sincere collaboration of all interested states.

Publisher Warns Of Reich Air Fleet

By the Associated Press.

London, May 15.—Lord Rothermere, publisher of the Daily Mail, told the House of Lords today that Germany has 10,000 bombing planes.

The publisher branded the British government's plan to expand the Royal Air Force by 1,000 planes as "childish and useless for defense."

"I say with full responsibility," he declared to the peers, "that Germany at the present moment has 10,000 bombing planes."

Germany's craft, the publisher said, "are of long range and high speed, capable of carrying a ton of high explosives."

Rothermere described the Reich as "a growing military power, far superior in strength, far superior for offensive purposes and full of aggression which may take at any time a hostile attitude in regard to this country."

4 Youths Held in Theft Of McIntyre's Auto

Four colored youths were arrested yesterday in connection with the theft of an automobile belonging to Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to President Roosevelt.

They were found allegedly stripping the car in a garage in the 1600 block of V street northwest.

Rumors of Greek Coup Strengthened

Ex-King and Wife Are Reported Reconciled.

By the Associated Press.

Athens, May 15.—The possibility that an early coup may be attempted by former King George was strengthened today by reports the deposed monarch has effected a reconciliation with his divorced wife, former Queen Elizabeth.

As the government lifted press censorship, which had been in force since the recent revolt, the newspaper Laikos Agon demanded George's immediate restoration to the throne and summary action against all sympathizers with the revolt.

The government remained silent on its attitude toward restoration, leaders declaring the June 9 elections would decide that question.

Senators' Club Banquet To Greet Initiates

The Senators' Club, a unit of Washington students at Catholic University, will hold its annual banquet tonight at Sholl's G street cafe, with the Very Rev. Dr. Edward G. Fitzgerald, O. P., university chaplain and club moderator, as the principal speaker.

Eleven freshmen bid into the organization in the traditional "tap day" ceremony on the campus, May 1, will be welcomed officially by both active and alumni members, headed by John M. Wigglesworth for the undergraduates and Joseph C. Suracia for the alumni.

Thousands See Pilsudski's Bier Pass to Church

Troops Lead Solemn March on Darkened Streets; Body Lies in State.

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, May 15.—The body of Joseph Pilsudski, dictator of Poland, was slowly borne through Warsaw's darkened streets tonight on the shoulders of 20 army officers from Belvedere Castle to St. John's Cathedral, where it will lie in state.

Over the 2-mile route ten officers on either side carried the specially wrought silver casket in recognition of the fact that the marshal in life carried the burdens of the army on his shoulders.

The procession passed through a solid lane of soldiers on both sides of the street, while thousands of persons with bowed heads jammed the sidewalks. All electric signs along the route were extinguished and street lights were covered with flags.

Troops Lead Procession.

Troops led and ended the procession, with members of the family, government leaders and foreign diplomats following immediately behind the casket.

The doors of the cathedral were thrown open to the public immediately after the procession's arrival, and will remain open until after a military funeral Friday. The body will then be taken to Krakow, where a national funeral will be held Saturday. A long line of mourning citizens formed immediately to view the body as a guard of honor watched.

From early morning, silent files of people passed through Belvedere Palace to pay homage to the old warrior, who died Sunday night. Children were given the right of way by special order because of the marshal's love for the young.

No Wreaths on Casket.

Men devoutly crossed themselves and women sobbed as they murmured prayers for the dead when they approached the simple bier, which was bare of funeral trappings. There were no wreaths. The only floral decorations consisted of two small bouquets of white and red tulips, the colors of Poland, which were placed at the foot of the bier by Pilsudski's two daughters, Wanda and Jadwiga.

Mme. Pilsudska, prostrated by grief, spent all day kneeling at the bier.

There was brilliant sunshine throughout the day, as was the case exactly nine years ago today when a successful coup by Pilsudski assured him the leadership of "independent Poland."

Manassas Group Donates Park Site

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 15.—Negotiations for the transfer of the "Henry farm" to the State Conservation and Development Commission to prepare the way for converting the Manassas battlefield into a national military park was announced today by Chairman Wilbur C. Hall.

The commission plans to transfer the farm, comprising about 140 acres, to the Federal Government as soon as plans for the park are completed with the National Park Service, Hall said.

The "Henry farm" property is being placed in the care of the State Commission by the Manassas Battlefield Association, which had acquired the tract as a step toward establishment of the park. State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, a leader of the association, conducted the preliminary negotiations with Hall.

Funeral Rites Today For Henry W. Young

Henry W. Young, for many years chief of the records section of the Government Printing Office, will be buried today at Glenwood Cemetery, following services at the S. H. Hines funeral chapel at 2 o'clock. He died on Tuesday.

Mr. Young, a native of New York City, entered the printing office at the age of 15 as a messenger. He was a member of the old Chamber of Commerce and the Washington Canoe Club. He lived at 912 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, and had retired from the printing office because of illness two years ago. He is survived by a brother, Lloyd Young, of this city.

Man Shot by Nephew Shows Improvement

Frederick, Md., May 15 (AP).—Physicians today reported slight improvement in the condition of Preston Mossburg, 36, who was accidentally shot by his 6-year-old nephew.

Mossburg was struck in the head by a bullet from a .22-caliber rifle last night as he was reading a newspaper in the home of his sister, Mrs. Gilmer T. Castle, here. The bullet passed through the cheekbone and was believed to have lodged in the base of the skull. Chief of Police Allen Bartgis held that the shooting was accidental.

Thomas E. Trazzare, Maker Of Presidents' Carriages, Dies

Capital Photo Service.

THOMAS E. TRAZZARE.

The man who made the carriages in which a succession of Presidents rode to their inaugurals is dead. He is Thomas E. Trazzare, 91, who died yesterday morning at his home, 1665 Harvard terrace northwest, after an illness of a few weeks.

At the turn of the century, diplomats, government officials and Washington socialites, vieing with one another in the fineness of the equippage in which they proudly paraded along Pennsylvania avenue behind high-stepping horses, turned to him for the best.

Before the days when auto horns replaced the clatter of horses' hoofs, the gold-lettered sign "Thomas E. Trazzare Carriage and Wagon Works" over his place at 456 Pennsylvania avenue, opposite Fritz Reuter's hotel and bar, was one of the city's best-known landmarks.

Mr. Trazzare was an artisan in an age when fine workmanship was appreciated. There were few members of his trade who could turn out as well-made a wheel in which all the spokes weighed exactly the same.

Fifteen years ago, when he realized that gasoline motors were here to stay and the day of his carriages was over, he retired to take care of his estate.

Born November 26, 1843, in the third year of President John Tyler's administration, he joined Company A, Ninth Maryland Infantry, Grand Army of the Republic, when he was only 17. He was an active member of the Kit Carson Post, G. A. R., here, being, at the time of his death, one of the 17 remaining members.

He retained his health and vigor to the end. There was nothing about the nonagenarian, who was a member of the Society of Oldest Inhabitants, to suggest his advanced years.

He was an active churchman, having been a steward of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church for 60 years.

His seven children, three sons and four daughters, all living in Washington, survive him. They are Dr. Charles W., J. Frank, Edwin E., and Miss Laura O. Trazzare, Mrs. H. S. France, Mrs. Nellie S. Jones and Mrs. Mabel T. Heinline.

Mr. Trazzare will be buried at Arlington. The time and place of the funeral services will be announced later.

Former State Auditor Assails County Boards

Richmond, Va., May 15 (AP).—Inefficiency and growing dependency on the State have resulted in county governments being deprived of many of their functions, former State Auditor T. Coleman Andrews today told the boards of supervisors of the First, Second, Third and Fourth Congressional Districts, meeting here.

When the State took over county roads, because the "majority of supervisors proved too inefficient to administer a road program," the boards lost their last real reason for existence, Mr. Andrews said.

"American Messiahs"

LAST YEAR, when The Unofficial Observer's "New Dealers" appeared in The Washington Post, it was said that a stick of dynamite had dropped on Capitol Hill.

Now, The Unofficial Observer has written a new book . . . another best seller . . . in which he reveals the facts regarding the "radicals" who may threaten our present Government. If "The New Dealers" opened your eyes, "American Messiahs" will make them blink with interest . . . and, mayhap, apprehension.

YOU CANNOT AFFORD to miss "American Messiahs." It will appear exclusively, before publication in book form by Simon and Schuster, in The Washington Post . . . May 19 through June 9. Watch for it—beginning this Sunday!

NOTE: "American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Washington Post. We have no hesitancy in asserting, however, that no more fascinatingly interesting material has yet been written concerning the political figures with whom the book deals.

Audience There But Einstein Had No Speech

He Exercises Genius' Right and Begs Off; Savants Chuckle, Adjourn.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 15.—Albert Einstein, the world's foremost scientist, scheduled to make an important scientific address to a distinguished audience here today, didn't have his speech ready and never spoke a word.

Like an embarrassed schoolboy, he arose before an audience so surprised that the dropping of a pin could have been heard, and with nothing but his famous smile exercised the prerogative of genius.

The radio had been cut in before him to broadcast his remarks. His audience was leaning forward in anticipation. Ambrose Swasey had come from Cleveland, McKeen Cattell from New York, and 12 distinguished scientists who had just received medals were sitting in the two front rows.

Newsmen Wait, Pencils Poised.

Then Nathan Hayward, president of the Franklin Institute, where the honor meeting was held, arose and said:

"Prof. Einstein wishes me to say that making an address is not merely a matter of good will, but rests on the knees of the gods."

Einstein, standing beside him, nodded slightly. Hayward continued:

"We hope that Prof. Einstein will write this paper later and that you all will soon have the pleasure of reading it in our proceedings. The meeting is adjourned."

Audience Chuckles.

The whole audience rippled with chuckles as the meeting broke up. On the formal, printed program Einstein's name appeared last with this legend.

"(Subject to be announced).

"Dr. Albert Einstein."

From officials of the institute it was learned that Dr. Einstein's subject was expected to be "Physics and Reality."

After the close of the meeting he joined the audience in seeing the stars in the Adler planetarium go through their paces, doing some of the things which his own mathematics have helped to explain.

At the meeting where he had been expected to be the principal speaker the institute presented him the Franklin medal and a certificate of honorary membership for his contributions of science.

9 at Hyattsville Draw Jail Terms

Court Deals Penalties in Variety of Cases.

Nine men were jailed yesterday after trial before Judge George B. Merrick in Hyattsville Police Court on charges ranging from vagrancy to larceny.

Four, arrested by State Policeman J. R. Miller, for the unauthorized use of the automobile of John P. Williams, of Riverdale, Md., were sentenced to six months in the House of Correction. They are Russell Edwards, of Worcester, Mass.; William Michael and Robert and Jack Leroy, all of New York City.

Benjamin Roth, of Hyattsville, charged with larceny of tools from W. H. Myers, of that town, was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. Antonio Hanzen, also of Hyattsville, was committed to jail for 10 days when he failed to pay a $10 fine for assault and battery on George Shuler.

Herbert Barbour, of Bladensburg, and Joseph Kock, of Hyattsville, were jailed for 5 days in forfeit of fines on disorderly charges. Leroy Gilmour, who said he had no address, was given 30 days in the jail at Upper Marlboro for vagrancy.

Padding of Rolls Charged to 'Big 3'

Building Trades Row Goes to D. C. Court.

By the Associated Press.

Charges that the "big three" building trades unions had padded their membership lists were placed before the District of Columbia Supreme Court yesterday in the American Federation of Labor building trades department injunction battle.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins was asked to determine whther the organization of seven unions headed by J. W. Williams, or the organization of 12 others headed by M. J. McDonough was the "legal" building trades department.

McDonough's counsel told the court that the carpenters, bricklayers and electricians—the "big three"—had padded their membership lists to obtain enough votes in the department convention to oust McDonough and other old officers seeking re-election.

Students Face Court Action For Nude Issue

Harvard Lampoon Editors, Proud of Sel-Out, Await Developments.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., May 15.—Student editors of the Harvard Lampoon, student humorous monthly, which yesterday was banned from news-stand sale and barred from the mails, tonight faced criminal action in consequence of their published satire on a nationally known magazine.

Assistant District Attorney William Andrew, after a conference with Police Chief Timothy Leahy, announced the case would be presented to the Middlesex County grand jury in June.

Obscene, Says Chief.

Chief Leahy said he believed the magazine, its pictured nudes and other allegedly offensive matter, to be obscene and blasphemous.

While authorities investigated to determine what students were responsible, editors of the Lampoon sat in their offices and awaited developments.

"Well, our 4,500 copies are almost a complete sellout, anyhow," Stephen Burnett, art director and treasurer of the Lampoon, commented. "We don't know yet whether we will publish an expurgated edition or not. In fact we are awaiting the officials' next move."

Seized in Provindence.

The Lampoon editors said little about the seizure of between 400 and 500 copies of the magazine in Providence, R. I., today. Although admitting that some of the student staff had mailed the magazine in Providnce, R. I., today. Although admitting that some of the student staff had mailed the magazines in the Rhode Island city, Brnuett tonight did not know whether they would attempt to reclaim the copies seized by postal authorities.

John F. Bacon, of Bridgeton, N. J., a first year law student, paid $5 court costs and prosecution was discontinued when he was arraigned in East Cambridge district court on a charge of loitering. Bacon was arrested last night during a student demonstration which accompanied a mock purge of the Lampoon.

Mrs. Ralph Wells Heads Woodside Woman's Club

Mrs. Ralph A. Wells was elected president of the Woman's Club of Woodside, Md., at the annual meeting yesterday at the home of Mrs. Ralph D. Smith.

Other officers elected were Mrs. C. A. Greenleaf, vice president; Mrs. H. J. Mehserle, recording secretary; Mrs. A. H. Gardner, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Howard P. Bailey, treasurer.

Paralysis Victims Aided by $653 Gift

Admiral Grayson Accepts Birthday Ball Funds.

A check for $653 was presented yesterday to Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, by a delegation of the D. C. Division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America. The check represented proceeds from the President's birthday ball given last January at the Hotel Mayflower and will be used principally for the prevention and treatment of infantile paralysis in the District.

Raymond J. Walker, head of the District NRA Compliance Board, and retiring president of the District Division, Young Democratic Clubs, was chief of the delegation which presented the check. Accompanying him were Paul A. Best, candidate for presidency of the club, Howard Stafford, Alva Patten and John D. Milligan, all members of the club.

In accepting the donation, Admiral Grayson congratulated the club for its initiative in "carrying out the ambitious program of entertainment that has resulted in this contribution to their worthiest of all causes."

Band Head, His Son and Director Accused.

By the Associated Press.

Asheville, N. C., May 15.—James R. Boyd, president of the First National Bank of Waynesville; his son, James R. Boyd, jr., and D. R. Noland, Waynesville business man and farmer, were indicted here today by a Federal grand jury on charges of violation of the banking laws.

Boyd, a former member of the State Legislature, was charged in two counts of borrowing $40,000 on January 16 and $38,000 on December 3? from the Chase National Bank of New York, without making a written report to the directors of the Waynesville bank as required by law.

His son, an employe of the bank, was accused in four counts of abstracting and misapplication of funds of the bank, the indictment alleging he misapplied personal checks which he issued at a time he had no account with the bank.

Noland, a member of the State board of agriculture, was indicted on three counts on charges of using his official connection with the bank to borrow funds in violation of the law. Noland is vice president and a director of the bank.

Women Oppose Statue of Lee In Arlington

Massachusetts W. R. C. Hurls 'Traitor' Epithet; Fish Answers.

The epithet "traitor" was hurled at the memory of Gen. Robert E. Lee, the great leader of the Confederate Army, in a petition filed in the Senate yesterday by the Massachusetts Woman's Relief Corps, opposing erection of a statue of Lee in Arlington National Cemetery.

"We believe it unseemly that a statue of any man or men who fought with the rebel forces with the object of overthrowing this Government should be recognized in this manner, regardless of whether it is Robert E. Lee or any other "traitor," said a resolution of the organization, which is an auxiliary of the G. A. R.

Defended by Fish.

Immediately, Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, who is sponsoring the bill, sprung to the defense of the general's memory. The bill provides for erection of an equestrian statue on the Lee homestead which was converted into a national cemetery after the Civil War.

"The first person to propose this statue," he said, "was Charles Francis Adams, of Massachusetts, who was a union officer and the son of President Lincoln's War Minister to England.

One of the leading proponents of the bill, Representative Fish said, was Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilly, the son of a Union veteran and himself a veteran of the Spanish and oWrld Wars.

To the assertion of the relief corps that the place where it is proposed to erect the statue is "hallowed b ythe remains of gallant men who were loyal sons of the blue," Fish asserted that it was also hallowed by 500 Confederate fighters. There remains were placed there at the instigation of President McKinley, who was a Union Army major.

Legislative Program.

Officials of the relief corps in Boston said the report was adopted as part of its legislative program. There was strong sentiment against the Lee statue in the organization, said Mrs. J. Wheeler, department president, but others, including herself, were willing to "forgive and forget."

"I personally am not opposed to it," she said, but as president of the corps I must abide by what the membership does. I can simply tell you that some members feel Lee was a traitor."

The secrtary of the department, Miss Mary Elliott, said that the resolution passed without any voice of protest.

"The report was simply accepted as read," she said. "It quoted President Lincoln as calling Lee a traitor."

In Pittsburgh, Va., Homer Atkinson, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, who left home to fight with Lee, branded the action of the auxiliary as "contemptible," the Associated Press reported.

Leaders of Southern organizations, for the most part, "did not deign to comment on the action of the Massachusetts organization."

Farley Attacks Renewed by Long

By the Associated Press.

Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, renewed his feud with Postmaster General Farley yesterday by introducing a resolution to authorize the Senate Judiciary Committee to investigate Government contracts with a view to determining whether legislation is necessary.

The Senate on Tuesday by an overwhelming vote killed a resolution through which Long had sought to have the Senate Postoffice Committee investigate Farley's alleged connection with certain public works contracts.

The resolution offered yesterday would authorize the judiciary committee to investigate such companies as James Stewart & Co., of New York, which Long has charged was assisted by Farley in obtaining a New York City Public Works contract. The resolution was referred to the judiciary committee.

"ALL THE FUN WAS GONE OUT OF LIFE"

says middle aged woman

Many women suffer from hot flashes, dizzy spells, nervousness and other annoying symptoms of the Change of Life. They get so blue and discouraged that life does not seem worth living."

Mrs. Matushek

"All the fun was gone out of life," complains Mrs. S. Matushek of 10907 Edbrooke Ave., Chicago. For five years I was going through a very bad time. I was nervous, had terrible headaches, could not climb stairs and felt swollen. Your Vegetable Compound worked wonders for me. It is a great medicine for any time of life, but especially at the Change and before motherhood. My daughter Lucille used to faint at the office. Your medicine helped her and helped my daughter-in-law too."

Scouts Will Take Excursion Down Potomac River Tonight

Accordion Band to Play for 2,200 Persons on Jamboree.

Under the May moon, with the strains of a 15-piece accordion band floating across the water, 2,200 persons will take the District Boy Scout Council's excursion down the Potomac tonight.

Points of interest along the way will be lighted by searchlight, described by Capt. Eppa Dodson, veteran Wilson Line skipper. His description will be relayed to the passengers by jamboree guides using megaphones.

Features of the excursion, which is being held to raise funds for new equipment and improvements of Camp Roosevelt, will include songs popular at the camp, which is scheduled to open its twenty-first season June 24.

Linn C. Drake, Scout executive in charge of arrangements, believes that the boat's capacity of 2,200 will be taxed. In case of an overload, tickets will be honored Friday or Saturday nights.

The boat will leave the Seventh street wharves at 7:30 p. m., returning about 10:45. Tickets may be obtained from any scout or from scout headquarters, 1018 Vermont avenue.

Mme. Coutinho Plans Benefit for Symphony

A musical program for the benefit of the National Symphony sustaining fund will be presented by Mme. Louise Coutinho on Monday night in the patio of the Carlton Hotel. Mme. Coutinho will be assisted by Conrad Bernier, composer-organist; Margaret Louise O'Brien, soprano; Gloria Masgoret, child dancer, and 13 young piano students.

Mr. Bernier's "Variations and Fugue" in C minor for two pianos will be played by the composer and Mme. Coutinho. The latter will also be heard in two piano solo compositions by Portuguese writers —"Fado" (Colaco) and "Rhapsody on Portuguese Themes" (Sousa). Miss O'Brien will sing a group of three lyrics—"Spray of Roses" (Bowles), "The Star" (Rogers) and "Songs My Mother Taught Me" (Dvorak).

Aged Couple Starve to Death, But Police Find $90 in Home

'Afraid to Spend It With Rent Due, Survivor Explains.

By the Associated Press.

Aberdeen, Scotland, May 15.—A tragedy of pride which spurned charity from friendly neighbors was laid bare here today with the discovery of the almost mummified bodies of an aged man and his sister dead two months of hunger.

Another sister lay on a plank bed in the house of death at 10 King street in a dying condition.

To police who broke into the house the 63-year-old woman, hardly able to speak, explained thus the presence of $90 found in the bare cupboard:

"We were afraid to spend the money for food for fear we would be unable to pay the rent."

Questioned as to how long it had been since she had eaten, she replied:

"I used to get a roll and a cup of tea at a nearby shop once—I don't remember how long ago that was."

A post-mortem revealed that the victims—Frederick Sutcliffe Summers, 61, whose family was once well-to-do, and his sister, 71—had been dead at least two months. But the surviving sister did not know they were dead.

"They are sleeping," she mumbled to the police. "Don't wake them, poor things, because when they are awake hunger makes them so unhappy that it makes me cry."

Summers, townspeople said, had never been seen outdoors since he failed to pass his final examination in law when he was a student at Aberdeen University. He took to his bed and there he had stayed for more than 40 years.

Plan for Probe Of Rail Funding Nears Victory

Senate Committee Gains Audit Unit's O. K.; Hits Utility Bill Critics.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee came a step nearer yesterday to winning a general investigation of railroad financing and at the same time released a report attacking critics of the bill to abolish all but "necessary" utility holding companies.

The committee, however, had at least one disgruntled member, Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, who contended he had not been permitted time to study the utility bill before being asked to report it out. He planned to submit a minority report, he said, and would consult Senator Dieterich (Democrat), Illinois. With Hastings, the Illinois Senator assailed the committee procedure as well as the sweeping authority contained in the bill to reorganize the power industry and bring it under Federal control.

Awaits Approval.

The railroad investigation, long sought by Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Interstate Commerce Committee, was approved yesterday by the audit committee and awaits only formal Senate approval of the $25,000 requested for the inquiry into railroad mergers and reorganizations during the last several years.

Wheeler said the investigation, when authorized, would be conducted in co-operation with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which he expected would begin work upon it at once. Senate hearings will begin next fall, he said.

In the committee report on the holding company bills drafted under supervision of Senator Wheeler, critics of the legislation were declared to be misleading the public.

Hold Changes Needed.

"Realistic regulation," the report said, "requires the readjustment of holding companies to a size and power and to a changed relationship to their operating subsidiaries and the communities served thereby, which will give regulation a chance to be effective."

That entails dissolving large scale companies, the report said, in order to "break down the concentration of the economic and political power now vested in the power trust."

Maryland Statue Dedication Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, May 15.—A statue "Freedom of Conscience," by Hans Schuyler, will be unveiled at 3 p. m. Saturday at St. Marys City. Both Gov. Harry Nice and ex-Gov. Albert C. Ritchie have been invited to attend.

The statue is a gift of the 23 counties of Maryland to the State, and will be placed in a triangle formed by the intersection of two roads leading to St. Marys City, Maryland's first capital.

R. Bennett Darnell, chairman of the executive committee of the Maryland Tercentenary Commission, will preside. Bishop James Freeman, of Washington, will give the invocation and the Right Rev John M. McNamara, of Washington, will pronounce the benediction.

Bazaar in Hagerstown Attended by Thousands

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 15.—Several thousand persons visited the opening of the Kiwanis Club bazaar at the Armory tonight, after thousands of school children had witnessed a preview in the afternoon. The bazaar features a "hobby" show, in which scores of "hobbies" of local people are shown.

A display of Civil War relics, arranged by Capt. John Kyd Beckinbaugh, superintendent of the Antietam Battlefield, attracted considerable attention, as did a model garden by the Hagerstown Garden Club, crippled children exhibit by the Kiwanis Club and a milk fund exhibit by the Lions Club. The bazaar will continue through Saturday.

Virginia Relief Pay Roll Reaches Highest Point

Richmond, Va., May 15 (AP).—The pay roll for persons engaged on work-relief projects in Richmond last week was $15,801.49.

This sum was distributed among 1,830 individuals, and represented the largest week's pay roll, both in the amount of money and the number of persons receiving it, Marcellus E. Wright, jr., projects engineer of the W. P. A., said today.

Virginia Crop Outlook Good, Statistician Says

Richmond, Va., May 15 (AP).—Crop prospects in Virginia on May 1 were good because of weather conditions favorable for hay, pastures, small grain, and fruit, Henry M. Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician, reported today.

Wheat acreage remaining for harvest was figured at 608,000, an increase of about 4 per cent over last year. Estimated production now is 6,748,000 bushels, compared to 8,012,000 last year.

Margot Flick Brings Black Eye To Court in Ex-Butler's Suit

As Servant Entered Room She Was in Pajamas, Court Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—Attractive Margot Flick, her appearance slightly marred by a discolored eye, testified today in the $100,000 slander suit brought by the impeccably dressed William Lawrence Graham, the Flick butler, who claims his reputation was damaged when he was discharged for allegedly entering her bedroom.

Called to the stand after Graham rested his case, Miss Flick, who with her mother, Mrs. Henrietta Flick, of New York and Lenox, Mass., is being sued by the butler, testified:

"Graham, without knocking, walked into my bedroom and started to tell me he was sick and could not return to Lenox."

"How were you dressed?" she was asked.

"In sleeping pajamas. I told him this was not the time or place to discuss his sickness and I told him he should have spoken to Mrs. Flick before she left."

She said she telephoned her mother and was advised to send Graham to a hospital if he was ill. She made no reference to having informed her mother of Graham entering her room.

Explains Black Eye.

"I notice a discoloration on your face," Graham's counsel remarked after Miss Flick testified she had not been in an accident.

"I hit myself on the corner of a bureau yesterday," she explained before leaving the stand to return as the first witness when the suit is resumed tomorrow.

Margot's testimony was preceded by that of Philip De Ronde, chairman of the Board of the Phoenix Securities Corporation, a surprise witness, who told of Graham, then his butler, chasing him around a dining room table 12 years ago with a carving knife.

De Ronde said he read of the case in the newspapers and recognized Graham as his former butler-valet. Graham has testified he had worked for such persons as Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy, Col. H. H. Rogers and other "best" people.

Drinking Charged.

"At dinner one evening," said De Ronde, a former Army major, "I noticed unmistakable signs of intoxication. I followed him (Graham) to the kitchen and accused him of intoxication. He admitted he had been drinking.

"With that he grafted a carving knife, chased me into the dining room and around my own dining room table," said De Ronde, explaining he telephoned police for assistance in disarming the butler.

"So it haunted you for 12 years?" asked Graham's counsel.

"Of course," he replied. "Being chased around my own dining room table with a carving knife will always haunt me."

Counsel for the Flicks moved for dismissal of the suit when Graham, who claims he lost his three-month bride because of his discharge, rested. The court reserved decision on the motion.

Smith, Fairmont, recorder; Everett A. Leonard, Bluefield, standard bearer; Stanley T. Patton, Moundsville, swordbearer, and James W. Carter, Clarksburg, warden. They will be installed at the closing session tomorrow.

New Drive Asks First Lady Aid Baby Bond Sale

Speeches to Bring Wide Distribution Planned Against Inflation.

By the Associated Press.

New tactics designed to achieve a wide distribution of "baby bonds" as a means of combating inflationary demands yesterday were reported by the Treasury sales managers.

More life was to be put into the selling campaign by requesting prominent women, including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, to urge by radio purchases of the "baby bonds," so called because issued in denominations as low as $25.

The campaign was being conducted by Chester T. Crowell and James William Bryan, financial writers. From Secretary Morgenthau they had instructions to get bonds into the hands of as many small investors as possible without conducting a "high-pressure drive."

"The psychological effect of having a large number of bondholders tends to stability and soundness in government," Crowell said, adding that the Administration's purpose in launching the bonds was for a "fight on inflation."

Only $81,000,000 of these bonds have been sold since they were offered March 1. Buyers number about 90,000. Morgenthau, however, said the sales were about "up to expectations."

Bryan, who has charge of the radio phase of the campaign, said the purpose of selling the bonds was "to stimulate among the people greater interest in all Government financing—debt, taxes, and expenditures."

Besides Mrs. Roosevelt, it was planned to have Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Representatives Caroline O'Day (Democrat), New York, and Mrs. Florence P. Kahn (Republican), California, and Miss Marion Bannister, assistant treasurer of the United States, among those making sales talks over the radio.

Shoemaker Is Named To Tax Collectorship

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 15.—E. A. Shoemaker, of Woodbine, was appointed tax collector of Carroll County at a special meeting of the county commissioners here yesterday.

Mr. Shoemaker, who will assume his duties July 1, replaces C. Robert Brilhart, of Manchester. Miss Martha Smith, of Pleasant Valley, has been named assistant to the tax collector, a position now held by Miss Eleanor Thomas, of Westminster.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office

By Morgan Baker.

SALARIES were paid in cash yesterday at AAA for the first time amid widespread confusion that almost completely disrupted the entire day's work. At 3:30 p. m. when the day shift quits, there were still lines of several hundred employes before the paymaster's desk.

BAKER.

Only three persons were seen handling the pay roll of approximately 3,000 employes in the Old Post-office Building. It was estimated that more than half of the personnel in the P. O. branch failed to receive their pay envelopes. In the congestion and hours of waiting in the line, going through the red tape of signing two different receipts, etc., several women became hysterical. Added to the disruption of the regular work routine were the visits throughout the day of hundreds of farmers who are here on a pilgrimage to boost the AAA.

The usual pre-pay-day borrowing of lunch money, car fare and so on arose to universal proportions yesterday as the few who received their pay made loans to their less fortunate colleagues. And a weary day was experienced by all.

High Federal officials, including Senator and Mrs. Patrick A. McCarran, Representative and Mrs. Robert Ramspeck; William H. McReynolds, administrative assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. McReynolds; Alvin W. Hall, Director, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and Mrs. Hall, were guests last night at a benefit theater party at the National Theater. The party was given by the Women's Union, local No. 103, N. F. F. E., of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Governmental Forum Today.

"The Consumer Debt Study" will be given in dialogue at 7:15 today by the George Washington University Forum, with three Government experts participating.

N. H. Engle, assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will take the role of "Joe Sales," a retailer; Wilford L. White, chief of the Marketing Research and Service Division, in the role of "Doc," a professional man, and H. T. LaCrosse (P), who handles the credit phase of marketing research, as "Ed Buyers," a consumer.

A series of similar programs, to be presented by the G. W. U. school of government, is planned for the summer, in which various phases of governmental activity and service will be discussed.

GOVERNMENT specialists are scheduled to take an active part on the program of the thirtieth annual meeting of the American Association of Museums, which convenes at the Willard Hotel May 23. Among those who will give papers are:

Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., archeologist, Bureau of American Ethnology, on "A Camp Site and Workshop of Folsom Man."

Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt, curator of marine invertebrates, National Museum, on "To the Galapagos and Back With the Hancock Pacific Expeditions."

Verne E. Chatelain, chief, historical division, National Park Service, on "Interpreting American History by Park Museum Methods."

Carl P. Russell, field naturalist, National Park Service, on "The Significance of the Museum in the Educational Program of the National Park Service."

Theodore T. Belote (P), curator of history, National Museum, on "Numismatics and the History Museum."

In addition, at the general session of the education section on the morning of May 25 the following are among the speakers scheduled:

Miss Hilda W. Smith (F), specialist in workers' education, FERA; Dorsey W. Hyde, jr., special assistant to the archivist, National Archives, and Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian of the District Public Library.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P, or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Earl Carroll's Vanities; screen, Charles Butterworth, in "Baby Face Harrington"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Frederic March and Charles Laughton in "Les Miserables"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (second week of Lionel Barrymore, Bela Lugosi and Elizabeth Allen, in "Mark of the Vampire").

A Little Late!

This month the Gods will set, we hear—
Efficiencies are settled,
So it's scant wonder all appear,
To be so finely fettled.

Now none, it's useless to relate,
Would crave a lowly showing;
But isn't it a trifle late
To do a whole year's mowing?

Kingsford-Smith Names Aid As 'World's Greatest Hero'

Climbed on Plane Wings 6 Times in Storm, Averting Sea Plunge.

By the Associated Press.

Sydney Australia, May 15.—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australia's trail-blazing aviator, said, "I thought we were gone" today after he and two companions won a fight for life over the storm-lashed Tasman Sea in the veteran airplane, The Southern Cross.

Nervously puffing on a cigarette, the haggard and drawn Kingsford-Smith gave all the credit for their escape from death to his navigator, Capt. P. C. Taylor.

It was Taylor who, after one of the three motors dropped into the sea, coolly risked death by climbing six times out on the plane's wings, despite howling winds, to transfer oil in the two sputtering motors. Unable to get altitude, the ship then was almost in the water.

Motor Drops Into Sea.

They were 850 miles out to sea bearing a cargo of special jubilee mail to Wellington, N. Z., when a propeller and the motor tore loose and plunged into the sea, throwing an extra burden on the other two motors.

"No other man in the world could have done it," said Sir Charles of Taylor's feat. "When the port motor went out Taylor said: 'You stall her while I crawl out to see if I can get oil from the bad motor.' And he did it not once, but six times."

Taylor, Sir Charles said, took a vacuum flask and plunged to a strut in a terrific wind filled it with oil from the disabled starboard motor, then climbing back, emptied the lubricant into the port motor, which had petered out from lack of oil.

World's Greatest Hero.

Calling Taylor "the world's greatest hero," he explained the plane's wings were almost touching the waves when Taylor revived the sputtering center motor with the pint of pressure oil in the nick of time.

Taylor himself modestly stayed in the background, but finally grinned and said, "once is enough. That is all I can say."

The fliers dumped the jubilee mail into the sea and turned about when misfortune overtook them. All Australia was on edge as terse wireless messages told of the plane's plight.

Kingsford-Smith once sent out an S O S message after expressing the hope "Sydney will have a fast destroyer handy." Later he said, "Afraid I am in sea." But after their gruelling battle the fliers conquered and brought the Southern Cross to Sydney.

Chinese Girl Flier Falls 2,000 Feet

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., May 15.—Hurled from a tossing airplane 2,000 feet in the air, Miss Ya Ching Lee, reputedly America's only Chinese woman student pilot, escaped with nothing worse than a wetting in San Francisco Bay here today.

As she plunged dizzily toward the Oakland Airport after her safety strap broke, the Chinese woman pulled the rip cord of her parachute. The big bag caught the wind and drifted over the bay.

A Naval Reserve amphibian roared to her rescue. Lieut. H. Sartores and Chief Aviation Pilot R. A. Madley pulled the aviatrix from the water ten minutes later. "I'm cold and I lost my shoe," was Miss Ya's only complaint.

Officials of the aviation school where she is a student declared her presence of mind qualified her for high rating when her course is completed.

Virginia Nurses' Leader To Discuss 8-Hour Duty

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., May 15.—An address emphasizing eight-hour duty for private nursing and outlining changes necessary in the curricula of nursing schools of the State, to keep pace with national standards, will be delivered here tomorrow night by Miss Frances Helen Zeigler, of Richmond, president of the Graduate Nurses Association of Virginia, as the group opens a three-day annual convention.

The session, thirty-fifth in the history of the organization, will open with a dinner for the board of directors.

Independent Phone Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 15.—Owners of independent telephone companies will gather here for the first annual convention of the West Virginia Independent Association to be held June 13 and 14. About 70 independent companies will be represented, according to G. H. Mahon, of Wayne, secretary of the association.

DID THE SPRING RAINS WRECK YOUR ROADS?

THIS spring, as every spring, newspapers in many states report the break-up of roads.

As the rainy season gets in its ruinous work many roads are made almost impassable with mud, wash-outs, washboards, ruts, bumps, and chuck-holes. Highway departments are forced to post load restrictions, warnings and detours until the repair crews can do their work.

But there is no spring break-up on concrete roads. Continuity of service is one of their major advantages. They are reliable, trustworthy every month of the year. Maintenance costs are reduced to a minimum.

Yet first cost of concrete is less than that of any other pavement of equal load-carrying capacity. Swift but safe—visible at night—smooth but non-skid—saving in gas, oil, tires and car repairs, concrete is indeed the standard by which all roads are judged.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

Capt. C. S. Miller Assigned Here From Ft. Myer

Cavalry Officer Made Chief of Historical and Information Section.

Capt. Charles S. Miller, Third Cavalry, Fort Myer, Va., has been selected as chief of the historical and information section of the Chief of Cavalry's Office here. He has taken over his new duties, his principal work involving the secretaryship of the United States Cavalry Association and the editorship of the Cavalry Journal.

The Journal, published bimonthly, is the official organ of the Cavalry Association, and is devoted to the dissemination of military art and science news, with particular reference to cavalry and to the promotion of professional improvement of Cavalry Association members.

Capt. Miller was selected because of his background of newspaper and magazine work, together with his varied experiences as a Cavalry officer and his wide acquaintanceship among Army officers.

A native of Muscatine, Iowa, Capt. Miller was graduated from Louisiana State University, receiving the degrees of bachelor of arts and bachelor of law, and entered the Regular Army from the Louisiana National Guard.

Among other assignments, Capt. Miller has served with the Twelfth Cavalry on the Mexican border as a troop commander and adjutant of the regiment, and recently completed a four-year tour of duty as adjutant of the Cavalry School, Fort Riley, Kans.

Capt. Miller was graduated from the Cavalry School, Fort Riley; the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and the Army Industrial College here.

Capt. and Mrs. Miller will reside at 3508 Thirty-sixth street northwest.

THE AURORA BOREALIS is no more a glory of color than thousands of spring wardrobes now in the making. Bright splashes of crimson, soft touches of green, blues, purples and yellows lend life and harmony to coats, suits, hats and dresses.

Many a woman is in a quandary over what type shoes to wear with her varicolored frocks. She knows that to be perfectly groomed she must select her shoes for a pleasing contrast, or else to match. But then comes the question of how to find shoes which are the special shade she needs. If her budget is limited, several dyeing jobs total up alarmingly.

Her problem is solved by the advent of a certain shoe dye which she herself can apply with the greatest of ease. It comes in 120 different shades, which include stable colors and off-shades, ranging from pale to deep.

It can be used successfully on white satin, crepe, moire, and linen fabrics. Its versatility regarding materials, as well as colors, enables one to use it for sports costumes as well as evening slippers.

This dye can be used full strength, or diluted to meet your approval. It costs only 50 cents a bottle and is certainly a grand convenience for adding that extra bit of chic to your summer wardrobe.

Novelty Pocketbooks.

A gingham dog and calico cat, side by side on the counter sat. Mothers who had brought the youngest members of their family on the shopping tour were forced to stop in front of the amusing pair while the children exclaimed with pleasure. The girls of five and thereabouts were especially thrilled, for, indeed, it isn't just every day in the week one runs up against a calico cat or a gingham dog, especially such a useful couple. Both cat and dog in this instance are funny little pocketbooks which zip open and closed. Inside there's lots of room for everything a little girl might need in her purse. They are modestly priced at $1 each.

Summer Accessories.

Now that summer seems to be coming in earnest you want to keep your eyes open for those flattering accessories, which will make your inexpensive little warm-weather models look like four times what you paid for them. You should certainly stop by a downtown store and see what they're offering for $1.

There's a belt, neckerchief and a kerchief—all for this small sum. They come in tropical looking prints, in polka dots, plaids and solid colors. Take one look at them and you'll see in a minute what they will do for a simple, white frock, what a gay touch they give and what a volume of chic they represent!

Tinted Lilac Jewelry.

Lilac is not only popular as a perfume and a flower but as a color as well. Those who'd like some softly tinted lilac jewelry to match or blend with a new ensemble will find quite elegant looking bracelets, clips, and earrings in a local store. These are made from a transparent composition, looking like clear ice, lilac tinted.

Yarn Holders Offered.

Known as the "Merry Whirl" is a certain tricky yarn holder. The yarn, several balls of it, fit over the stem. A little ridge keeps them in place. A handle at the other end enables you to swing the holder over your arm while you knit.

It's both practical and simple and an inestimable aid in keeping your yarn from tangling. Yours for 50 cents.

What Today Means

"TAURUS."

IF MAY 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m.

Be careful today that some action on your part is not misconstrued. Arguments will very likely cause disagreements, so be tactful and avoid them. Confidence on the part of the buyer in the seller probably will be the basis on which most purchasing will be done today, and the wise business man will try to inspire it. An influential connection may be gained through a social contact, so it might be advisable to go wherever you are invited.

There is danger in misquoting something you may read or hear, so be cautious. You may be placed in the position of having someone try to make you assume the responsibility of a mistake. You will commit an error of judgment if you let them shoulder the blame on you. Married and engaged couples, as well as those engaged in love making, should make every effort to be entertaining and refrain from discussing unpleasant topics.

Byron's Analysis of Love Disputed by Psychiatrist

By Virginia Lee Warren.

"MAN'S LOVE is of man's life a thing apart, 'tis woman's whole existence," may have been considered the last word when Byron wrote it, but today it strikes one of this country's most important women psychiatrists, Dr. Koren Horney, of New York, as downright old-fashioned.

The woman who makes love the center of her existence has no greater chance for a full, satisfying life today than the woman who throws herself into a career, Dr. Horney believes. It all depends on the individual, she explained yesterday at the Mayflower, where she is attending the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

The fairly prevalent idea that all women who go in for careers have been, are, or are about to be, frustrated is merely a cultural belief to Dr. Horney's way of thinking.

Years ago, she pointed out, there were no interests for women but wifehood and motherhood. Naturally those two things were considered essential to their happiness. But now, with so many careers open to them, a good many women have learned their true happiness lies in other directions than marriage, Dr. Horney said.

Depends on Individual.

"Of course to some persons always the woman who chooses a career is compromising with life, is trying to be content with second best," she continued. "Whether that is true depends upon the individual. It certaidly does not apply to all career women."

However the business or professional woman who sets out to prove that her ability is superior or at least equal to man's is suffering from a sense of insecurity within herself, Dr. Horney is convinced.

"We see often a woman who is determined to be boss over men," she said. "Either that is because the woman is insecure within herself or because she has a natural hostility toward men. The girl who delights in flirting, in breaking men's hearts, is working out that same hostility in another way."

The doctrine advanced by some modern thinkers that women would be better off if they yielded more readily to their emotions instead of suppressing them gains no support from Dr. Horney.

Control Necessary for Happiness.

"The person who lets her emotions rule her is likely to be even more miserable than the person who suppresses them," she declared. "Control is the thing necesasry for happiness. Suppression usually means the person does not understand her own emotions, does not know the extent of them. Control is based on knowledge. The woman who controls herself perfectly has studied her emotions thoroughly, knows all there is to know about them."

At the meeting of the American Psychiatric Association yesterday afternoon, Dr. Horney read an abstract on psychic bisexuality. As she put her material in order earlier in the day she reviewed some of her opinions on the subject.

"Sometimes," she said, "the wish of a woman to be a man, whether expressed or sub-conscious, means only the desire to have attributes ascribed to a man. She knows men are supposed to be aggressive, dominant, intellectual; women are supposed to be submissive, intuitive. Therefore a woman who thinks she wants to be a man may want only to be aggressive and intellectual. And a man who is naturally shy and unassertive may think he wants to be a woman because it would fit in better with his nature to be submissive."

Frequently the woman who wants to take unto herself masculine attributes is motivated by a sado-masochistic drive, Dr. Horney explained. By taking on the man's brutality, she pointed out, the woman can give way to her impulses for cruelty.

Question Pondered.

But are men really aggressive, dominant, intellectual? Are women really submissive, intuitive? Those are the things Dr. Horney is still wondering about.

"Undoubtedly there are mental differences between the sexes but I'm sure they are not as rigid as most persons believe," she said. "Most of those differences are based on belief, not on fact. For instance, there is one small country, I forget the name of it, where the men are considered gentle and delicate while the women are considered brutal and aggressive. Yet biologically they are the same as we are in the United States. All innate trends are so hopelessly tangled with education and environment it is almost impossible to identify them."

Dr. Horney believes women are no more masculine intrinsically than they ever were.

"It just seems that way because our beliefs do not keep pace with our customs. When I was a girl it was considered masculine to study. Now women engage in study as much as men. Yet that makes them no more masculine within themselves. And so it goes. Things that were considered masculine yesterday are feminine today."

Most Prodigies Of Native Stock, Survey Reveals

The great majority of child prodigies is of American stock, a recent survey of gifted children at Boston University Graduate School has revealed.

The survey showed that if the parents of the talented children were not native born they usually were English, Scotch, Jewish or German. Miss Mary Digou, who made the survey under direction of Dr. Wayland F. Vaughan and Prof. Judson R. Butler, disproved in her studies the popular idea that a child prodigy usually becomes pathological or is subject to nervous disorders.

The survey also discounted the belief that great men "owe it all to mother."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Could you give me a few specific points on how to overcome the handicap of shyness? I am a normally intelligent person of average appearance, yet when at a party or in a group with which I am not very familiar I become ill at ease and dull and silent as the proverbial clam.

How can one gain self-confidence, poise and a "line?" Are these things born and not made? I have a sense of humor, am well educated and well read, yet I still retain this supersensitive shyness which has made me a social hermit.

* * * *

I think my case began years ago in a dancing school I was compelled to attend. Being pug-nosed and freckled, I was scorned by the little boys who left me to sit with a tight forced smile in the corner while the dancing teacher dragged certain unfortunate ones to dance with me.

* * * *

I have some very dear friends whom I have known a long time and who seem to enjoy my company. I even have the reputation among them for being witty. But how can I impress strangers enough to make them want to talk with me again? Thank you for any suggestions. TIMID SOUL.

Cure for Timidity.

DEAR TIMID SOUL: Since self-consciousness is the root of shyness, the only cure is self-forgetfulness. Shyness itself is largely a demonstration of egotism. While a little girl of dancing school age may be excused for letting awareness of freckles, pug nose and the hostile reaction of ill-mannered little boys make her miserably shy, the same excuse can not apply to a normally intelligent adult, well educated, well read, and possessing average appearance and a sense of humor.

* * * *

There's an element of poor sportsmanship in the person who chronically refuses to play the social game because Nature didn't provide him with a foolproof hand of cards. Plainness, even downright ugliness, has never been a serious social handicap to the girl who intelligently compensated this lack by developing other compelling attributes, such as chic, spontaneity, friendliness, skill at games, and so on.

* * * *

Obviously the reason your longtime friends find you a witty and enjoyable companion is because you take their favorable reaction for granted, and hence feel free to be yourself. But when confronted by strangers, you probably become so anxious to stage a star performance that you freeze with stage fright. Subconsciously, you regard yourself as the prima donna of the occasion. If you will remember that beneath the surface, everyone is always more or less thinking in terms of "I"—seeing himself as the center of the spotlight—and will obligingly forget yourself and contribute to this conviction, you should find yourself making new friends rather easily.

* * * *

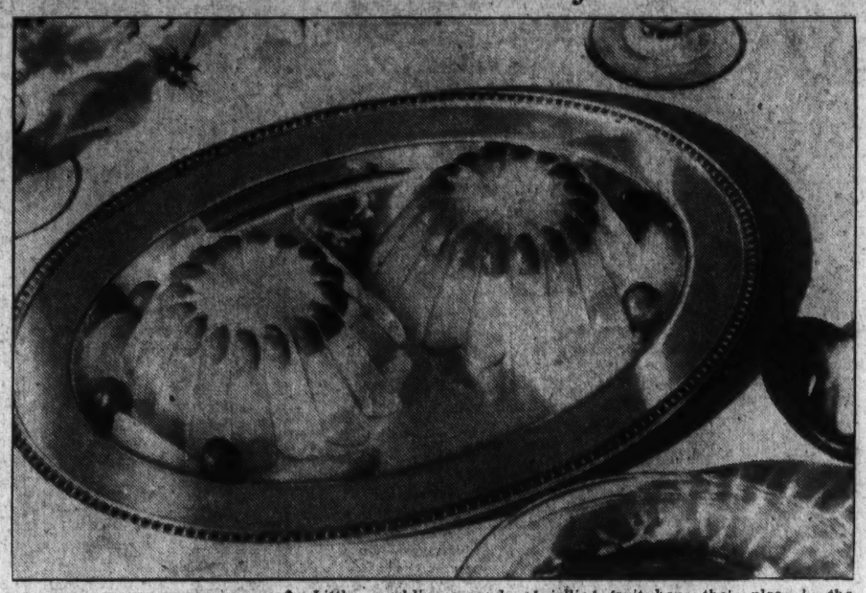
Gaining a "line" is easy. Talk about the person you're talking to, always. Poise comes from mastering difficult situations. It is only acquired by functioning intelligently and courageously, in the social sphere as well as in every other realm of human activity. Self-confidence and poise—true poise, not a synthetic shell of cool, wary reserve—are practically synonymous.

* * * *

You can impress strangers enough to make them want to talk with you again if you will never, never make the mistake of trying to impress them; but on the contrary, send them away convinced that they have impressed you tremendously. M. H.

Appeal to Both Sight and Taste Makes Fresh Fruit Ideal Base for Cocktails



Little, sparkling mounds of jellied fruit have their place in the realm of appetizers. They should be served on small, individual plates of silver or glass, garnished with mint leaves or watercress.

Bouquet Appetizer Especially Tantalizing for Luncheons; Pineapple and Strawberry Recipe Simple and Attractive.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF IT IS from the point of beauty for a special party that you are choosing your appetizer, or merely in hopes that it will be a successful pick-me-up before dinner, try the tart, tantalizing effect of a fresh fruit cocktail.

Something that is bound to create a sensation at a shower luncheon is the bouquet cocktail. These cocktails, fashioned to look for all the world like an old-fashioned nosegay, may be made of seasonable fruit. First, fill broad-stemmed glasses with small red ripe strawberries, which have been washed and hulled. Have the fruit as smooth on top as possible. Garnish the glass with a frilled white paper doily which has been pasted close to the rim. Turn the ruffle of the doily outward so that the effect will be the same as that of an old-fashioned bouquet. Tuck fresh, green mint leaves between the edge of the frill and the berries and place a sprig of the mint in the center of the bouquet. Small, white seedless grapes may be placed between each mint leaf and a few may be scattered among the strawberries.

Sugar Will Mar Appearance.

The appearance of sugar will mar the effect of the bouquet, so use ripe berries. For an unusual and piquant flavor, try dipping each berry in red wine before placing in the glasses.

Little, sparkling mounds of jellied fruit served on small, flat glass or silver plates have found their place in the realm of appetizers. This basic recipe for an orange and maraschino mold, may be varied with seasonal fruits. Make it this way:

Dissolve one package of orange or lemon flavored gelatin in one pint of warm water. Arrange six cherries which have been cut in eighths in the bottom of individual molds. Pour on the warm gelatin, being careful not to disarrange the cherries. Add orange sections from two oranges. Chill until firm. Unmold and serve on flat plates with a garnish of fresh mint leaves. This amount serves six. Any fresh berries may be substituted for the maraschino cherries.

Simple Fruit Cocktail.

One of the simplest and most attractive fruit cocktails is the strawberry and pineapple combination arranged in the following way: Select firm ripe strawberries of good size. Wash, but do not remove the hulls and set them away to chill. Cut fresh pineapple in wedges and let it chill. On small, flat individual plates arrange a little pyramid of powdered sugar surrounded alternately with strawberries and pineapple wedges. This type of fruit cocktail may be eaten with the fingers, but will demand finger bowls.

Sometimes, when a number of fruits are combined, the whole mixture can be drawn together into a more subtle flavor by the addition of a contrasting fruit juice, sugar and perhaps a little ginger ale. The following fruit cocktail combines all of these features plus a dash of candied ginger before it reaches the height of perfection.

Ginger Fruit Cocktail.

4 tablespoons pineapple cubes
1-3 cup orange sections
1-3 cup peach cubes
1-3 cup sugar
1-3 cup fresh strawberries, cut in strips
¼ cup lemon juice
¾ cup ginger ale
1 tablespoon candied ginger

Sprinkle fruit with lemon juice and sugar. Chill; pack ginger ale in ice. Just before serving, pour ginger ale over fruit, arrange in cocktail glasses, and sprinkle with finely chopped ginger.

Overindulging Old Age Peril, Cutter Warns

Says Liver Will Surrender After Years Without Complaint.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN yesterday's article we noted some of the important functions that the liver is called upon to perform, and it would seem strange indeed if an organ so active were not now and then the seat of disease. It is such a huge mass of tissue that while it has great powers of recovery it can be seriously damaged by abuse and infection.

Overeating and the persistent use of alcohol place an added load upon the liver, to which it will respond without complaint for many years, only to surrender finally and manifest symptoms that are anything but pleasant. The slight swelling of the liver that usually follows a very heavy meal may bring on merely a sense of fullness. Occasionally the liver will be tender and there may be a slight, dull ache.

Whenever the heart is not quite up to par there may be some back pressure of blood, and this will lead to enlargement of the liver. If the condition is temporary there is rarely more disturbance than would follow an excessive intake of food. If the pressure continues, however, changes in the liver cells will occur, reducing the secreting power of the organ.

Cirrhosis Comes Late in Life.

Cirrhosis, or hardening of the liver (scar tissue formation), seldom occurs in early life, as it is, in most cases, the result of years of insults through the agency of toxins. Substances such as alcohol, the products of bacterial infection, or chemical poisons may be brought to the gland from the intestinal tract. The Mohammedans and the Chinese, who are not habitual users of alcohol, present cases of liver cirrhosis. In these races the disease is attributed to the use of highly seasoned foods, the seasoning acting as a constant irritating factor. Furthermore, it has been shown experimentally that bacteria injected into the blood will bring on cirrhosis. As the disease progresses there is a shrinking of the organ due to destruction of cells and the surface becomes granular with slight elevations, thus giving rise to the name "hobnailed" liver.

Safety Drive Is Advocated By Gov. Peery

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 15.—Gov. Peery today focussed the attention of his State-wide safety conference on "the problem of youth" in relation to "the enormous accident toll of the Commonwealth" and advocated an unequalled safety campaign in Virginia.

The Governor, who called the conference, cited figures showing that persons between 15 and 24 have been involved in an increasing percentage of accidents in recent years.

Industry Plan Liked.

Industry's policy of a continuing effort to curtail accidents should be adopted by the Commonwealth, he said in proposing "a far-flung safety campaign teaching preventive measures."

"Youth with ambition to move rapidly, youth with a weakness to yield to temptation, is the problem we must meet," the Governor declared in his address.

Mayor Bright of Richmond, in welcoming the conference, termed traffic conditions "comparable or worse than war" and blamed "speed and carelessness" for the great death toll of accidents.

Rhodes Presides.

John Q. Rhodes, director of the State division of motor vehicles, presided.

Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the bureau for street traffic research at Harvard University, declared: "The rapidly growing problem of public accidents is a very real threat to the fullest enjoyment of the public's constitutional rights of liberty.

Trial Justice Arrested For U.S. Agent's Seizure

Danville, Va., May 14 (AP).—Trial Justice Charles R. Warren, of Pittsylvania County was arrested here this afternoon by Deputy U. S. Marshal E. C. Garrard for interfering with H. B. Hook, an investigator of the tax unit of the Internal Revenue at Chatham, Va., on April 3.

Warren and Hook engaged in an altercation in a garage at Chatham when Hook sought to seize an automobile being held in a liquor case. The county justice ordered the Federal man's arrest and held him in the county jail for four and a half hours. Warren was bonded in $500 before U. S. Commissioner Meade R. Flynn this afternoon for a hearing on May 29.

Drane Elected Mayor.

Piedmont, W. Va., May 15.—Robert McVeigh Drane, attorney, was yesterday elected Mayor of Piedmont on the citizens' ticket, receiving 596 votes to 387 for Wallace Gardner. William Davis, Donald Mellor, Bonner Hardegan and Frank E. Dixon were elected to council, Davis and Hardegan for four years and Mellor and Dixon for two. Bryan Healey is the holdover councilman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 15.—Girls captured all the ranking academic honors in the graduating class at the high school here this year, it was announced today, the entire "Upper Ten" list being composed of girls. Under a system started last year, the selection of salutatorian and valedictorian was abandoned. The ranking is done on the basis of four years of study.

Action Is Asked On Tourist Route

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 15.—The Frederick County board of supervisors, confronted with the prospect of losing a section of the new East-West tourist route which would connect with route 7, due to delay on the part of the State highway commison in designating a location, today forwarded resolutions to Richmond asking immediate action.

The new route is mostly in West Virginia but, depending upon the location, from 4 to 9 miles would serve Frederick County, opening up a section without a modern highway. Information received from the Martinsburg Chamber of Commerce indicates that the West Virginia highway commission is contemplating rerouting the highway so as to skirt the northern border of Frederick unless the Virginia highway department acts. It is planned to complete the route during the summer.

The road will link the Forks of Capon, W. Va., with Glengary, Gerrardstown, Inwood and Charles Town, W. Va. From Charles Town it will connect with the Virginia highway system again north of Wheatland in Loudoun County and continue to Leesburg, where it will again connect with Route 7, one of the main East-West routes from Washington. The route, when complete, will reduce the distance from Washington to Pittsburgh.

Lon Kelly Announces For Rotary Governor

Annapolis May 15.—Prevention of water pollution, comprehensive planning for water supply and sewerage systems and other engineering problems of interest to health departments will be discussed at the ninth annual conference of the Maryland-Delaware Water and Sewerage Association to be held in the Statehouse here tomorrow and Friday.

Gov. Harry W. Nice will be the guest of honor at the annual banquet to be held at Carvel Hall tomorrow night.

Papers will be presented on a variety of engineering subjects. The speakers tomorrow will be L. J. Houston, city manager, Fredericksburg, Va.; J. R. MComas, assistant sanitary engineer, State health department; Edward S. Hopkins, principal sanitary chemist, Baltimore bureau of water supply; W. C. Stewart, metallurgist, United States Naval Experiment Station; Walter C. Munroe chief engineer, Anne Arundel County sanitary commission; C. L. Siebert, executive engineer, Pennsylvania sanitary water board, and George E. Harrington, assistant chief chemist, Dalecarlia filtration plant, Washington, D. C.

Inquest Held Unneeded In Death of Recluse

By the Associated Press.

Hague, Va., May 15.—An investigation of the death of A. L. Dodson, whose charred body was found in the ruins of his burned home near Hardings Wharf Monday night, has disclosed no evidence of violence, Sheriff J. E. Anderson said today.

The officer said that the case was closed as far as his office was concerned and that a coroner's inquest was not deemed necessary. Dodson, an elderly recluse, was believed to possess considerable property.

Three Who Fled Jail At Elkins Still Gone

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., May 15.—Randolph County officers find no clew in their search for three men who unlocked the door of the county jail here and walked to freedom.

The fugitives are George and Eugene Morgart, brothers, who had been sentenced to five years in the State penitentiary at Moundsville for robbery, and Cecil Bingham, who was awaiting trial, all residents of Elkins. How they obtained the key used in unlocking the door remains a mystery.

Mill Fights Classification.

Walkersville, May 15 (AP).—The N. R. Garment Co., of Walkersville, has asked Senator Millard E. Tydings to protest against renewal of the proposal to put Maryland in the Northern secton of the cotton garment industry. Such action would necessitate payment of higher wages than would be required if Maryland is assigned to the Southern area.

Judges Named For Area Finals Of Spelling Bee

County Champions to Vie Here Saturday in The Post's Contest.

When the area final of the National Spelling Bee begins at 10:30 a. m. Saturday in the New National Museum in Washington, a corps of qualified officials will be on hand to conduct the match.

Miss Esther M. Galbraith, of the faculty of Roosevelt High School, will call the words. By training and experience Miss Galbraith is eminently suited for this important task.

Two sets of judges will decide disputed points. One group will serve at the morning session and the other at the afternoon session, when the spellers will have been reduced to about 20.

To Judge Final Stage.

For the final stage of the contest, which begins at 2 p. m., the judges will be Miss Evelyn Turpin, of the children's department of the Public Library of the District of Columbia; Mrs. Helen Robey, assistant to Belmont Farley of the National Education Association, and a third judge still to be announced.

At the morning session, three members of the staff of The Washington Post, which is sponsoring the spelling bee, will be judges. All three are particularly qualified by education and their work to serve in this capacity. They will be Hope Ridings Miller, feature writer, who also conducts the column "Strictly Speaking," on the use, pronunciation and spelling of words; Carlisle Bargeron, whose column, "Along the Potomac," appears daily opposite the editorial page, and Theodore Hall, literary editor of The Post.

The Post to Fete Contestants.

Alice Fox Pitts, spelling bee director, will greet the contestants as they arrive. All will be guests of The Post at luncheon in the Commerce Building cafeteria during the noon recess.

The contest will be broadcast, in part, from 10:30 to 11 a. m. and from 2 to 3 p. m., over Station WJSV.

Photographs of as many of the more than 50 contestants as are available will be published in The Post Friday.

While preparations are being made to entertain the county winners, who will compete for the championship of Maryland and Virginia, certificates of honor are being prepared for school winners. These will be sent to boys and girls who won school matches and thus were entitled to a place in county finals. Because schools have been slow in registering names of their best spellers, sending of these certificates has been delayed, but they are expected to be in the mails by the first of next week.

Meningitis Quarantine Ends at State's Prison

Richmond, Va., May 15 (AP).—The quarantine imposed at the penitentiary by State health authorities last week to prevent the spread of meningitis was lifted today.

The prison was placed under quarantine May 7 when it was reported that one of the prisoners, Joseph Thompson, Negro, had developed meningitis. Thompson was placed in an isolated ward at the prison hospital, where his condition was given to day as improvd.

Truck Driver Killed In Dash Down Hill

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 15.—Peter Coen, 42, of Monongah, driver of a light truck, was fatally injured when a large loaded truck ran wild down Swisher Hill, a few miles from Shinnston. G. E. Farrell, 40, of Philadelphia, traveling salesman, driving a sedan ahead of the runaway truck, was severely injured.

Strawberry Growers Hopeful of Good Year

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., May 15.—With strawberry acreage about 4 per cent less than that of last year, but with all indications of an extra good yield, Eastern Shore farmers are hopeful that this, the largest monetary crop, will presage a better financial return to tillers of the soil than in late years.

Marion and Pittsville, in Maryland, and Shelbyville, in Delaware, are the largest strawberry centers in the country. Shipments have already started in the two Eastern Shore counties of Virginia—Accomac and Northampton—with prices reported between $5 and $6 a crate. Movement of strawberries from Worcester, Wicomico and Somerset counties in Maryland are not expected to start in sizable volume before the first part of next week.

Nice to Veto Act Licensing 'Claw' Device

Revenue Too Slight to Assist in Relief, Statement Says.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 15.—Gov. Harry W. Nice announced today that he would veto the "claw-machine bill" which would have licensed claw machines and similar devices. Revenue from that source had been earmarked by the Legislature for relief.

"This bill is frankly a measure designed to evade the penalties of the gambling statutes of Maryland and the silly concealed attempt to disguise it as a revenue producing measure can not possibly deceive the most credulous," the Governor said.

"The revenue to be derived is so insignificant as compared with the injury it will do to the administration of justice as to make it, in my opinion, anything but wholesome legislation. I shall, therefore, veto it."

The judges of Baltimore city courts had gone on record as opposing the measure.

The claw-machine bill is the second relief revenue measure passed by the recent General Assembly to fall under the Governor's veto. He announced some weeks ago that he would veto the measure under which the State could have claimed bank deposits unclaimed for 20 years.

Only the 1 per cent gross receipts tax and a contingent revenue from Maryland's inheritance taxes remain now to furnish the needed relief revenue. The first month's receipts from the gross receipts levy indicate, however, that the $5,000,000 needed yearly probably will be forthcoming without the supplementary measures.

G.O.P. Assumes Control Of Roads Commission

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 15.—Adherents of the Republican Party took control of the State roads commission today when Gov. Harry W. Nice personally administered the oath of office to the three new commissioners.

Dr. Homer E. Tabler, of Hancock, the new chairman, was the first to be sworn in, followed by C. M. Wilkinson, former city collector of Cumberland, and Frank F. Luthardt, Democrat, the minority member. Luthardt is a Baltimore lawyer.

The ceremonies, brief and informal, were begun by Nathan L. Smith, who handed his resignation as temporary chairman to Gov. Nice. A few minutes later, after the new commission had been sworn in, the State's chief executive said to the new roads board:

"Gentlemen, I have the utmost confidence in you, but I suggest you call a meeting immediately and elect Mr. Smith as chief engineer."

Nice Feels Better.

Luthardt, the Democratic member, made the motion to elect Smith. Wilkinson seconded it, and Dr. Tabler joined the two in voting "aye" to the motion. "It is so ordered," Tabler concluded.

"Now I feel better," Gov. Nice interjected as he and the witnesses to the ceremony laughed. The Governor had promised the post of chief engineer to succeed Harry D. Williar, but the commission, not the executive, has the authority to make the appointment.

Gov. Nice made a short congratulatory speech. He received the State roads employes and shook hands with each.

The affair approached the aspect of a Republican rally as nearly a hundred party men and officials crowded into the room. It soon became so jammed that some employes were unable to enter.

Foes of Lee Statue In Arlington Rapped

By the Associated Press.

Petersburg, Va., May 15.—Homer Atkinson, who as a youth left home to fight with Lee, today as commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans branded "contemptible" the action of the Massachusetts auxiliary of the Grand Army of the Republic in erection of a statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee in Arlington Cemetery.

For the most part, leaders of Confederate organizations and other Southern patriotic organizations in Virginia did not "deign" to comment on the action of the Masshchusetts auxiliary, which hurled the epithet "traitor" at the Confederate chieftain.

Gen. Atkinson recalled that Arlington was Lee's home before it became a national cemetery and said that the Confederate leader has many admirers in the North as well as in the South.

Farm Hand, 22, Is Found Guilty In Slaying Case

Jury Opposes the Death Penalty for Morgan at Leonardtown.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., May 15.—Charles H. Morgan, 22-year-old farm hand, tonight was awaiting sentence after a jury found him guilty of the murder of John Thomas, 56, colored farmer, 6 miles north of here last October. It was recommended the death sentence not be imposed.

George W. Joy, head tenant on the farm where Morgan was employed, will go on trial tomorrow charged with having instigated the crime.

Morgan confessed at his preliminary hearing, claiming that Joy had threatened him unless he committed the crime, but today entered a plea of not guilty.

A special session was necessitated after the request that Morgan be examined by State authorities for sanity. After a six-day examination in Baltimore, Dr. George Preston, of the State mental hygiene board, and Dr. Esther Richards, of Johns Hopkins, claimed Morgan had the mentality of a 13-year-old, but could distinguish between right and wrong.

The three men were employed on the farm of George P. Dorsey, prominent Leonardtown attorney. When it became rumored that Thomas was to take over Joy's position of head tenant, it was charged that Joy threatened Morgan with his own life unless he committed the crime.

The jury returned the verdict after three hours of deliberation. The session lasted all day before a jammed courthouse. Judge Walter Mitchell, La Plata; William M. Loker, Leonardtown, and Joseph C. Mattingly, Oxon Hill, will pass sentence.

1,000-Gallon Still Described at Trial

U. S. Agent Calls It Largest He Saw in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 15.—A 1,000-gallon steam distillery in the Franklin County woods was the largest he ever saw in Virginia, John J. London, Federal alcohol tax unit investigator from Baltimore, said at the eighteenth day of the trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators here today. He was the 131st witness.

London, who said he went with Col. Thomas Bailey, special investigator, said he did not see John Turner, arrested by Bailey, at the still-site, but added he saw Turner coming away from it and "he seemed very nervous." Turner is among 23 defendants to the conspiracy charge. Arrested at the still May 13, 1934, were Hobart Young and a man named Brim. Two colored men fled.

Indictments against Young and Turner were not pressed pending alleged conspiracy developments, Frank S. Tavener, jr., assistant district attorney, said yesterday while Young was on the stand.

$50,000 Fire Sweeps Chatham Lumber Plant

Danville, Va., May 15 (AP).—The plant of the Chatham Manufacturing & Lumber Co. at Chatham was virtually destroyed by fire early today. The loss was given an early estimate of between $50,000 and $75,000. The fire started in the planing room and quickly spread to other parts of the structure.

Firemen of Chatham saved stacks of lumber, two freight cars and the office building. The cause of the fire was not determined.

Fish Law Violations Send Three to Jail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 15.—Three men are serving time in the Harrison County Jail for violations of the fishing laws of the State. All three defaulted in the payment of fines and were sentenced to ten days' imprisonment. John H. Cherry, miner, of Nutter Fort, one of the trio, had caught undersized bass out of season and Robert Dodd, of Wilsonburg, and Virgil Phillips, of Hepzibah, failed to show licenses.

Tobacco Men See Outlook As Uncertain

Maryland Growers Fear Greater Competition in Europe.

Air-Cured Crop Packed as Market Activity Approaches.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Leonardtown, Md., May 15.—With European countries increasing their tobacco crops, southern Maryland growers are looking toward the spring market with a slightly skeptical eye despite the steady climb of prices since 1931. Last year Maryland led the country with its "money crop," returning an average of 18 cents a pound.

This year's crop, however, was cut sharply last September when continued rains cost the farmers approximately one-third of their maturing crops. With this added to trade restrictions and growing competition of foreign grown tobacco, agriculturists fear southern Maryland may feel further adversity.

In the past, a great part of this region's crop was sold to France, an almost unlimited market. Within the last few years, however, France has gradually increased her domestic and colonial tobacco acreage to a point where she is almost independent of imports.

This, perhaps, leads Maryland's most historic section into economic uncertainties. She has no industrial smoke stacks; her problems are purely agricultural. Crops other than tobacco offer no solution to the question of a fair return for the average farmer. The limited wheat and corn of the section are used for poultry and cattle feed. The soil prevents truck gardeners from crops of that nature. The occasional poultry raisers, with a few exceptions, sell at a scant profit.

Merchants' Deposits Drop.

George W. Joy, president of the First National Bank at Leonardtown, views the situation optimistically but indicated that banking problems had increased since May, 1934.

Joy said savings accounts have been drawn on heavily during the last year and merchants' deposits decreased.

Most of Southern Maryland's air-cured tobacco, after almost eight months of drying in vented barns, finally has been graded and packed into hogsheads for market. Tobacco men expect market activity in about three weeks will offer a fair indication of prices farmers can expect.

With cigar consumption down 40 per cent during the last five years, air-cured tobacco prices have risen with increased consumption of other types of tobacco. Over this period charts show that money spent formerly for cigars has been transferred to cigarette receipts.

With these conditions prevalent, Southern Marylanders are focusing their attention on the swing of the market. They look back to the period of 1922 to 1930 when their crops never fell below 20 cents per pound average and wonder if the 1929 average of almost 28 cents is possible.

Other Businesses Suffer.

Prices of Southern Maryland tobacco have risen steadily since 1931, when a record low average of 15 cents a pound was reached.

Other businesses throughout the southern peninsula are not without their difficulties. Oysters brought little more than the cost of tonging, throwing many waterfront men into debt. Markets offered sometimes as low as 25 cents per bushel. Attempted State legislation to lift dredging restrictions now protecting Potomac waters met bitter disapproval throughout the lower peninsula. In the Patuxent River fishermen consider the shad and herring catches only "fair."

At Mechanicsville J. Franklin Adams, St. Marys County assessor, said building has been at a standstill for the last year This was backed up by A. Edward Meredith president of the Meredith Lumber Co., who explained that his sales this year were approximately 18 per cent behind the corresponding months of 1934.

With summer near, merchants of southern Maryland look for trade from the thousands of beach dwellers who migrate to the tidewater fringe each year.

Despite none too favorable conditions, however, this section is making great effort to forge ahead. Spring plowers dot the slopes, and tobacco plants soon will be ready for transplanting. Countless boats are being hauled up railways for their hulls to be recaulked and painted.

Youth Committed After Robbing FERA Agents

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 15.—Cecil Barlow, 16, accused of robbing Miss Betsy Howard, FERA worker, and Miss Mildred Burruss, of Spotsylvania, when they went to his home several weeks ago to administer relief to his family, was committed to the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion for observation yesterday by Judge Frederick Coleman, before whom he was tried.

Barlow's father testified that he thought the youth mentally weak and that preceding the day that he made the two Spotsylvania girls ride him around for several hours at the point of a gun and then stole their car, he had been on a drinking spree.

18 CCC Camps For 3d Corps Area Approved

Eleven to Be on U.S. Property, Others on State Land.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 15.—Construction of eighteen new Civilian Conservation Corps camps was authorized today at Third Corps Area headquarters after surveys of selected camp sites were approved.

The new camps are part of the CCC expansion program which provides for 104 new projects throughout the corps area. Bids will be called within the next few days, it was said, for making the camps ready.

Eleven of them will be on Government reservations as follows: Two each at Fort Monroe, Va.; Fort Belvoir, Va.; for George G. Mead, Md.; Fort Hoyle, Md., and one each at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; Aberdeen Proving Grounds, and Fort Washington, Md.

Seven others will be on State property in Maryland, as follows: Westernport, Sang Run, Swanton, Lonaconing and Deer Park, all Garrett County; Snow Hill, Worcester County, and the seventh at Parkton, Baltimore County, near Prettyboy Dam.

Camps on State property will have permanent structures, it was said, while those on Government property will be equipped with portable buildings.

Death Car Driver Gets Two Years

Richmond Man's Speeding Auto Killed 2 Boys.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 15.—Pleading guilty in Hustings Court today to charges fo involuntary manslaughter, lodged against him after two small boys were killed by his automobile, Thomas A. Stanford, jr., was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

Witnesses testified that at the time Edward Parrish, 9, and Robert Baker Gullett, 10, were killed at a street intersection on the night of April 4, Stanford's car was traveling rapidly and the driver had been drinking.

The boys were crossing the street to return books borrowed from a boys' club library.

Civil Service Plan Lauded At Annapolis

Commissioner Speaker at Maryland Club Convention.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 15.—Speaking here this afternoon before the thirty-sixth annual convention of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Lucille Foster MacMillan, Commissioner of Civil Service, urged recognition of the importance of the merit system as the fairest method of classification. Mrs. McMillin was the principal speaker of the second day of the convention which began with the reports of the officers, Mrs. Homer L. Twigg, Mrs. J. Howard Hopkins, Mrs. George A. Stewart, Mrs. Joseph T. Maguire and Mrs. C. Albert Kuper. Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, State director to the General Federation and chairman of the foundation fund committee, reported the progress made by her committee and was followed on the program by the reports of the presidents of the districts of Maryland.

Clinic Work Praised.

Mrs. B. H. Sincell, newly elected president of the First District, speaking for her group, urged a better understanding of the franchise and emphasized the importance of the work done by the country-wide orthopedic clinic sponsored by the First District. The Eastern Shore District, represented by Miss Florence E. Monk, favored the immediate removal of dangerous grade crossings and a more modern standard of county government. Other presidents of the districts speaking briefly on the progress and aims of their sections were Mrs. Jules Schmucker, of the Baltimore District; Mrs. Ridgely B. Bond, of the Southern District; Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, Montgomery District, and Mrs. G. W. S. Musgrove, Prince George District.

Following the report of the federation president, Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, the convention heard the report of the credentials committee given by Mrs. Clarence L. Fowler and a message from the Junior Women's Clubs by Miss Margaret Kahl, of Mount Washington. A report on scholarships was made by Mrs. Douglas Griesemer, chairman. Proposed revisions to the by-laws were discussed by Mrs. George Landick, jr.

After the luncheon held in the dining room of Carvel Hall, Marie Link Elmore gave a soprano solo. Mrs. MacMillan, guest of honor of the luncheon, then addressed the convention.

Mrs. Hoadley Speaks.

Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, president of the Chevy Chase Women's Club, and editor of the Maryland Club Woman, spoke on the problems and aims of the club magazine. Mrs. Hoadley is assisted by Mrs. Thomas J. Tingley as subscription manager and Mrs. Robert F. Skutch as business manager. At 3:30 p. m. the meeting was adjourned to the parade grounds of the Naval Academy, where the delegates witnessed a regimental parade.

The president's dinner, honoring the retiring president, Mrs. Allen, took place at 6:30 p. m., Mrs. Richmond Irving Bowie, presiding. The annual music festival was held at 8:30 p. m. at St. John's College. A greeting was issued to the delegates by Mrs. Charles C. Slayton, chairman of the department of fine arts of the Maryland federation. Participating in the contest were choruses from the Neighborhood Improvement Club of Govans, the Treble Clef Club of Salisbury, the Women's Club of Roland Park, Newcomb Club of Bethesda, and the Women's Club of Chevy Chase.

Reinstatement of Minister Is Requested in Petition

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middletown, Md., May 15.—Asking for the reinstatement of Robert J. Ridgley as pastor of Harmony Church of Brethren, a petition signed by 70 members of the congregation was presented today to the Rev. Charles N. Frushour, supervision minister of the district. It also was stated that the ministerial board for the Eastern District of Maryland will be called upon to act favorably on the request of Ridgley's reinstatement. Signers of the petition represent more than half of the membership of the Harmony Church.

Ridgley has been serving as pastor of the church for more than a year, but was asked to discontinue preaching last week because it was alleged he had officiated at the marriage of a young couple from Lantz, Frederick County, without authority. The official board of the circuit declared the marriage illegal, claiming Ridgley's ordination was revoked five years ago after charges of conduct unbecoming a minister had been preferred. So far the young couple have declined to have a second ceremony performed.

In a statement today Ridgley declared he was being persecuted because of his activity against moonshiners in the mountain sections of northern Middletown Valley. Ridgley further contended his ordination was not revoked, but that he was only ordered to remain silent as a minister until the church saw fit to allow him to resume preaching. He said Mr. Frushour granted permission more than a year ago to resume pastorage of the Harmony Church, which removed the ban of silence. Mr. Frushour, however, said he could not recall granting such permission.

The deposed minister declared he would continue his activity against moonshiners, and yesterday afternoon led Federal Agents Tagg and Lemon, of Hagerstown, in a raid on the premises of Columbus Tracey, near Smithburg, just over the Middletown Valley, in Washington County. The officers seized mash, whisky, portions of a still and other liquor manufacturing equipment.

Episcopalians Study Revision Of Church Law

Two Hundred at Diocesan Convention at Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 14.—Approximately 200 clergymen and laymen were attending a two-day meeting of the Episcopal Diocese and Council of Virginia which opened this morning.

A resolution calling for revision of Church law to permit vestries to determine how much of missionary quota their respective churches will accept was presented to the gathering this afternoon by the Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, of Richmond.

Tomorrow a resolution carrying the 1936 budget, totaling $140,000, and a $25,000 "challenge" fund will be voted upon.

A telegram of regards from Maj. Giles B. Cooke, last surviving member of Gen. Lee's staff, was read to the assemblage by Bishop Tucker. A wire of greetings was later dispatched to Maj. Cooke, who reached the age of 96 Monday.

Reports of their official acts during the year were read today by Bishop H. St. George Tucker and Bishop Coadjutor Frederick D. Goodwin. This evening the gathering was addressed by the Rev. J. Yates Dowman, rector All Saints' Church, Richmond, in St. George's Church, where the sessions are being held.

I.C.C. Suspends Cut on Pacific Apple Freight

Virginia Shippers Victors Against Rate Periling Their Markets.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 15.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided to suspend the order cutting freight rates on apples from the Pacific Coast to the East from $1.25 to $1, the State corporation commission was informed today.

June 4 was set as the date for the hearing.

H. E. Ketner, commerce counsel for the Virginia commission, fought the proposal on the grounds that it would mean undue discrimination against Virginia and West Virginia apple shippers.

He said today that the case was of considerable importance to Virginia growers, because, if the proposed rates are finally decreed, it would enable the Western apples practically to monopolize the markets east of the Mississippi River.

Farm Helper Eludes Hunt, Slays Self

19-Year-Old Victim of Attempted Attack Is Treated for Shock.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Markham, Va., May 15.—Fauquier County police tonight were investigating conditions under which Nelson Pendleton, 35-year-old Negro, committed suicide here this morning after an attempted attack upon the 19-year-old daughter of his employer. The girl was reported to be in the Warrenton Hospital, where she was being treated for shock.

The attack occurred about 8:30 a. m. today while the girl was alone at her home. She fought off her assailant and ran to the home of a neighbor, Alex G. Green. Aroused by Green, half a dozen local men armed with rifles started in search of Pendleton, after they failed to reach county officers in Warrenton by telephone.

Pendleton was found dead in the orchard near the home where the attempted attack occurred. He had apparently rushed from the house immediately following the incident and fired a charge from a shotgun into his chest, dying instantly.

The Negro had worked in the home for about four years. He was married, the father of one child and had been considered a trusty employe.

Soon after the attempted attack a large crowd assembled at the scene and remained until late afternoon, satisfying themselves that no one else was implicated.

The case was compared by authorities today to an attack three years ago when Shad Thompson, 27-year-old Negro, entered a mountain home three miles from here, injured a man and carried his wife into the hills. The woman escaped, found her way to a neighbor's home and a posse was immediately formed. After six weeks of searching Thompson was found dead, hanging from the limb of a tree. Whether he had committed suicide or had been slain was never determined by officials. Thompson's body was burned by the group that found it.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Paul Whiteman, ever since his John Murray Anderson screen revue for Universal, dubbed "The King of Jazz," generally conceded to be the foremost exponent in America of what, for want of a better name, is termed "modern music," will bring his famous orchestra and group of supplementary entertainers to the stage of Warner Brothers' Earle Theater on Friday, May 24, for a special six-day engagement.

This definite booking was announced late yesterday by John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers' interests in the Washington territory.

This will mark the first appearance of Whiteman and his orchestra in the Capital since those ancient days when they were accustomed, more or less, to make single, annual concert appearances at the old Poli's Theater, long since demolished in order that the Department of Commerce Building might have a patch of greensward in front of it.

It will be recalled by many that it was in Poli's that Whiteman made his first concert appearance in Washington, startling local music lovers by introducing the program of what was then known as a "jazz band" with an extraordinarily effective rendition of Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance" overture. It was on this occasion, also, that Washington was afforded its first opportunity to become acquainted with the dulcet tones of Morton Downey's lyric tenor.

Long List of Specialists.

Featured with the orchestra during the impending engagement at the Earle will be Ramona, "the queen of the keys;" Bob Lawrence, "a knight of note;" Johnny Hauser, "lord of the high C's;" the King's Men, "lords of the chords;" Goldie, "the king's 14-carat clown;" Durelle Alexander, "new princess of song;" Jack Teagarden, "the singing troubadour;" Mike Pingatore, "the knight of the banjo," and the Six Lindy Hoppers.

Some of these you already know. Goldie, for example, some years back, was a trumpet soloist, comedian and dancer with Jan Garber's Orchestra, one of the most popular units ever to play the Capital. He practically lost his nerve during an engagement at the Metropolitan Theater when he attempted one of his elephantine dances on what the Met is pleased to call its "stage." The Metropolitan, as a matter of fact, has no stage, but merely an "apron," or extremely narrow width of boardage that can not be curtained off, masqued or otherwise given the appearance of a full-fledged stage from either the front or back of the house.

So Goldie went into his dance. And only by an eyelash did he miss falling off the 10-foot-high apron into the kettle drums and traps that adorned the stage right of the orchestra pit. From that moment on, Goldie foreswore dancing on the Metropolitan stage!

It is to be recalled, too, that Paul Whiteman and his orchestra had no easy time getting into motion as an active factor in popular dance circles.

From Symphony to Syncopation.

Whiteman originally was a violinist in the first string section of the San Francisco Symphony. Perceiving, or thinking that he did, the possibilities of "jazz," he organized his own band, dedicated to the proposition that broken rhythms were the "hot" thing—which they proved to be. Bing Crosby was one of his early vocalists—before he became Bing Crosby!

His first notable engagement in the East was at the then newly opened Ambassador Hotel in Atlantic City. Nobody knew he was there for weeks on end. And then, all of a sudden, he was "discovered." If you will hark back, or look at the early entries in your favorite catalogue of phonograph records, you will find that Paul Whiteman was always billed with his "Ambassador Orchestra." That stems from the Ambassador Hotel engagement to which we have just referred.

Because of his regular network broadcast from New York, Thursday night, the Whiteman engagement at the Earle will end Wednesday night and a new screen and stage program, that single week, will be inaugurated on Thursday, instead of Friday.

The Whiteman orchestra is worth this slight deviation from fixed house routine—take it from one who heard it first at the Ambassador in Atlantic City, then at the Moulin Rouge in New York and has followed it around the country ever since as an ace concert attraction.

Washington picturegoers are permitting one of the finest screen plays of the year to "die on its feet." I refer to "The Informer," being presented for the last times today and tomorrow at the RKO-Keith Theater. Here are realism, originality and fine acting welded into a picture that deserves a place among the foremost of the cinema's accomplishments. Yet, in the parlance of a colorful and picturesque business, it is "dying the death of a dog." There is no reason why so fine a picture should be so universally shunned. It was not made by Universal! If you are wise in your generation, you will attend it at once and see one of the most unusual achievements of recent months in gelatin. And I am not alone in this view. Ask anyone who has viewed it.

Agents vs. Gangsters.

Some weeks ago this department devoted its Sabbath space in The Post to a considerable consideration of the new approach to the gangster motif on the screen afforded by the Department of Justice's eminently successful war on crime.

The first of these new evasions of the Will H. Hays edict that Dillinger should be kept off the screen is "G Men," in which James Cagney, Robert Armstrong, Margaret Lindsay, Ann Dvorak and many others are celebrating the triumph of law over its violators, currently on view—and doing capacity business, incidentally—at the Earle Theater.

The second release in this new series of revamped gangster stories will be "Let 'em Have It," a Reliance production released through United Artists, previewed by another slight majority of the dramatic desks in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon at 1, under the genial auspices of Hardie Meakin and Fred Marshall of RKO-Keith's.

Comparisons, of course, are odious, both by popular repute and in the actual working out of invidious contrasts. Not having seen "G Men" up to the time I availed myself of the privilege of previewing "Let 'em Have It," I went last night to an early show at the Earle and was thrilled by the melodramatic episodes depicted by Mr. Cagney and his associates.

Thrills Race Each Other.

I was no more thrilled, however, than I had been in the earlier day by the predicaments in which Richard Arlen, Virginia Bruce, Bruce Cabot and the others in the cast of "Let 'em Have It" had found themselves.

Both of these subjects are veiledly, but unmistakably, founded on the amazingly sensational career in crime of the lately expunged Mr. Dillinger. The analogies between the events of the pictured narratives and the actual history of the recent Public Enemy No. 1 are inescapable.

Of the two, "G Men" is the better "theater" and "Let 'em Have It" is by far the better exposition of the discreetly particularized operation of the governmental agents who have compiled so brilliant a record in crime detection and the eradication of those whose transgressions have done most to disrupt the social order.

There is an authenticity about "Let 'em Have It" that "G Men" does not possess. It goes rather more minutely into the scientific aspects of crime detection than "G Men," although it does not at any time become so technical as to confound the development of a story that is as thrillingly Dillingeresque, so to speak, as the picture which reached the local screen a week earlier.

Whereas, "G-Men" makes important climacteric uses of the Kansas City railroad station massacre and the Wisconsin roadhouse escape of the mobsters, "Let 'em Have It" no less effectively utilizes the "home farm" incidents and prison break of Public Enemy No. 1 to point its plot.

See them Both.

Both, in short, are swell pictures, to which the Department of Justice could not possibly raise an objection. The glorified figures in these tales are not the gangsters, but the agents of retributive justice who as often as not lay down their lives to make this a safe country in which to live.

If I may say so, "Let 'em Have It" is a little better acted than "G-men," which is not at all deprecating the exceptional work contributed to the latter by those already named as its principal players.

If you have seen "G-Men"—and everybody should see it—you will be doubly interested in seeing "Let 'em Have It." They are not in any sense duplicates or crabon copies.

And you will get the same "kick" out of them that you derived from "Underworld," the first gangster picture ever made, with George Bancroft as star and Josef von Sternberg, latterly Marlene Dietrich's mentor, as director.

That ought to be good enough.

Speaking of RKO - Keith's Theater, as we were, by inference, just above in connection with "Let 'Em Have It," the following attraction at the Fifteenth street temple of the arts will be Elizabeth Bergner, who made her first deep impression upon American consciousness in the costellar role and title role of "Catherine the Great," with Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in a film version of her renowned stage success "Forsake Me Never."

Big Night for N. V. A.

With a host of entertainers from Washington, Baltimore and New York City, the benefit program for the National Vaudeville Artists' Fund will be presented at the Earle Theater on Saturday night, May 18, beginning at 11:30 p. m. and running for a full two-and-a-half hours.

All of Washington's theaters are co-operating to make this program a success. This special performance and a contribution by all local theaters—10 per cent of their receipts on May 20 to the fund—will eliminate all collections in the theaters.

In other words, this year, patrons will not be solicited for funds in theaters and there will be none of the plate-passing which has caused dissatisfaction in the past.

The theaters are desirous of continuing this new method of raising funds and it is believed that the special performance, with the 10 per cent contribution from all theaters, will be sufficient to continue this practice in coming years, thus permanently eliminating the collections from patrons.

Entertainers Galore.

Some of the entertainers in the two-and-a-half hour show will be Benny Meroff and his radio orchestra, including Florence Gast, Red Pepper and Jack Marshall, Dolly Bell, Jay Hill and others, from the Earle Theater; Lester Coles, Texas Rangers, Venita Gould, Eddie Hanley, Jeanette Hackett and Ivan Triesault, from the Fox Theater; headliners from various Washington night clubs and from the Howard Theater.

The admission charge is $1, and there will be no contributions asked at this or any other performance during the week.

The committees in charge of the local program include the entertainment committee, with Guy Wonders, chairman, Carter Barron and Gene Ford; the ticket committee, with Harry Lohmeyer, chairman, and the publicity committee, with Frank La Falce, chairman, Hardie Mekin and Lou Brown.

Additional acts for the benefit, from the Century Theater in Baltimore, will be Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, Bert Walton, jovial raconteur, and Helen Dennison, delightful dancer.

Ethel Pastor and other artists will represent the Russian Troika on the program. The Digitanos, dancers from the Heigh-Ho Club, and Mills Blue Ribbon Band, from the Howard, will also appear on the program.

Tickets for the midnight show are now on sale at the box offices of the Earle, Fox, Metropolitan, Palace, Keith's and Columbia theaters.

A New Star Comes to Screen

A charming and ingenuous personality will be introduced to Washington theatergoers today on the screen at the Belasco Theater when Nova Pilbeam is pictured in "Little Friend," a new Gaumont-British production. Miss Pilbeam is pictured above consoling her mother, the role assumed in the picture by Lydia Sherwood, the slightly disconsolate blonde young woman depicted above with chin in hand. The story is a sentimental one concerning domestic complications that Miss Pilbeam finds it possible to overcome.

Complete Surrender Note.

There was an extremely elegant wisecrack to go here, but the sports department across the room is making so much noise I can not even get close to remembering what it was.

"PASSING IN REVIEW." The Anna T. Mitchell School of Dancing presents its pupils in a recital in two acts and 16 scenes, directed, staged, and costumed by Miss Mitchell. At the Wardman Park Theater May 14 and 15. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

A fast-moving program of dances, "Passing in Revue," was presented last evening at the Wardman Park Theater by the pupils of the Anna T. Mitchell School of Dancing before a demonstrative audience of some 400.

From the opening greeting to the grande finale, sixteen solo and group routines were executed in the various Terpsichorean forms of which the tap sounded the predominant mode.

Uniformly creditable were the various numbers, but as usual with productions of this sort, the younger the participants the greater the enjoyment of the audience and the older the performers the more proficient the performance. Regardless of the age of the dancers, however, they all showed their thorough schooling in the elements of the art, whether it was in another attempt to depict Pavlova's Dying Swan or the stomping out a "hot" tap number.

Those participating were Carolyn Atz, Anna Ferris, Mary Catherine Prosise, Nancy Hanck, Violet Donaldson, Patricia Schilke, Alice Marie Sheridan, Elaine Johnson, June Phillips, Barbara Schneider, Hope Harrison, Joan Pauls, Josephine Jecko, Dorothy Schneider, Mary Hines, June Wallen, Madge Fultz, Jean Smith, Jean Thomas, Marjoria Goggins, Kathryn Moreland, Helen Moran, Patricia Coleman, Frances Coleman, Marjorie Burkhardt, Eileen Fox, Dorothy Cohen, Betty Griggs, Patricia Moran, Lois Halverson, Ruth McCormick, Russella Halverson, Betty Whiting, Jane Stauffer, Frances Moran, Shirley Baker, Mildred Tucker, Gladys Donaldson, Peggy Plantz, Margaret Carroll, Mildred Covey, Elizabeth Guthridge, Violet Donaldson, Jeanne Holmes, Jeanne Meisel, Dora Pleitner, Julia Vaccaro, Edna Pleitner, Kathryn Moreland, James Glodek, William Lajousky, James Gemio, Edward Karpowich, James Chludenski, Herman Schmarr, Richard Gee, Will Clements.

The revue will be repeated this evening.

Child Aid Society's Drive Raises $2,400

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 15.—Miss Bonnie M. Custenborder, director of the Carroll County Children's Aid Society, announced yesterday that final reports from districts showed a total of $2,400.12 had been raised in the annual drive for funds.

Although several of the districts, including Mount Airy, Freedom and Precinct No. 1, Uniontown, exceeded their quotas, total contributions were more than $1,000 under the $3,500 the society hoped to raise, and $22.04 less than last year's receipts.

Riding Club Organized.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 15.—Headed by Mrs. John L. Bennett, president, a local riding club has been organized. Other officers are George R. Mitchell, vice president; Ann Reifsnider, secretary; Bruce T. Bair, treasurer.

Yesterday's Favorites

Hollywood, May 15.

FROM time to time readers have written in asking what certain former screen favorites are doing these days. I have kept these various requests. Done a little sleuthing, and will devote this column to the answers.

Edna Purviance, who was Charles Chaplin's leading lady, resides in Hollywood, goes about a little, and is not often recognized by the new picture mob. She is still easy to look at, and is still on Chaplin's weekly pay roll. Getting $300 a week for previous service and loyalty rendered.

Theda Bara, the first vampire of the screen, is married to Charles Brabin, a Metro director. They have a lovely home in Beverly Hills. She goes on the set occasionally when her husband is directing a picture, and this seems to be her only concern with flickers. When talking with friends over the tea cups, she sometimes expresses a desire to play in pictures again, but does nothing about it.

• • • •

Dorothy Davenport, better known as Mrs. Wallace Reid, directed a few independent flickers. Recently she was made story editor of the newly formed Republic Pictures firm.

Francis Ford, part of that big serial team known as Francis Ford and Beverly Bayne, just finished working in a bit role in an RKO picture.

Monroe Salisbury, who was a Clark Gable in the nickelodeon flickers, is the night clerk at the Warner-Kelton, a Hollywood hotel.

• • • •

MANY casting agents keep a list of the old-time stars, and give them a phone call whenever it is possible to use them in a bit role or a walk-on scene. Certain directors, like Cecil B. DeMille, Raoul Walsh and Alfred Green, always make it a point to give former favorites a job. William Farnum, who was once hired by Cecil B. DeMille and Paramount at a salary of $10.000 a week, just completed playing a small role in "The Crusades." Farnum got about $100 for the week's work. He brought his $10,000-a-week contract, signed by DeMille, to the set for the director to take a peep at.

King Baggott, the first of the big-name directors, also worked as an extra in this flicker. Baggott can generally be seen at the local race track or along Vine street placing a bet.

• • • •

Mae Murray isn't working in pictures, but only several weeks ago she was at the Club Trocadero, and when she danced with her companion, the other celebrities stopped dancing to watch Miss Murray. She still commands attention.

Raymond Hatton, the billing used to read Hatton and Beery, plays small roles in flickers when he gets them. He played a small role in a picture at Metro, and Wallace Beery happened to visit the set. "Hello, Ray," said Beery. "Glad to see you." "Hello," said Hatton. "Glad to see you." They both went on their way. This was all the former partners had to say.

• • • •

MAE MARSH, one of the notables of the cast of "The Birth of a Nation," resides in Los Angeles, and comes out of retirement every now and then to answer the old urge to be an actress. She had a role in "Bachelor of Arts," playing with Henry B. Walthall for the first time since they appeared together in the D. W. Griffith classic.

Vera Gordon, the mother in "Humoresque," finds it difficult to obtain picture work. She has toured in vaudeville in a sketch, and played an important role in the Coast production of "Counselor-at-Law."

Mary Carr, who skyrocketed to stardom as the mother in "Over the Hill," gets an occasional job. She was in, for a flash, in "Black Fury." The preview crowd here always recognizes her and gives her a hand.

Anita Stewart, a former favorite, is married to the wealthy and social George Converse. She doesn't have to work in flickers, and has no yen to. She's content with being in the audience.

• • • •

Mary Miles Minter, who was once considered Mary Pickford's rival until the William Desmond Taylor murder mystery put her out of the picture, resides in Beverly Hills. She has put on much weight, and occasionally does some interior decorating for private families.

Bryant Washburn, one of the more popular heroes of his day, obtains his living from the house which used to be his mansion in the stardom days. Washburn's former showplace in Hollywood is now an Italian restaurant, and he is the landlord, getting his monthly rent check.

Welfare Board to Cut Washington County Aid

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 15.—The welfare board made plans today to curtail relief following word from State headquarters that May's appropriation for Washington County would be $45,000, about $10,000 less than the local budget.

"The administration of relief will be worked out as far as possible on a basis to cause the least hardship," an official of the welfare board stated. Instead of making an arbitrary cut, relief here will be worked out on an individual basis.

K. of C. Reelects Dalton.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 15.—Ed Dalton, of Charleston, was named State deputy of the West Virginia Council, Knights of Columbus, at the annual meeting in Wheeling this week, for his sixth consecutive term. Lawrence M. McCormack, this city, was reelected State warden. Clarksburg was selected as the 1936 meeting place.

5 Held in Petty Thefts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 15.—Local police believe they have solved a number of petty thefts here in recent months with the apprehension of five youths, who confessed to looting the Surrey Public School here. A former student of the school was the ringleader of the gang, police say.

Joe Sullivan Is Knocked About After Three Triumphs.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 15.—The Yankees again showed their power against southpaw pitching today by trimming the Tigers and Joe Sullivan, clever young left-hander, 4 to 0, in the final game of their Western tour. It was their first triumph in the series with Detroit.

Charley Ruffing, who had failed to complete one of his first three starts, came back with a brilliant six-hit shutout performance while Sullivan, who had won three in a row, was rapped freely and Elon Hogsett, another portsider, was touched for the last couple of Yankee hits and the final run.

Ruffing was in real trouble only once. In the sixth inning the Tigers crammed the corners with one out when Manager Mickey Cochrane and Charley Gehringer hit singles and Hank Greenberg drew a pass. But Ruffing stepped up and fanned Goose Goslin then made Billy Rogell pop up to end the threat. At no other time could the Tigers put two hits together and Ruffing granted only three walks.

'Big Moose,' Hero of World Series Battles, Waived Out of League.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 15.—In a surprise move to trim their roster to the major league limit of 23 players, the Chicago White Sox today sold George Earnshaw, veteran righthanded pitcher, to Brooklyn of the National League. The deal, a straight cash transaction, was made after every team in the American League waived the former World Series star.

The "Big Moose," one of the major cogs in Connie Mack's triple champions of 1929-31, was sold to the White Sox by the Philadelphia Athletics in December, 1933, for a reported price of $25,000. He won 14 and lost 11 for the last place White Sox last year, but so far this season he has been beaten twice in three starts.

Earnshaw was surprised when advised to report to Brooklyn.

"Why did they send me away?" he asked. "Of course, I haven't shown much yet, but when warm weather comes I will start winning. I guess the young pitchers were going so good that Dykes (Manager Jimmy Dykes, his old teammate with the Athletics) figured he didn't need old George. I hope not. I wish the Sox all the luck in the world and I really hate to leave them."

After mentioning that he had only met Casey Stengel, Brooklyn manager, once and that he had never been in the Brooklyn ball park, Earnshaw said facetiously:

"My only regret is that I have but one arm to give to the National League."

Pittsburgh Wins Third In Row From Phillies

Philadelphia, May 15 (AP).—Pittsburgh swept the three-game series with the Phillies today by pounding four pitchers for 19 hits and a 20-to-5 triumph.

In three games here, Pittsburgh, which was said to be in a hitting slump, scored 38 runs and made 50 hits.

Eight Women Remain in Post Golf

"Suicide" Quarterfinals Set This Morning at Congressional.

Mrs. Masten, Conquerer of Mrs. Mackenzie, Wins Again.

THE field in The Washington Post match play handicap tournament at Congressional Country Club narrowed down yesterday to eight women, three of whom are top-notch low-handicap golfers.

Surviving the day's firing were Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, twice former District champion; Mrs. Jack Scott, former Colorado champion, and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, both of the host club; Miss Louise Claytor, of Chevy Chase; Mrs. Howard Simons, of Manor; Mrs. Hume Peabody, of Army and Navy; Mrs. Will Masten, of Washington, and Mrs. G. E. McGinty, of Columbia.

Mrs. Meckley, with a 3 handicap, lowest among the quarterfinalists, shot another 86 in eliminating Mrs. Philip Cole, of Army and Navy, 10 handicap, 4 and 3.

Miss Claytor, 8 handicap, yielded 9 strokes to Mrs. J. R. DeFarges, of Columbia, and won, 8 and 7, without the loss of a hole.

Mrs. Godfrey Beaten.

A 6-handicap player, Mrs. Scott eliminated Mrs. Florence Godfrey, of Beaver Dam, 14 handicap, 3 and 2, after leading 1 up at the turn.

Conqueror Tuesday of the champion, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, Mrs. Mill Masten, of Washington Golf and Country Club, 18 handicap, came back with another display of fine golf, to put out Mrs. Charlotte E. Stern, of Army and Navy, 2 up.

The winner of the low net in the qualifying round, little Betty Keeler, only unattached qualifier, fell before Mrs. Howard J. Simons, of Manor, 3 and 2, in the only real upset of the second round. Mrs. Simons, 12 handicap, gave away five strokes, capturing the tenth, eleventh, fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth to eliminate her 95-pound rival. They were even at the turn.

Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, 1933 Washington Post winner, was relegated to the sidelines after a stirring 18-hole battle with Mrs. McCarthy, who won 2 up. Miss Houghton, 5 handicap, gave away 10 strokes. Four down at one time, the Chevy Chase star fought back gamely, being only one down as they drove off from the eighteenth. Here Mrs. McCarthy knocked a pretty iron approach ten feet to the right of the pin, and sank her putt for a birdie three, while Miss Houghton, short in three, laid her approach stone dead for a par 4.

Finals Tomorrow.

Mrs. Peabody, lone Army and Navy survivor, given three strokes by Mrs. McCook Knox, of Chevy Chase, last year's finalist, won, 2 and 1. Mrs. Peabody played bang-up golf on the back nine. She shot three straight 5s to close out Mrs. Knox on the seventeenth green.

Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood,

Let Primo Foul, Says Joe (Dead Pan) Louis

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Joe Louis, Detroit's brown bomber, will not retaliate with foul for foul if Primo Carnera resorts to his usual questionable ring tactics in their 15-rounder at Yankee Stadium on June 25, Louis emphasized today after his arrival from the Midwest.

"If Carnera uses his usual backhand, forearm and elbow stuff against me, I'll evade it and give him a treatment of short punches," Louis said. "I will not rough him or foul him—I won't have to."

Thus did Louis reply to the big question of his bout with Carnera, the former champion. Thus did the golden-brown youth from the automobile city toss aside a question which many experts fear may cause race riots at their Yankee Stadium meeting.

"The bigger they are—the slower they are," said the young baby-faced brown boy in the double-breasted fawn-colored suit. "Carnera should be easy meat for me, if he uses his big feet, his knees, elbows, forearms and backhands. I'll be inside of him all the time. He'll never have a chance to foul me—any more than he did Maxie Baer."

There'll be no race riots at the Louis-Carnera fight, Detroit's dark destroyer assured at Twentieth Century Club headquarters. Joe Louis, the 21-year-old Negro who has won 18 of his 22 professional fights on knockouts, will see to that.

The Detroit youngster, who has been labeled "Dead Pan," reflected the gamut of emotions with his babylike face as he discussed the approaching bout. He smiled, revealing a row of gleaming white teeth, at mention of Carnera's awkwardness and lack of a straight right-hand punch. But his Oriental,

Dean Brothers Split 2 With Giants

Dizzy Beaten by Homer, but Daffy Cleans Up in Second Tilt.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Bill Terry's Giants managed to sink one-half of the Dean boys today, Big Brother Dizzy, but Brother Daffy was the same old problem and so the St. Louis Cardinals split a double-header before a great week-day crowd of 41,110, losing the first, winning the second, both by 4 to 1 count.

Dizzy and all the Cards had one turbulent inning in the first game, the seventh, when Little Hughie Critz hit his second home run off the lanky right-hander, a feat so astonishing and upsetting to the Cards that they promptly made four errors before the side was out, three runs scoring in all, enough to insure 20-year-old Clydell Castelman his third straight victory for the Giants. Big Dizz allowed only six hits, but Critz alone was too much for him.

With Brother Paul hurling beautiful five-hit ball in the second, the Cards came back to gang Hal Schumacher for four runs in the fourth, when Rip Collins slashed a home run into the upper right field deck with two on. Paul fanned seven, and would have had his shut-out but for the fact that Ernie Orsatti dropped an easy fly ball in right field in the first inning, putting Dick Bartell on second. Bill Terry scored him with a single past third.

The Giants' victory over Dizzy in the first game equaled their entire record against him last year, when he beat them half a dozen times and lost but once, as did Daffy. It was Dizzy's third loss against four victories this season.

Nats Return Unchanged Today

Play Tigers Here With Hadley on Mound; Browns Next.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 15.—The Nats' first road trip under the second regime of Manager Bucky Harris has been either a spectacular success or a full-blown flop. It has all added up to nine victories and eight defeats, which is as close to holding their own as the figures will permit. They left Griffith Stadium April 22 in fifth place, 4½ games behind the lead, and they return there tomorrow in the identical position. Come to think of it, that's quite a trick when you're not half trying to do it.

Manager Bucky Harris has Irving Hadley groomed for the opening game in Washington with the Tigers tomorrow. Manager Mickey Cochrane's pitching choice is not yet certain, but the Nats are not due the same luck they had in Detroit last week when they failed to meet up with either Schoolboy Rowe or Tommy Bridges. Cochrane was saving his big shots for the Yankee series, but the Nats'll be seeing 'em this week.

Anent the recent Walter Stewart-Belve Bean trade, which brought to the Nats the big right-hander from the Indians in exchange for the left-handed veteran, the pressgate attendant at the Cleveland park summed up the deal with fair logic today when the subject was broached.

"It was a fair deal," he said. "Cleveland gets a washed-up pitcher for a fellow who never was any ac-

Chicago Goes on Road in First Place; Three Hits Allowed by Lyons.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 5.—Behind a superb three-hit pitching performance by the veteran Ted Lyons, the White Sox closed their surprising home stay with a neat 5-to-0 shutout victory over Philadelphia. The victory sent last year's cellar occupants on the road to first place.

Lyons retired the first 14 batters to face him, allowed only four men to reach first, and permitted none of them to get any farther. Meanwhile, he and his mates batted Merrit Cain out of the box, sewing up the game in the fourth when Zeke Bonura singled and scored on Manager Jimmy Dykes' single after CLEVELAND, May 15.—The Nats went down three times and came up only twice today with the usual unhappy results of such procedure. Twice they surged up from the sloughs of defeat, but in their third attempt, in the ninth inning, when they were up to their necks in hope, they could only thresh about until the figures of a 5-to-4 defeat closed over them.

They went down fighting—fighting at an umpire's decision that figured in Cleveland's winning run, but in that ninth, when the Indians were inviting them up for the third time, the Nats did not have the wherewithal to take advantage of the opportunity.

For lack of a bunt the game was probably lost. The lack of a bunt had snuffed out a Wash

Castoff Gets Robertson Big Stake

Stands Confused When Discarded Whitney Horse Wins.

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, N. H., May 15.—Owned and trained by the father and ridden by the son, the 4-year-old bay gelding Lynx Eye assured the modest Robertson stable of a season's supply of fodder today by registering a smashing upset victory in the $5,000 added Speed Handicap, the 6-furlong feature of Rockingham Park's opening program.

Because of a last minute conflict of mutuel and post numbers the first-day crowd of 20,000 was thrown into confusion when Lynx Eye breezed home two lengths ahead of A. G. Vanderbilt's Dogmata, which was coupled with Dreel.

Percy M. Pike's Teralice showed a half length in front of his wife's pace-setting Carisbrooke, which jumped to the front after the first few strides and led the pack into the stretch.

Lynx Eye, discarded by the C. V. Whitney Stable in Miami two years ago, was purchased by Robert Robertson, father of the riding Albert, for $1,500. The elder Robertson carefully nursed this not too promising 2-year-old into a capable stake performer last season and today's victory was the boy's fourth triumph in his seven 1935 starts. He was never worse than fifth and trailed only Carisbrooke and Dogmata when he tore into the home stretch.

While adding $4,140 to the Robertson bankroll, Lynx Eye boosted his season's earnings to $6,665 and rewarded his few supporters with $40.90, $13.70 and $6.80 for their win, place and show tickets.

Star Porter, the 2-to-1 favorite, finished sixth, and the second choice, Captain Argo, was ninth.

Members of Mortimer Mahoney's pari-mutuel staff had a difficult session explaining to Dogmata's supporters that their choice was not the winner. The Vanderbilt gelding's mutuel number was 7 and his post position 8. Lynx Eye's betting numeral was 6 and his saddle cloth bore the lucky 7 that flashed on the tote board after the breezed across the line.

H. Styles Bridges, James M. Curley and Louis J. Brann, the chief executives of New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Maine, respectively, were conspicuous in the capacity crowd that wagered a total of $325,310 during the eight-race program.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DELIBERATE, $7.60, $3.30, $3.00; FLAVOR, $3.30, $2.80; DREAM KISS, 15.00.

DELIBERATE, a rapid beginner, drew away into a long lead and though kept under urging through the closing furlong, was never threatened. FLAVOR, unable to keep pace with the leaders early, swung to the outside in the stretch and was going boldly at the end. DREAM KISS, prominent all the way, outlasted BLACK MISTRESS at the finish. BLACK MISTRESS, hard ridden while following in nearest pursuit of the winner for the first half-mile, weakened steadily in the drive. TORITA was unable to keep up. SIGHTING BAR made up some ground. OVER YONDER was in close quarters on the inside through the last three-sixteenths.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won, easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:58½. Winner, A. Hulicoat's b. g. (7), by Inshite—Our Opinion. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:08 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROTEUS, $13.30, $7.40, $5.80; PROSECUTOR, $9.90, $6.60; CONCHITA, $15.30.

PROTEUS, hustled to the front soon after start, drew into a good lead and dominated the running throughout, winning with speed in reserve. PROSECUTOR, in nearest pursuit of the pace, was hard ridden in an effort to reach the leader, but was not good enough. CONCHITA moved up on the inside at the stretch turn and closed going gamely. SQUEEZE OUT, unruly at the post, went well-placed all the way. DANCING MACK, hard ridden, loomed up nearing the stretch, but was unable to improve his position. NIPANTUCK displayed early speed, but stopped badly. NIMULE tired badly.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:37½. Winner, J. U. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPIXI, $8.70, $5.20, $5.00; BACAROLLE, $18.00, $9.90; BELLE GRIER, $10.30.

SPIXI, away well, was sent to the front in the opening quarter-mile, raced RED BADGE into submission in the first half-mile and had enough to hold BACAROLLE safe. The latter, slow to settle into his best stride, moved up leaving the back stretch, found an opening on the inside at the stretch turn, and finished going stoutly. BELLE GRIER, slow to begin, closed with a rush and turned in a sparkling effort. RED BADGE, made a determined bid to keep up with the pacemaker, weakened through the stretch run. DAVOC was well up all the way, though unable to reach the leaders under pressure. SOME GOOD broke fast, but was unable to keep up. VENETIAN lacked speed.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:07. Winner, C. V. Whitney's ch. h. (3), by Transmute—Blessings. Trained by J. A. Healey. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14, 1:40, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SYNOD, $5.40, $4.20, $3.00; COHORT MISS, $5.90, $4.00; SAND BABY, $3.80.

SYNOD worked his way to the lead gradually on the outside, opened up a commanding advantage after wearing down SPEEDMORE, but was hard ridden through the closing furlong to hold COHORT MISS safe. Latter, restrained until last five-sixteenths, came to the outside for the closing test and finished determinedly. SAND BABY, restrained early, moved slowly through the stretch run. FAIR SICKLE, well up, was unable to improve her position in the drive. GUAPITO, a trailer for the first six furlongs, closed with good energy. SPEEDMORE gave a good lead, was rated along under slight restraint and weakened in the closing quarter-mile. HOKUAO faltered badly after going five furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Speed Handicap. Purse, $5,000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:42. Off at 4:49. Winner, R. Robertson's b. g. (4), by Wildair—Spy Glass. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $4,140; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $200. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:12 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LYNX EYE, $40.90, $13.70, $6.80; DOGMATA (entry), $8.30; TERALICE (entry), $5.90.

LYNX EYE was not hurried during the early stages, went into command with a rush and was going away at the finish. DOGMATA, restrained while racing well up, held on gamely under pressure. TERALICE, slow to begin, came with a rush after reaching the stretch. CARISBROOKE displayed good early speed, but was unable to keep pace when pressed. WISE PRINCE never could enter into serious contention. STAR PORTER was in close quarters on the inside through the opening five-sixteenths. PRINCE FOX lacked speed to keep up during the first half-mile, but closed well.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:20. Off at 5:23. Winner, E. A. Shaw's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOV. SHOLTZ, $38.40, $13.70, $3.70; ROUGH PARTY, $6.00, $3.20; PURFIBER, $2.60.

GOV. SHOLTZ was kept in nearest pursuit of the pace, went to the front after reaching the stretch and, hard ridden, had enough left to withstand ROUGH PARTY. Latter, restrained for the first six furlongs while holding to a prominent position, came to the outside in the stretch and finished wearing the winner down. PURFIBER, under slight restraint for the first part, moved up gradually on the outside on the stretch turn and was roused several times and closed fast. TIME FLIGHT drew away into a good lead, but weakened after racing six furlongs. PUNDIT was never a serious factor. TEDDY CARL raced far back all the way.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:50. Off at 5:51. Winner, W. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORALIST, $8.30, $5.20, $3.50; NOCTURNABLE, $7.90, $4.60; LONG BIT, $3.60.

MORALIST followed in close attendance of the pace, disposed of LONG BIT after reaching the stretch, and was hard ridden to just last long enough to stall off NOCTURNABLE. The latter, restrained while holding a prominent position, closed determinedly under punishment in the drive and outfinished the winner at the end. LONG BIT, hustled to the front, was rated along under slight restraint, but weakened in final drive. MIDSHIPMAN, within striking distance of the leaders, faltered in the last five-sixteenths. SAINT KITTS was never prominent. MY BOSS was a trailer all the way.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:21. Off at 6:21½. Winner, H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOUND MONEY, $13.30, $6.10, $4.60; FLYING DERE, $5.20, $4.30; FLAXEN, $7.00.

SOUND MONEY, away well, was permitted to drop back, worked his way up steadily, came to the outside in the stretch and, responding gamely to punishment, was along in the last sixteenth. FLYING DERE, restrained early, began to move up after straightening out on the back stretch, wore down FLAXEN, but was unable to stall off the closing bid of the winner. FLAXEN worked her way into contention gradually and held on stubbornly under pressure. OLAMAY, a trailer until reaching the stretch, closed with a rush on the outside. RAMUS displayed good speed in pacemaking, but faltered in the last five-sixteenths. AXENTEA, well placed early, was unable to keep up under urging.

EASTERN HIGH catapulted a long step nearer its second straight interhigh baseball championship yesterday on a rousing home-run to center field by Pitcher Joe Sullivan, who accounted for three runs on the blow and won his own ball game over Central, 9 to 6, at Eastern Stadium.

The circuit clout came in the fifth inning after Eastern had scored one run to take 5-to-2 lead. With Central still very much in the ball game, Sullivan strode to the plate after having some words with Coach Jack Ray, of Central regarding a close play a few minutes previously, glanced carelessly at his teammates, Joe Crisaful on third base and Al Hebrew on second and then grabbed hold the first pitch from Walter Smith, Central hurler, to pound it into the bushes in left-center for what proved to be the winning runs of the game.

At the same time, the Celtic-faced southpaw won his sixth straight interhigh victory in two years, but it was also the closest escape from defeat that he has had. Central found his port-side slants for a dozen hits with Capt. Shorty Chumbris and his brother, Lefty, accounting for five of them and driving in or scoring five of Central's six runs.

But the Central batting attack failed to offset the damage done by lack of control on the part of Pitcher Smith. The big, right-hander fanned nine Easterners and was nailed for only seven hits, but five of his six walks and a hit batsman resulted in five Eastern runs and gave the Lincoln Parkers the ball game as much as the Sullivan homers did.

Sullivan, though hit much more freely, was effetcive in the pinches, leaving ten Central men stranded on the paths. In the fourth inning he fanned McDonough and Taylor for the last two outs with two men on and whiffed Taylor again in the seventh with two on. His strikeout mark rose to 25 for the two series games this year, 12 falling yesterday.

The big southpaw revealed his true resources in the eighth when Central appeared to be rallying for a victory. Ray Gibson and Shorty Chumbris singled, the latter for his third hit, but Sullivan forced Brick Hayes to tap to him for a force-out at third and then proceeded to fan Smith, who had doubled twice previously, and Lefty Chumbris, who had singled twice. A hit by Hayes, Smith or Chumbris would have put the tying run on base and paved the way for a victory.

It was a duel between two southpaws when Chumbris fanned both all-high stars in their own right, but when the hard-hitting Central star missed Sullivan's slow, tantalizing fade-away for the third strike, the little drama and the ball game were over. It was the best-played contest of the series despite some poor support given Sullivan in the fifth.

Shorty Chumbris' single down the first base line started Central off in the first. Hayes walked and one-baggers by Lefty Chumbris and Don Dunlap scored the first two. The lead was short-lived, however, for walks to Kidwell and Bartoo, a forceout, a single by Al Hebrew, and a passed ball and bad throw by Don Dunlap, Central catcher, gave Eastern a 3-to-2 advantage.

A pass to Bartoo and single by Crisaful and Hebrew brought in another in the third. Bartoo started the fifth inning avalanche by getting hit by one of Smith's pitches. Crisaful walked and Hebrew singled, scoring Bartoo; and then Sullivan delivered the crowning blow, literally and figuratively, with his homer, which Lefty Chumbris and Joe Moran are probably still hunting for in the center field hedge.

An architect's drawing of the College of William and Mary's new stadium, on which construction will begin Monday. The bowl will cost $167,766 and will have a seating capacity of 8,500, which can be increased to 10,000 by erection of temporary seats at each end of the field. It will be pushed to completion in time for the University of Virginia-William and Mary football game in September.

Maryland Wins From Shore Team

Old Liners Defeat Washington College, 7-3, to Avenge Former Loss.

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND'S baseball team got back at Washington College's tossers for a recent defeat by downing the Eastern Sho' team, 7 to 3, yesterday at College Park.

Vic Willis, lanky Old Line pitcher, won his seventh game in eight starts in limiting Washington to five hits. It was Maryland's fourteenth win in 19 starts.

The Old Liners were the first to score, shoving across two runs in the second inning. After Washington had counted a tally in the third, Maryland came back to score four more in the fourth and its last in the eighth. Washington counted its other two runs in the sixth and eighth.

Maryland touched up Hickie Fountain, who stuck on the mound throughout for Washington, for 11 hits. Jack Stonebraker, first baseman, led the Old Line attack, slashing a homer with one on and also getting a single. Dick Nelson, shortstop, came through with a trio of one-basers. Charley Keller, whose prodigious clouting has been a high spot of the campaign, got only one single, an infield hit, and a walk in five tries, but it was the nineteenth game in as many this season in which he has hit safely and he is still clubbing for more than .50.

Three Baseballers Graduate at U. Va

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., May 15.—Only three Virginia baseball regulars will be saying farewell to Lambeth Field when the 1935 Cavalier team plays its last two home games today and Thursday.

The Virginians meet Hampden-Sydney this afternoon and V. M. I. tomorrow. Then they wait until after examinations before they start out again to play Yale, Brown, Amherst and Vermont in June games.

Capt. Orlin Rogers, of Dry Fork, veteran pitcher; Vincent Cardwell, third baseman from Hampton, and Charlie Hooff, of Alexandria, first baseman and outfielder, are the three sons of the Old Dominion who have completed three seasons with the Cavalier nine.

Cumberland Golfers Play to Qualify Today

Cumberland, Md., May 15.—Qualifying play for the annual spring championship golf tournament at the Cumberland Country Club, will start tomorrow and continue through Sunday.

All entries must play their 18-hole qualifying rounds during the four days set aside for that purpose, as the draw for pairings in the various flights will be conducted Sunday evening. All first-round matches must be played by Sunday, May 26, as second round matches are carded for the week beginning Monday, May 27. Dr. Karl P. Heintz, a golfing pioneer here, is defending champion.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

WE had a note from Capt. W. Preston Love, of Solomons Island, this morning, assuring us that trout and croaker fishing was becoming excellent and that all the boats were reporting decent catches. He especially mentioned the Honga River.

Capt. Woodburn also reports plenty of fish, and local anglers apparently need have no hesitancy in making the trip this week if they are so minded.

Some small rock are being caught around the bay these days, and it shouldn't be long ere the big ones start showing up. Plenty have been caught in the Virginia coastal streams, but none of any size have been seen close to the District.

From Benedict, Md., comes the assurance of Capt. W. T. Shorter that croakers are plentiful and that a few trout are also being landed.

Potomac Only Fair.

The Potomac is producing plenty of cats these days and a fair quota of white perch. The stream is still too muddy and swollen by rain for rock.

Joe Fletcher and his son landed 18 nice cats yesterday, 5 of which ran between 3 and 4 pounds. Capt. Joe says that perch are plentiful but that the rock are not biting.

More About Blues.

The blues are still swallowing everything offered to them in the vicinity of Oregon Inlet, N. C., and hundreds of Washington anglers are either down there, returning, or else journeying thuswards in search of sport.

We had dozens of calls yesterday from anglers who had made the trip and we are sorry we can not mention everyone and comment on their hauls.

The editor may strike this out, brother fishermen, but as a matter of fact we hate merely to record that so-and-so caught a flock of fish. We'd rather tell about your troubles with wind and weather, tides and lures.

May we be honest? O. K., then. To us fishing is a matter of pitting one's wits against the unknown. We love wind and tide and sun and moon and weather. We love to catch a fish provided we have fooled him. To us, that is the fun of angling. We could write a full page on the subject, but where would we get?

We are glad to have you call us. When we have reliable dope about this or that place, why, we will be glad to pass it along. When we haven't we will try to be brutally frank. Savez?

The Minnow Situation.

In yesterday's Post, we commented on the fact that seining permits were available at Room 1830, Bureau of Commerce, for use in the Potomac. They are free, but absolutely necessary. This, for use in catching minnows for bait fishing on bass when the season presently opens.

The Bureau of Fisheries has recently made an exhaustive study of the use of minnows for bait. Their findings are printed in the current bulletin of the American Game Protective Association, as well as other publications. The, summary seems to get down to the fact that only 6 per cent are eventually used for the purpose intended—the remaining portion wasted. Thus go young game fish!

Lack of space forces us to be brief and mayhap caustic. If you really love angling, take it from us that it is a whale of a lot more fun to fool a fish with artificial bait than it is with natural foods.

Cadets End Season With 3 Games, Meet

V. M. I. Plays Return Tilts; Sends 9 to Conference.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., May 15.—V. M. I. teams will wind up their spring schedules this week facing the toughest opposition of the season. The varsity ball players will be on a three-day trip playing return games with opponents met earlier, and eight or nine track field men will be competing in the Southern Conference meet at Durham.

On Thursday, Coach Bill Raftery's nine will play Virginia, Maryland will be Friday's foe, and Richmond will be met on Saturday. The Cadets downed the Cavaliers in the opening game of the season, but erred plentifully to drop games at Lexington to the other two teams.

Capt. Temple Ryland and Jim Zimmerman, javelin throwers; Ward Currence and Jim Farley, discus hurlers; Gwynne Tayloe, Hansell Pasco, and Meredith Urick, sprinters, and Nelson Ackerly and Holmes Pettyjohn, quarter milers, are the tracksters that Coach Son Read will enter in the conference meet.

Virginia Defeats Hampden-Sydney

Cavalier Batsmen Make 18 Hits in Slugfest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 15.—Virginia's nine went on a batting spree today, collecting 19 hits off two twirlers, to defeat Hampden-Sydney, 13 to 1. The lone run made by the Tigers was a circuit blow by Shortstop Catmpbell, who had a perfect day at bat, and was sent to the mound in the seventh, after the Cavaliers had pounded Charlie Bernier for a total of 15 hits.

Olin Rogers and Bus Male led at bat for Virginia, each collecting four hits. The former got a home run, and the latter would have been credited with one but for ground rules.

Bud Abbitt, on the mound for Virginia, kept the hits well scattered, and was given excellent support, two fast double plays checking Hampden-Sydney rallies.

Randolph-Macon Beats Handley High on Errors

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 15.—Eight errors played a large part in the defeat of Handley High School by Randolph-Macon Academy of Front Royal here this afternoon, 8 to 3. Schneider, pitching for Handley, struck out four men and held the opposition to eight hits, while five Handley batsmen struck out. Handley made ten hits, McFall, with three hits, and Stone, with two, led the Yellow Jackets' offense, while Smith and Crisman each made two hits for Handley.

Upperville Horse Show Next Event in Fauquier

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., May 16.—The next event on the sporting calendar for Fauquier County, is the Upperville Horse Show, June 14 and 15. The oldest horse show in the Virginia circuit, started as a colt show, and still featuring these classes, Upperville is looked on as the greatest colt show in America.

Stevinson's 73 Stamped Best Medal Score

Veteran Declared Medalist in Invitation Tourney at Chevy Chase.

MILLER B. STEVINSON'S 73 carved out on Tuesday, stood up in the face of yesterday's steady bombardment by the best golfers in Washington and vicinity, and the veteran star was declared medalist in the Chevy Chase Invitation Tournament.

Coming within two strokes of tying Stevinson was Spencer Overton, bespectacled Baltimore golfer, who established himself as a big threat for the title by shooting a 39-36—75.

Four ace District players cracked out 76's each. They were Dick Lunn, former District champion and 1933 invitation winner, with 38—38; Billy Dettweiler, Congressional's 17-year-old sensation, with 39—37; Maj. Dick Sutherland, Army and Navy's seige gun, with a brace of 38's, and Jim Maloney, Congressional's topnotcher, who rallied for a 36 on the back nine.

Pitt Fails to Qualify.

The day's biggest disappointment was occasioned when Harry Pitt, of Manor, former Chevy Chase invitation champion, and winner of all the big events in this section, failed to make the qualifying grade. Pitt missed out by one stroke after he took a sloppy 41 on the first nine, and came home in 39.

Disappointing also was the unexpected and eleventh-hour withdrawal of Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, odds-on favorite. Peacock explained that pressing business at the club, where he is executive manager, forced him to cancel all plans for playing in the tournament. He will compete at Manor next week.

Seventy-nine was good enough to land a place in the select circle of 16, Johnny Brawner, with sixes on the sixth and eighth, and W. Beverly Mason, jr., both of the host club, squeezed in with 79, and Ralph Quinter, jr., also of Chevy Chase, qualified with 77.

Craig McKee, of Indian Spring, and Dr. Larry Otell and Dr. Howard Smith, both of Congressional, made the grade. Dr. Smith, out in 43, made a terrific comeback by scoring a 35 on the back nine with a 5 on the home hole. His 35 was low for that nine.

Louis Fuchs, of Indian Spring, with a 79, withdrew, and Levi Yoder, of the same club, missed out by one shot.

3-County Loop Sees Hurlers In Duel

Brunswick-Walkerville Tilt Is Feature of Five Games in League.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., May 15.—Church Hill defeated Frederick, 11 to 7; Brunswick defeated Walkersville, 2 to 1; Middletown defeated Jefferson, 13 to 5; Damascus defeated Wakefield, 27 to 10, and Mount Airy defeated Cedar Grove, 14 to 11, in the second round of the Tri-County League—Frederick, Carroll and Montgomery Counties. The Brunswich-Walkersville tilt, the best of the day, was a hurling duel between E. Hawes and Warrenfeltz. While both teams made nine hits, Walker's long home run in the sixth inning decided the contest. Walkersvill's lone run came in the eighth on a double by Warrenfeltz and a single by A. Crum. Walker then tightened and held the Glade Valley team hitless the remainder of the game.

Prime Stocks Give Market Steady Tone

Am. Tel. & Tel. Leads the Utilities With Rise of 3 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—Good gains by a few leading equities added a little surface brilliance today to a stock market which was little more than steady in the aggregate.

American Telephone led the utilities with a lift of around 3 points at 119½ as the regular quarterly dividend was ordered by directors. Allied Chemical was a bell-wether for the industrial group as its directors announced that application for permanent exchange registration had been filed. Because of a known reluctance to disclose some of the more intimate details of its business, some speculative quarters had felt a little uneasiness that the step might not be taken.

Rails, oils and metals all found a following at advancing prices, continuing the trend of recent sessions. The silver stocks responded to an advance of 1¾ cents in the bar metal at New York to 76⅝ cents, with lifts of more than a point in leaders for a time, though the gains were in some cases erased at the close.

The stock market was a shade better on balance, as measured by the Associated Press average for 60 stocks, which ended .2 of a point higher at 41.8, but the volume of business contracted a little below the previous session. Turnover in the stock exchange was 1,052,820 shares.

Grains Advance After Setback

Before Rally May Wheat Had Touched New Low for Season.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 15. — Recovering from early setbacks of prices, the grain markets developed late firmness today, influenced by strength of stocks and by some renewal of inflation talk.

Friends of higher prices said the wheat trade had apparently discounted immediate bearish factors. It was also emphasized that a rally of more than 12 cents a bushel had followed declines on April 16, to about today's low point.

After fluctuating within a range of 1¼ cents, wheat closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to ½ cent higher, July, 92⅛ to 92⅜; corn, unchanged to ⅜ up; July, 80⅞ to 81; oats, unchanged to ⅝ off, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 20 cents.

Rallies of grain values began when May wheat established today a new bottom price record for the season. Setbacks to this stage were ascribed to relative weakness of wheat quotations at Liverpool and to reports that rains had improved domestic winter wheat prospects, whereas clearing weather in the Northwest and Canada was facilitating completion of spring crop seeding. On the other hand, silver market advances tended to strengthen wheat values.

Corn and oats mainly reflected the course of wheat prices. Some reports said Illinois corn planting could not be completed until June 1, even with ideal weather. Provisions averaged higher, largely responsive to strength of grains and to closing of spreads against cottonseed oil.

Gen. Motors Reports Highest Truck Month

New York, May 15.—C. E. Dawson, president of General Motors Fleet Sales Corporation, reported today that sales for April exceeded any single month in the history of this division. This follows a record year in 1934, which was the biggest year for this organization, having broken all previous years' sales records. "The fact that April business was the greatest of any single month so far recorded," he said, "is an indication of business improvement among many large organizations in different lines of business, which, it is evident, are buying new passenger cars and trucks to improve and enlarge their service."

Am. Telephone Quarter's Net Lower at $1.61

Compares With $1.77 in 1934 Period; Regular Dividend Declared.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. today authorized the usual quarterly dividend of $2.25 on the capital stock. The distribution will amount to nearly $42,000,000. The dividend is payable July 15 to stock of record June 15.

While the company's income has continued insufficient to meet the requirements for the $9 annual dividend, financial quarters had been reasonably confident that the regular payment would be ordered.

For the quarter ended March 31 net income was $30,097,288, equivalent to $1.61 a share, this compared with $32,992,340 or $1.77 a share in the first quarter last year. Increased labor and operating costs offset the gain in business.

Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation reports for the quarter ended March 31 net income of $5,081,617, equivalent after estimating preferred stock dividend requirements to 28 cents a share on the common stock. In the first quarter last year net income was $5,504,607 or 32 cents a common share.

U. S. Leather Co. reports net profit of $13,701 for the quarter ended April 30. This compares with net income of $45,068 in the April quarter last year.

Columbian Carbon Co. and subsidiaries report for the first quarter net profit of $787,458 after charges, depreciation and taxes, equal to $1.46 a share on the common stock. This compares with $558,000 or $1.03 a share in the same quarter last year.

Postal Telegraph and Cable Corp. reports for 1934 a loss after all interest charges of $1,590,540 as compared with a loss of $1,886,978 for the year 1933.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

Advances	299	295
Declines	269	297
Unchanged	199	194
Total issues	767	786

Stocks—High priced equties registered a few gains while the remainder of the list held barely steady. Utilities, oils and metals predominated in the higher category. Sales for the session were 1,052,820 shares.

Bonds—Majority of the active issues showed little change. Federals continued steady with rails and utilities supplying the widest swings. Sales were put at $10,645,000.

Curb—Alcohol issues were strong in a day of scattered improvement. Some oils were slightly reactionary. Sales approximated 203,000 shares.

Grains—Early setbacks were regained in late trading on stocks strength and inflation talk. May wheat established new low for season but climbed steadily higher afterward. Selling pressure on advances retarded the upturn. Corn and oats moved in substantially the same path as wheat. May wheat closed at 91. May corn at 87¼.

Cotton—Prices were steady in quiet trading and closed at top level. Closes were 3 to 12 points net higher. Foreign offerings and hedge selling drove prices down in early trading. May closed at 11.90.

Sugar—Raw sugar was steady at 3.25, while refined closed unchanged at 5.25 for fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Rio No. 7 closed at 7 and Santos No. 4 at 8¾.

Steel Employes Favor Representation Plans

New York, May 15 (AP). — The American Iron & Steel Institute today stated that preliminary results of an industry-wide survey showed "increasing popularity" of employe representation plans for collective bargaining in the industry.

Active support of such plans was given by 89.1 per cent of the workers in the operating divisions of 101 companies employing more than 90 per cent of the wage earners of steel pay rolls, the institute stated.

New Cigarette Record Estimated for April

New York, May 15 (AP).—Unofficial estimates place April cigarette output at more than 10,200,000,000 which would be the biggest April production in history.

The official figures will be released by the Government in about a week. April production last year amounted to 9,293,630,590.

Many Bankers Refuse to Recognize That They Expand Bank Deposits by Making New Loans, Investments; Confuse Own Problem With Banking System's.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 15.—Considerable misunderstanding is evident, even among bankers, of the significance and causes of the current mounting totals of bank deposits and surplus balances of member banks at the Federal Reserve Banks.

Demand and time deposits of all banks in the country have increased by approximately $1,500,000,000 since the first of the year. About one-third of this rise was caused by Government spending, which has reduced the Government's own deposits with the banks by approximately $500,000,000 since early in January. Another one-third was caused by gold imports, against which new gold certificates have been deposited by the Treasury with the Federal Reserve Banks. The other third was a result chiefly of bank purchases of Government and municipal bonds during the past few months.

The general attitude of a banker towards an increase in his deposits is that he is being entrusted with additional funds which it is incumbent upon him to lend out or invest. The fact that recent weeks have witnessed a steady rise in bank deposits with almost no increase in bank loans and investments, therefore, appears to many bankers to be an abnormal condition that can not last. In fact, the spectacle of rising deposits has caused not a few bank officials to reach the conclusion that they will be forced sooner or later to make long-term capital loans and buy mortgages in order to employ such funds profitably. Therefore, some of them feel there is not much use in opposing the provisions of the pending banking bill which authorize such commitments on an unprecedented scale.

Loans and Investments Create New Deposits.

It is thus common for bankers to overlook the fact that new loans and investments themselves create deposits. When a bank makes a loan, the borrower obtains a new deposit credit, which he proceeds to transfer to others through drawing checks on his bank. When a bank buys an investment, it pays with a cashier's check which, when deposited in some other bank, similarly creates a new deposit. Hence, when a banker makes a new loan or investment, he is doing more than merely putting his own surplus funds to work. He is actually generating new deposits which will go to swell the deposits of other banks, and thus to carry bank credit expansion one step further.

The unit banking system prevalent in the United States has made it more difficult for many bankers to distinguish between the problems of their own individual banks and those of the banking system as a whole. For any one bank, a new loan or investment tends to use up surplus funds. For the whole banking system, on the other hand, new loans and investments merely result in a write-up of new deposits in equivalent amounts, while excess reserves of the banks as a whole are reduced only to the extent that legal reserves are required against these new deposits.

Thus far this year, bank deposits have risen chiefly because of gold imports and the fact that the Government has been drawing down its own deposits. During the balance of the year, however, further sharp increases in bank deposits will probably be seen because of likely bank purchases of new Government bonds on a large scale when the Treasury comes to replenish its cash resources and to raise funds for the work relief program.

Banks Hold Their Future In Their Own Hands.

The future of American banking thus hinges, not on changes in deposits, but rather on the lending and investing policy of the banks. If the commercial banks should make long-term loans and buy mortgage and other investments freely, which the pending banking bill seeks to encourage through broadening of rediscount privileges, then deposits will mount further. The result will be a banking system with an enormous total of deposits, against which the banks will hold relatively frozen assets. They will have to depend primarily upon the reserve banks to turn such assets into cash should depositors lose confidence and begin to make heavy withdrawals, as they did during the 1931-33 period. The testimony of Gov. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board on the pending banking bill before congressional committees would indicate a strong partiality on his part for such a development.

On the other hand, if the commercial banks of the country by and large return to traditional standards of liquidity, in their leading policy, then they will gradually reduce their Government bond portfolio, hold down the amount of their other investments and seek to expand chiefly their commercial loans. Since the demand for commercial loans usually changes only gradually, such a return to more liquid banking would involve a sharp reduction in the total of bank deposits. For example, if the banks were to dispose of half their bonds and mortgages over the next few years, while other assets remained about the same, the result would be a wiping out of some $7,000,000,000 of deposits, thus eliminating virtually all the increase that has taken place since the bank holiday in March, 1933. However, as long as bankers feel impelled to make new loans or investments because they have excess reserves and deposits are mounting, rather than because legitimate demands for self-liquidating loans have arisen, a healthy reduction in the total of bank deposits can not be expected.

Daily Oil Production Rises 125,700 Bbls.

New York, May 15 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United edStates increased 125,700 barrels in the week ended May 11, totaling 2,619,000 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California increased 69,100 barrels to 2,106,500 barrels.

Refineries representing 89.5 per cent of estimated total capacity operated at 69.6 per cent of their capacity.

6 D. C. Bankers Will Attend Group Meeting

R. V. Fleming Heads Local Delegation Going to Manchester, Vt.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Six outstanding Washington bankers have received invitations to the annual convention of the Association of Reserve City Bankers which is scheduled for June 10 to 12 at Manchester Vt., it was learned yesterday.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, heads the group of local members which includes also Joshua Evans, jr., vice president of the Hamilton National Bank; Avon M. Nevius, vice president of the Riggs; Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer of the Riggs; Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary of the American Security & Trust Co., and Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier of the Hamilton.

The Association of Reserve City Bankers is the only national organization of bank officers in the United States, and has a limited membership of 400. The American Bankers Association, other national financial body, is composed of the banks themselves.

Founded in 1912, the association draws its members only from reserve cities. Due to its limited register, membership in the group is considered one of the top honors to be achieved in the banking field.

Announcement of this year's convention, made by the association president, Lyman E. Wakefield, head of the First National Bank of Minneapolis, specifies that it will be stag and that no guests may be invited.

Charles E. Spencer, jr., vice president of the First National Bank of Boston, is chairman of the convention committee. All entertainment and arrangements are being handled by Boston members of the group.

Insurance Sales Off.

New life insurance sales in the United States during April fell 7.6 per cent below the total for April a year ago, cutting the gain for the first four months of the year to 5.2 per cent, according to figures just issued by the Association of Life Insurance Presidents in a report filed with the Department of Commerce.

Companies representing 83 per cent of the total life insurance outstanding in all legal reserve companies sold a total of $733,870,000 of new insurance in the month, as against $794,495,000 in April, 1934.

New ordinary insurance written during April amounted to $468,187,000, compared with $511,915,000 a year ago, a decrease of 8.5 per cent. New industrial policies aggregated $228,188,000, compared with $220,326,000, an increase of 3.5 per cent, while new group insurance amounted to $37,495,000, compared with $62,214,000, decrease of 39.7 per cent.

During the first four months of this year the aggregate of new policies written by the companies reporting amounted to $3,046,862,000, against $2,895,653,000 last year.

New ordinary insurance written during the four months totaled $2,062,299,000, against $1,898,266,000 last year, an increase of 8.6 per cent. Industrial insurance amounted to $868,721,000, against $842,397,000, an increase of 3.1 per cent, while group insurance totaled $115,842,000, against $154,990,000, a decrease of 25.3 per cent.

Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor will address the State Bankers Association of Kansas at Topeka today and the State Bankers Association of New Mexico tomorrow. He left Washington via plane last night.

Charles E. Hood, local representative of the Boston Insurance Co., will hold his annual "Boston Tea Party" for members of his office and of the Underwriters Association at the Blue Ridge Rod and Gun Club on Saturday and Sunday.

Finance Notes.

Holders of first mortgage gold serial bonds from 271 to 1161 of the Riverside Apartment Corporation were notified yesterday by the American Security and Trust Co., trustee, that interest installment from December 1, 1934, to June 1, 1935, will be paid at the bank's main office.

Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, will address the 1935 annual convention of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association on June 5, it was announced here today. The convention will be held at Scranton, Pa.

Robert V. Fleming will be the chief speaker at the annual convention of the South Carolina Bankers Association, being held this week at the Fort Sumter Hotel, in Charleston.

Fidelity Building and Loan Association announced yesterday that 3,322 new accounts had been opened in the last six months. At the same time assets of the association increased by $823,624.94 and loans of $785,350 were granted.

St. Paul Railroad Cuts Directorate

Milwaukee, Wis., May 15 (AP).—Stockholders of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co. in annual meeting today elected a ten-man board of directors. Successors to M. J. Cleary, of Milwaukee; S. H. Fisher and Mark W. Potter, of New York, who resigned, were not named.

The directors elected are Mortimer N. Buckner, Harry E. Byran, Howland S. Davis, Fairman R. Dick, Frederick H. Ecker, Walter W. Colpitts and Robert T. Swaine, of New York; Henry A. Scandrett and W. W. K. Sparrow, of Chicago, and Joshua Green, of Seattle.

Children's Wear Record.

New York, May 15 (AP).—A new record for orders to contractors for infants, and children's knitted garments was set up during the week ended April 27 when 32,938 dozen items were ordered, according to the knitted outwear code authority. Gains were reported in the number of employes, the total pay roll, hours of labor and the average hourly wages.

Newark Won't Pay City Tax Dodgers

Newark, N. J., May 15.—Director of Revenue and Finance Reginald Parnell announced today that all city employes' checks will be held up until they have paid their taxes. In a letter sent to "fellow employes," he says: "Due to the magnificent response made by the taxpayers of this city, the year 1934 established a record for all time in the city of Newark. On and after May 15, therefore, it will be necessary for me to withhold the check of any employe who has not taken care of his 1934 tax obligation."

Weber, Silent Chemical & Dye Head, Retires

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—After 15 years of control of Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation, Orlando F. Weber, chairman of the board, retired today, bringing to a close a regime marked by rigid secrecy concerning the organization's affairs. His position will be filled by H. F. Atherton, president.

With the announcement of Weber's retirement came the decision of the company to apply to the Securities and Exchange Commission for permanent registration of the company's common and preferred shares on the New York Stock Exchange, a step which will involve the disclosure of much information which has hitherto not been revealed.

The company announced that Weber's decision to retire had been reached "long previously in order to free himself from all administrative responsibility as soon as he could do so without impairment of the efficiency of the company's management." Weber himself declined to comment.

His closest associates said that they did not know what plans Weber has for the future. The statement made it plain, however, that he would not withdraw entirely from the company's affairs.

He never gave interviews and never made speeches, his associates said. His only hobby is said to be reading of philosophy. At 55 he retires from the top place in one of the country's largest corporations as one of the least publicized officials ever to figure in the industrial scene.

Consolidated Oil Is Reorganized

Board of 24 Directors Cut to 15.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—A reorganization of the Consolidated Oil Corporation board was approved by the stockholders today. Ten members retired and one new director, O. M. Gerstung, was elected. The board consists of 15 members against 24 previously.

H. F. Sinclair, chairman of the executive committee, told the stockholders he was hopeful the company will be in a position to consider dividends at the end of the half-year. The company has made a profit for each month so far this year, he said.

He revealed that the interest on the $40,000,000 bank borrowings in connection with the refunding plan would run from 2 to 3 per cent and said that by retiring the outstanding bonds the company will effect an interest saving of about $2,000,000 annually.

National Biscuit Cuts Dividend on Common

New York, May 15 (AP).—National Biscuit Co. has declared a quarterly dividend of 40 cents on the common stock payable July 15 to stock of record June 14. The company had paid 50 cents quarterly since July, 1934, and prior to that time the rate was 70 cents quarterly.

Directors of the Kennecott Copper Co. today declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on the capital stock payable June 29 to stock of record June 7. A similar amount was paid in the previous three quarters.

Bond Market In Doldrums; Changes Slight

Rails Helped by Coming Message From the President.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—The bond market was unable to make up its mind which way to go today and the majority of active issues showed little change from the previous day. United States Governments continued steady.

Although there were a number of wider swings in rails and utilities, other groups reflected the absence of special developments by remaining in a strictly trading area of less than a point either way. The Associated Press averages remained unchanged for all groups except the utilities, which advanced .1 of a point to 93.5.

Announcement that President Roosevelt would have his transportation message ready for Congress this week served to stimulate interest in carrier bonds but buyers and sellers were in most instances not far apart in the matter of price.

Utilities were not greatly distressed over the statement of P. H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives, that the Wheeler-Rayburn bill in its present form contains all the "destructive" features of the original draft.

Transfers aggregated $10,645,000, par value, compared with $11,531,000 on Tuesday.

Cotton Closes At Higher Level

Advance Is Checked at 11.98 for March Option.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 15.—Cotton ruled steady in quiet trading today. There was price fixing in old crop months and buying through commission houses, credited partly to the producers' pool, in forward positions. Final prices were 3 to 12 points net higher.

There was light, scattered liquidation in May influenced by issuance of a few additional notices. Hedge selling and foreign offerings were reported early in the session, but prices gradually rallied from around the previous closing levels in the later trading. The market again showed resistance around the 12-cent level and the advance was checked at 11.98 for March.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable oil was strong today on covering and commission house buying. It was reported that a bill was up in Congress to tax imports of oil used in the manufacture of oleomargarine 10 cents a pound.

Strength of lard and firmness of crude oil as well as the new highs for hogs were also factors in the advance. The market closed 10 to 30 points net higher. Sales were 95 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; May closed 10.65, July 10.77, September 10.83, October 10.83, December 10.75.

Maryland Receipts Tax Yields $332,857 Total

Annapolis, May 15 (AP).—Returns from the 1 per cent gross receipts tax mounted to $332,857.98 today as an additional $26,729.09 was run through the adding machines of the collection office.

The total was made up of $280,791.06 received from the tax proper and $52,066.82 from the 1 per cent automobile titling tax, of which $31,850.43 was paid during April.

Heavier Chemical Purchases.

New York, May 15 (AP).—One of the largest chemical companies is reported to be leaning to the view that raw material prices are headed for higher levels and purchasing agents have been instructed to buy raw materials farther ahead and in larger quantities than has been the custom in the past.

Railroads Buying Equipment.

New York, May 15 (AP).—Railroad equipment circles hear that the Norfolk Southern Railroad Co. is considering the purchase of 500 boxcars. The Akron, Canton & Youngstown System has purchased 7,500 tons of rails from the Carnegie Steel Co., a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corp.

Nats to Return Unchanged Today

count. What's all the moaning about?"

Bean's record this season has been nothing short of outstanding. He has pitched two balls for the Indians. The first one, Tony Lazzeri knocked out of the lot with the bases full for a home run, and the second one George Selkirk smashed against the fence for a double, whereupon Manager Walter Johnson got Bean out of there in the fear that he would get hurt.

Bobby Burke's batting average on the Nats' road trip surpasses his pitching average by almost 100 points. Since going the route in Philadelphia back on April 23, Burke hasn't been able to win a ball game. After losing a 2-0 battle to Lefty Gomez in Yankee Stadium he has been knocked from the box successively by the White Sox, the Tigers and the Indians.

That home run Heinie Manush socked today was only the fourth made by the Nats since the season started. The figures explain some of the reasons why the Nats are not in the first division. In contrast to the club's four homers, enemy batters have pounded Washington pitchers 13 round-trip wallops this season, driving in 25 runs with homers alone. The Nats have scored seven runs on homers this year, which are not many at all, at all.

The Nats' batting averages since leaving home, like the results of their ball games, have been just fair. Jake Powell, the only member of the line-up who was on trial when the club left Washington, has made Bucky Harris revise his estimates with a batting average that led all the rest. Powell compiled a .370 figure with his 25 hits in 67 times at bat.

Other batting figures of the Nats since they took to the road are rather illuminating. For example: Johnny Stone, .316; Cecil Travis, .305; Buddy Myer, .299; Heinie Manush, .293; Cliff Bolton, .274; Joe Kuhel, .227; Lyn Lary, .232; Red Kress, .250; Fred Sington, .250, and Ossie Bluege, .000. One may thus draw one's own conclusions.

Whereas there were five steady jobs when the Nats embarked on their first invasion of the West, only four remain—Buddy Myer's, Heinie Manush's, Cliff Bolton's and Jake Powell's. Red Kress, on the suspicion that he can hit, is ready to step into either Lyn Lary's job at shortstop or Joe Kuhel's post at first base against left-handed pitching, Ossie Bluege will replace Cecil Travis against left-handers and Fred Sington is apt to shove Johnny Stone out of right field when southpaws are facing the Nats.

The Nats still have one boast to make. Nobody has hit a home run against them with the bases full. The bases have been emptied so often by singles, doubles and triples that the home run hitters haven't had a chance to do their stuff with three on.

At this writing, the Nats have yet to win a game from the White Sox or the Indians, to whom they have lost two each. Their record against the Yankees is 1 victory in 3 games; against Philadelphia, 4 victories in 5 games; against Boston, 3 in 6; against Detroit, 1 in 2; against St. Louis, 2 in 2. Thus simple arithmetic gives us 11 victories and 11 defeats, which is only half bad.

When the Nats resume at Griffith Stadium tomorrow, they will be confronted with the champion Detroit Tigers as their first opponent, with fifth place at stake. In order, the Browns, the White Sox and the Indians will be met in four-game series, with the Yankees then due in Washington for three games.

MOST famous of all cedars are the Cedars of Lebanon. In the time of Solomon the number of these trees must have been tremendous, for it is recorded that 80,000 hewers were employed to cut wood for his temple. Not only Solomon but others of his period and later made such serious inroads in the great groves that it was feared the trees would disappear altogether. Hadrian, the Roman Emperor, took steps to rescue the cedars in 125 A. D., but even though his warnings were posted high and far the destruction continued. Today there are to be found only a few scattered groves, the largest containing no more than about 400 trees.

In the heat of summer buffalos shedded their hairy coats to such an extent that parts of their bodies became quite bare and exposed to the stings of mosquitoes and other insects. In self-defense the huge animals wallowed in shallow puddles of mud in an effort to cover the exposed parts. In the absence of mud puddles they resorted to scratching themselves against the nearest suitable object. Rocks can today be seen that were worn smooth by the animals and when telegraph poles were set up to carry lines across the plains the buffaloes lost no time in making ready use of them. The destruction became so terrific that spikes were driven into the poles to protect them. This however, though it did give some protection to the poles, seemed on the other hand, to give added pleasure to the buffaloes.

Nats Lose, 5-4, To Indians; Trip Ends

It was at this point that Red Kress, ordered to bunt, failed miserably twice and then hit into a force play at third base. Bucky Harris sent Fred Schmulte in to pinch hit for Jack Russell and he removed all the tenseness from the situation by the simple method of hitting into a game-ending double play started by Shortstop Roy Hughes.

Manush Hits Homer.

Against Oral Hildebrand, the Nats had pecked away at the two-run lead the Indians had gained off Bobby Burke in the first two innings and Heinie Manush's first home run of the year, a whistling wallop over the high right-field wall, finally tied the score in the sixth, but the Indians came up with two more in their half of the inning to take a 4-2 lead.

Big Ab Wright, the Indian's rookie outfielder from Minneapolis, where he won all the right-handed slugging honors in the American Association last year, had a large afternoon today, personally driving in three of the Indians' runs, and scoring two himself. It was his homer over the right-field fence in the second inning that had given the Tribe its second run.

It was Wright's triple to left center field after Hale had walked with two out that was the pivotal blow in the Indians' two-run uprising against Burke which gave them a 4-2 lead in the sixth, and it was his long fly to center that eventually drove in the winning run in the eighth.

Hildebrand had set the stage for the Nats to tie the score in the seventh when he walked Powell and Kress, but Burke, instructed to bunt, could only strike out. Whereat Buddy Myer whacked a long double high against the right field fence. Powell scored and Kress was snuffed out at the plate on Hughes' relay from Wright, because Powell neglected to take Catcher Pytlak out of the play at home. Kress, who had started running long before Powell, was only 10 feet behind when Powell crossed the plate, but the later permited Pytlak to reach over him and tag Kress as he came in.

The score was tied at 4-4, though, when Stone singled through the box to drive Myer home.

Indians Win in Eighth.

Came the eighth, and the Indians won the ball game. With one out, Trosky drove a sharp drive inside first base to right field and raced to second. Stone heaved the ball to Myer who tossed to Kress at second and the heavy-footed Trosky slid into the bag, apparently out, but Umpire Bill McGowan ruled otherwise. The entire Washington infield rushed to the secen, upbraiding McGowan with the usual futility.

With the right-handed hitters of the Tribe due at the plate, Harris removed Burke in favor of Russell and Hale saluted him with a single off the pitcher's foot that bounded into Kress' hands too late for a play, Trosky going to third whence he scored on Wright's long fly.

Then of course, came the ninth, and sad it was to relate.

A double by Luke Sewell and a single by Lyons added two more runs. Two more runs were scored in the eighth, the feature of the splurge being Bonura, who stole third and then raced home on a double steal. The thefts were his first since donning a major league uniform.

PROPOSALS

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, May 7, 1935. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 309, District Building until 2 O'CLOCK P. M., E. S. T., JUNE 4, 1935, and then publicly opened, for furnishing and installing Sewage Pumping and Equipment, for a Sewage Treatment Plant at Blue Plains, D. C. (Unit No. 3). A more complete description of the work and full information for bidders is given in the drawings, specifications, and in other contract papers, which may be obtained at the office of Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building, upon deposit of a certified check, payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., in the sum of $100, to insure return in good condition. Not more than three complete sets of drawings, specifications and contract papers will be furnished to any one general contractor. No proposal will be accepted unless accompanied by a guaranty of not less than five per cent (5%) of the amount of the bid in the form of a certified check made payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., U. S. Bonds, or the bond of an approved surety company. Security for the faithful performance of the work shall be in the form of a surety bond in the penal sum equal to the estimated total contract price. A labor bond in an amount equal to the largest estimated aggregate pay roll for any one month, is required. Public liability insurance in the sum of $5,000 and $10,000 is also required. The work called for by this proposal is to be performed in accordance with an agreement dated October 18, 1934, between the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works and is subject to the provisions of Title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act and the Rules and Regulations prescribed by the President and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. The Director of Reemployment for the District of Columbia is Edgar B. Young, 480 Indiana avenue northwest. No bid will be considered unless accompanied by the bidder's certificate of compliance, properly executed, to the effect that the bidder is complying with and will continue to comply with each applicable code of fair competition, or in the absence of such code or codes, with the President's Reemployment Agreement. Copies of this certificate may be obtained at Room 427 District Building. The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any and all proposals and to waive informalities as they deem best for the interest of the District of Columbia. Final award of contract is subject to approval of the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates prescribed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works must be paid on this project. mr8,9,10,15,16,17

Mae West Cross-Examination.

Q.—Miss West, did you ever see this man before?

A.—Not to the worst of my recollection, judge.

• • • •

Q.—The plaintiff says he met you in vaudeville years ago.

A.—I'm no chicken, but I'm not old enough to remember away back when the country had vaudeville.

Q.—That isn't very long ago, Miss West, is it?

A.—If you don't think so just ask a ventriloquist or a Japanese acrobat.

• • • •

A.—Well, he certainly is giving me a part in his act now.

A.—Not unless it was one of those mesmerisms next-to-closings.

• • • •

Q.—Did you ever know any Wallace?

A.—I knew the old song about Wallace.

Q.—What song was that?

A.—Wallace Me Around Again, Willie.

• • • •

Q.—Did you ever live on Manhattan Island?

A.—I spent some of the best years of my life in the courts there.

Q.—What for?

A.—The authorities didn't like my Broadway plays. They raided them as detrimental to the public morals.

Q.—What did the courts do to protect the public morals?

A.—They put me in pictures where I would reach more children.

• • • •

Q.—Miss West, were you in "The Covered Wagon?"

A.—In New York during those raid days I was in it often, and so were the members of my cast.

• • • •

Q.—Miss West, have you anything against matrimony?

A.—Yes, just as in this case, somebody is always reminding you of it.

So, Ivan, you made yourself owner here after setting me, who tried to make a man of you, adrift in an open boat, eh?
Mr. Ward...Ches....let me explain...Ches....all I ask....one more chance. Just one, Ches!

The Game of Life

By Priscilla Wayne.

Ellen Mallory married Michael Dale despite her mother's strenuous objections. Mrs. Mallory begged Ellen not to forsake her job at the office or her promising career in tennis, but because Mike insisted that she give up both, Ellen bowed to her husband's wishes. But Ellen goes back to her job to help pay her mother's debts, and that act of independence forces the young couple apart. One night Ellen accidentally discovers Mike with her old rival, Marjorie Hutton, and refuses to let him explain. She goes home to her mother. Not knowing that Mrs. Mallory has refused to let Mike see her or phone her, Ellen listens to her mother's advice to get a divorce.

SO they had gone down to Theodore Hardesty's office. "You've decided that you must have a divorce?" he asked her not unkindly, appraising her with his keen, shrewd eyes.

Mamma did the talking. "Yes, the sooner the better. And the less publicity about it, too."

"That goes without saying," Mr. Hardesty agreed. "I think it can be managed. You'll ask alimony, of course?"

"Yes, of course," mamma assented.

"You're making a grave mistake," Mr. Hardesty explained. "You can get it easily enough. He may not be making a great deal now—just starting out in his business, but Mike Dale has real business sense. He'll be a well-to-do man. Better not do anything you will regret."

Ellen faced them squarely. "I'd regret to the very day I died if I took one cent from Michael Dale. No—I don't want any of his money."

Easy to Be Generous.

"All right," mamma agreed. It was easy enough to be generous about refusing money that Mike Dale didn't have and probably wouldn't ever have.

"You'll want your maiden name restored to you?"

Mamma aswered immediately. "Yes. The name Ellen Mallory will be famous some day."

"It's already had considerable fame," Mr. Hardesty complimented. "I thought you'd keep on playing tennis. I looked for you to bring national honors to Fairhaven with your tennis playing."

"She will yet," mamma said complacently.

"All right now"—with legal precision—"let's set out the details of this bill. Of course the grounds will be cruel and inhuman treatment?"

"But Mike—Mike never said an unkind work to me—in his life—" Ellen faltered. "Oh, no—no—I—why, it wouldn't be fair to call it that."

Mental Cruelty Charged.

"All right." The attorney evidently had several causes for divorce in his bag of tricks. "Call it mental cruelty then."

"Yes, that's right. He neglected her." Mama supplied this bit of information.

The attorney pondered the statement. "That's queer, too. I always thought of Michael Dale as being a pretty straightforward fellow. Doesn't seem as though any man would neglect a wife like you," he gazed at Ellen in flattering fashion.

Ellen wanted to scream out loud. To tell this attorney, to tell the whole wide world that Michael had not neglected her, that she loved him and that she'd never again live a happy day without Michael.

Mother Was Firm.

But Rose Mallory took things firmly in her own hands. "Call it mental cruelty. He negleeted her. He left her alone night after night. And," with vicious finality—"if you need any more there's a corespondent in the case.

"He's been running around with that Hutton woman. Ellen's stood all she can stand. You can see for yourself that she's almost broken hearted. She's taken his neglect and abuse for six months. It's undermined her health. Why, she looks 10 years old than the day she married him."

In her heart Ellen knew that last statement was true.

"We won't need to bring the other woman into it," Mr. Hardesty decided. "It would give the newspapers chance for more publicity and make it just that much more embarrassing. No, we'll call it mental cruelty. I'll have the papers served on him this afternoon and I think I can get it brought up the first thing next week when court opens. Lucky we won't have to wait."

Mr. Hardesty Thinks.

Mamma thanked Mr. Hardesty effusively. Peering nearsightedly through his thick lensed glasses he could see that Rose Mallory was a presentable, youngish sort of woman.

"Pretty little thing," he told himself. "She and her daughter have had hard luck with their men." He spoke aloud—"Let's see, Tom Mallory's been dead a dozen years or more, hasn't he?"

"Yes," Mamma sighed, wiping her eyes with her dainty handkerchief.

"And it seems a long, long time—long and lonely years."

"Who knows better than I?" Mr. Hardesty sighed. And after the two women had left, his office seemed somehow big and formal and lonely. Theodore Hardesty had loved his wife. Every room of the great house he had built for her and which she hadn't lived to enjoy long still seemed to speak eloquently of her presence.

Took Her Possessions.

Maybe it would have been different if there had been children. But because he was all alone, Theodore Hardesty had drawn more deeply into the shell of his own reserve. He had a reputation for being a woman hater—a reputation he scarcely deserved.

The next afternoon Ellen went alone to the little house in which she had lived for so short a time with her young husband.

Mamma had agreed that this would be the time for her to get her clothing. "You have a key and Michael won't be home. But you promise me," mamma demanded, "you promise me that after you've packed your things you'll come right home."

"I promise——" but Ellen knew that no other place than the little house would ever be home again to her.

Hated the Place.

"I'd go with you," mamma said quite truthfully, "but I've always hated the place. It robbeed me of you. Yes, I've always hated the place."

But Ellen hadn't hated the place. She went through the rooms of the little house slowly, reverently—as one views for the last time the features of one loved and dead. Here was the little kitchen with its gay red and white checked curtains. Ellen had made them and Michael, proud of his wife's artistic ability, had helped her put them in their place.

Yes, the kitchen was almost the dearest spot of the little home. She pushed the white stool back slowly. Mike had always perched on it, watching her as she cooked. How young and how absurdly boyish he had always appeared, with one of her aprons tied about his waist—and he was always catching her in his arms, coaxing for another kiss—while she pretended to struggle and say that she couldn't be always kissing a man while she cooked.

A Dreary Duty.

And as she went drearily through the little rooms how could Ellen know that even that minute her young husband, white faced, trembling, was hastening home—home to the only refuge he knew?

A deputy had just served Ellen's divorce proceeding papers upon him—and the sight of them had left him grim lipped and trembling.

In his heart Michael had hoped against hope that Ellen would come back to him, that at least she would give him a chance to explain.

There was plenty to explain, he admitted, sick at heart.

Marjorie Hutton had first pretended that she wanted to buy a car. Only whatever patron saint watches over automobile salesmen in slim times knew how badly Mike Dale needed to sell cars—even to girls like Marjorie Hutton.

Unfortunate Meeting.

And then, when he had suspected that Marjorie had less interest in buying a car than in being with this particular car salesman Michael had tried desperately to elude her.

Forced into showing her the car for the fourth and last time Michael had been in the very act of telling her that he couldn't ever see her again, that he never wanted to see her again—when Ellen had walked into Pete's Chicken Shack on that bitter evening.

"I'm going away," Marjorie had told him as he hurried her home that night. "I'm sorry, Mike dear, but I—I couldn't be blamed for loving you. Love, Mike—just goes where it will."

He had patted her hand, in brotherly fashion. "I'll love Ellen as long as I live, Marjorie," he had explained again as he had before. "But she's talented. It's hard for her to bury her ambitions—just to be my wife."

A Brilliant Woman.

"How could she help but love you more than anything else in all the world, Mike?"—and Marjorie's young heart was bitter with the thought of it.

"She's a brilliant woman, Marjie—she's going to be famous and rich. But I'll love her—love her until the day I die."

Michael was thinking of these things as he hurried home that afternoon.

He wanted to be home—inside the four walls of that little place that had once seemed heaven to him, to ponder what next he could do.

Ellen was suing him for divorce—he must see her—he must beg her——

Michael opened the door—slowly—

His pounding heart told him that Ellen was inside the little house.

To Be Continued.

Fever Ban Off For Middy Hop Saturday Night

Two New Cases Reported in County; Inoculations Given Freely.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 15.—The precautions against scarlet fever in effect at the Naval Academy will extend through the week-end, but will be lifted sufficiently to allow the senior class midshipmen to hold a dance Saturday night.

Two new cases of fever were reported today in Anne Arundel County, running the number that have developed since May 1 to 26. One of the new cases was in Annapolis and the other in the upper county.

The medical department of the academy is testing midshipmen for their immunity to scarlet fever. Those found to be susceptible are being inoculated.

A similar test is being given the children of officers living on the reservation, and the medical authorities are guided in the inoculation by the wishes of the parents. It was pointed out that about 50 per cent of the children were found to be immune.

The regulations in effect at the academy simply prohibit the midshipmen from attending places of public entertainment or amusement indoors or gatherings in closed places. The athletic games and ordinary routine of the institution is unchanged and there are no restrictions on visitors.

The precautions, which keep the middies out of stores and homes in Annapolis, were adopted to prevent the slightest possibility of the fever interfering with the June week ceremonies.

Lisa Gardiner Dancers Give Program Saturday

Sponsored by the Community Center department, the Lisa Gardiner Dancers will give their spring program on Saturday night in Roosevelt Auditorium. Among the ensemble numbers will be a mazurka danced by eight couples, a group of Spanish folk dances, a suite of divertissements to music of Chopin, Drigo's "Pizzacato," and Beethoven's "Moonlight" sonata.

Miss Gardiner will dance a Habanera to music composed by Mary Howe, and will be assisted by Howard Whitfield in an old-fashioned polka. Other solo dances include Rubinstein's "Valse Caprice," danced by Mary Day; "La Lagarterana," a provincial Spanish dance, by Eda Vomachka; "Flames," by Alice Louise Hunter, Chopin's "Butterfly" etude by Fillis Speich, and a Mexican Jarabe, by Greta Ruth Atkin.

The accompanists will be Edith H. Hunter, Cotten Skinner and Cornelia Johnson, the latter two being artist pupils of Katherine Frost, of the King-Smith School.

Middle End-Play.

An end-play does not have to come at the end of a hand. Quite frequently one of the defending players is thrown in as early as the fourth or fifth trick and is forced to make a lead which will give the declarer a trick which he could not otherwise have won. South, the declarer on the deal below, seemingly had four losers unless he could win an indirect finesse against a missing King. This card was located badly for the declarer, but he still fulfilled his contract by clever play.

West, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable

	♠ Q 8 5 2 ♡ K 9 5 3 ◇ A 8 ♣ K 8 3
♠ 9 7 4 ♡ 10 7 4 ◇ 10 7 4 3 ♣ J 7 4	N W E S	♠ K J 10 ♡ J 8 ◇ K Q J 6 2 ♣ Q 6 2
	♠ A 6 3 ♡ A Q 6 2 ◇ 9 5 ♣ A 10 9 5

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1◇ (1)	1♡ (2)
Pass	3♡	Pass	4♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A rather weak bid, made partly for lead-directing purposes.
2—A takeout double would probably be better.

The Play.

Against the four-heart contract West opened his fourth-best diamond. South immediately realized he would have his work cut out for him as from the bidding the spade King was almost certainly held by East. However, South proceeded by winning with the diamond Ace in dummy and then drew three rounds of trumps, ending up in dummy with the King.

The eight of diamonds was now led, and East, not knowing who held the ten, felt compelled to go up with a high honor. East, after winning the diamond lead, was in a bad position. Either a club lead or a spade lead would give the declarer a trick and a diamond would provide a ruff and discard. East finally decided to lead the Jack of spades hoping against hope that his partner held the Ace or that the declarer would be bluffed out of letting the lead ride around to dummy's Queen.

South, of course, played low from his hand and won with the Queen in dummy. He then led a low spade to his Ace and another low spade, and East found himself thrown in again. This time East had only two choices. He could lead a diamond, giving the declarer a ruff in his own hand and a discard of a losing club in dummy, or he could lead a club, which would give the declarer a second-hand finesse to avoid the loss of a trick in that suit. South finally made five-odd on a hand which seemed difficult for four.

Comment.

Even after incorrectly going up with the diamond Jack, East, by exiting with another diamond, deliberately giving a ruff and discard, could have held the contract to four. Perfect play by the declarer would have insured four-odd even had East permitted the low diamond lead at trick 5 to ride around to his partner's ten. West's best shift at that point would have been a spade. The declarer could duck in dummy and permit East's ten to hold the trick, deliberately withholding his Ace. No return by East at this point could prevent the declarer from making all the rest of the tricks but one.
